17 Years Prison for Killing Wife

Sang Kim also faces deportation, civil suit.

By Bonnie Hobbs Centre View

t may never be known exactly what made Sang Byung Kim fly into a rage last summer and brutally murder his wife.

He says he can't remember killing her. And although they'd previously separated and filed for divorce, the Centreville couple had just reconciled and decided to stay married.

But on the Fourth of July 2007, Sang Byung Kim placed a 911 call and told authorities, "My wife die, my wife die. I killed her, I killed her." And on Aug. 22 in Fairfax County Circuit Court, he was sentenced to 17 years in prison.

Kim, now 47, and his wife, Hae Ja Lee, 43, lived in the 13600 block of Sweet Woodruff Lane in the Fair Crest community. But these gentle-sounding names belied the horrendous scene police found when they arrived at the home.

There was Lee, lying on the kitchen floor in a pool of blood. She'd been stabbed 31 times and had sustained 15 other abrasions and lacerations. A former sushi chef, Kim met police at the front door, holding two knives.

Married in October 2001, the couple moved from New York to Centreville in 2004 to be closer to her relatives. But a month after their wedding, Kim was severely injured in a car accident that nearly took his life and drastically changed his personality.

He broke several bones, incurred a severe head trauma and lost the sight in his left eye. He was also in a coma for nearly three weeks. Afterward, said his nephew, Henry Park, Kim "wasn't the same guy. The head

Centreville Woman Assaulted

Fairfax County police are looking for two men who reportedly assaulted a Centreville woman last Wednesday, Aug. 27, around 9:30 p.m. in Falls Church. The victim, 23, was walking in a parking lot in the 2900 block of Willston Drive when two men called out to her that she dropped something.

She turned around and was grabbed by one of them. She struggled and was able to break free after kicking him. The woman then ran to her car and called police after returning home. She did not require medical treatment.

The suspects were both described as Hispanic and in their 20s. The primary one was about 5 feet and 150 pounds, with dark hair. He wore a dark-colored T-shirt and blue jeans. The second suspect was about 5 feet and 130 pounds. He wore shorts and a

Gamarra-Cavero Pleads Guilty

In February, Fairfax County police charged five people — including Angel Arturo Gamarra-Cavero — in connection with several thefts from members at Life Time Fitness in Centreville. Now, Gamarra-Cavero, 19, of 7642 Chadds Landing Way in Manassas, has pleaded guilty to grand

Gamarra-Cavero

Police said 21 thefts were reported at Life Time Fitness between August 2007 and Feb.

7, 2008. In each case, someone's property was stolen from his or her locked locker. Stolen items included iPods, BlackBerries, cell phones and a diamond ring.

An investigation allegedly led to a family employed by the fitness facility. And on Feb. 25, police charged Gamarra-Cavero, with grand larceny. He pleaded guilty, Aug. 19, in Circuit Court. Judge Jonathan Thacher then set his sentencing for Dec. 12.

Quick Pleads Guilty To Selling Narcotics

A Centreville teen pleaded guilty in court last week to two counts of selling narcotics. He is Joshua Quick, 18, of 6304 Hidden Canyon Road in Centreville's Pleasant Hills community.

On Jan. 30, Fairfax County police charged him with three counts of possession with intent to distribute heroin. But on July 23, in General District Court, these charges were dropped.

However, on March 7, police also charged Quick with two counts of possession with intent to sell schedule one or two drugs. He was then indicted on both charges by the Aug. 18 grand jury.

A week later — last Monday, Aug. 25 — he pleaded guilty to both offenses in Circuit Court. Judge Paul Sheridan then scheduled his sentencing for Nov. 20.

Drug Charge to Grand Jury

The case against a 25-year-old Chantilly man charged with distribution of marijuana is moving forward in the legal system. He is Ryan Moran of 13244 Custom House Court in the Chantilly Farms community.

An undercover, Fairfax County police detective detailed the case against him in a June 20 affidavit. He wrote that, during May, he learned that Moran was allegedly selling marijuana in this county.

He also noted marijuana buys reportedly made from Moran at his Chantilly home, during the weeks of May 18, May 25 and June 18. Police arrested Moran on June 20 and charged him with one count of distribution of marijuana. He appeared last Monday, Aug. 25, in General District Court and, at that time, Judge fter six years as seventh-grade assistant principal at Stone Middle School, Scott Phillips began this school year as its principal. He took over July 1, replacing retiring principal Ken Gaudreault.

Scott Phillips takes the helm at middle school.

Phillips, 41, learned the good news in early May and was relieved to hear it because the selection process took so long. "So I was getting nervous," he said. "I was also proud of myself, and my mom was very excited. My father passed away when I was 17, and I know he'd be proud, too."

Born in Pittsburgh, Phillips was raised in a nearby farming community called 84, after the 84 Lumber company. He obtained both a bachelor's in English and a master's in education from Allegheny College in Pennsylvania. He also received a master's in educational leadership from GMU in 2001.

He and his wife Amanda and sons Holden, 6, and Carter, 4, live in Ashburn. Prior to their birth, she was a special-education resource teacher at The Chantilly Academy. And in Phillips's spare time, he belongs to an Oldsmobile club and enjoys restoring or Centreville Elementary, 2008 is a banner year. Although it's been housed in different buildings, the school's been in continuous operation since 1878 and, this year, will celebrate its 130th anniversary.

"We're going to have students interview former students and make a digital history to keep," said Principal Dwayne Young. "We're also trying to redecorate our conference room with photos of old Centreville. As Centreville changes, we want to retain our history."

The school on Green Trails Boulevard is also marking a milestone of its own. It was built in 1994 so, in 2009, it'll be 15 years old. And Young takes the school's connection to Centreville seriously.

"We really want our school to be the hub of our community, and we'll do what we can to make that happen," he said. "Our mural says, 'Building a future for our community and a community for our future,' so we're going to tie it into both of our celebrations."

Young's also looking forward to the new school year. "It's always fun when everyone comes back," he said. There'll also be more students, teachers and classes. Centreville ended the last school year with 868 students, but is now edging toward 880-900. It had four kindergarten classes last year, has five now and, said Young, "We're nudging toward a possible sixth."

The school has 12 new staff members, including new teachers in grades two, three and five. "All of our grade levels each have five teachers now, which is good for us," said Young. "We've really worked to keep the class numbers in the low- to mid-20s."

Centreville also has a new, enhanced, autism class for grades Kfour, along with a new instructor for it. This class is for the students who'll be partially mainstreamed into the school, depending on each student's needs. "It's our third year for preschool autism and we really want these kids to be able to remain in our school and not go outside the school-boundary areas," said Young. "This keeps our kids in their community school."

IN ADDITION, Centreville now has a garden of native Virginia plants behind the school, near the playground. "Elaine Tholan, a master gardener with Fairfax County government, has been phenomenal in working with our students and designing this garden," said Young. "We want the students to connect with nature and to be able to study outside and make more authentic learning experiences happen."

Teachers will be asked to take their classes outside, at least once a week, so students can, for example, read poetry or stories in the garden. That way, said Young, they'll "connect in a different way with higher-thinking skills. Kids will be able to see real things growing and make connections between nature and what we're teaching them in school."

Along the way, the children will also learn to be good stewards of the environment by recycling or not using certain things that are harmful. The school will also work with the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to help students understand that their community is linked to others and each impacts the other.

"I think our kids will really like it," said Young. "They'll learn about, for example, the Bull Run Stream and our plant life outside so they can be more aware of their

Public Information Meeting Set for Historic Centreville Park

The Fairfax County Park Authority is seeking public input on the draft Historic Centreville Park Master Plan. A meeting will be held on Tuesday, September 16, 2008, at 7 p.m. in the cafeteria at Colin Powell Elementary School, located at 13340 Leland Road, in Centreville.

Historic Centreville Park is a collection of five land parcels located in the Historic Centreville area. Mount Gilead, the largest parcel at approximately seven acres, draws its name from the most prominent feature within the site, the Mount Gilead house, built circa 1785. The site is owned and maintained by the Fairfax County Park Authority. In addition to historic Mount Gilead house, there are four other sites included in the park that contain a wealth of cultural, natural, and archeological resources that highlight the history of Centreville.

The draft master plan seeks to provide a balance between protection and interpretation of cultural resources, natural resources and community use. The draft plan addresses issues identified by the public, Park Authority staff and other Fairfax County personnel.

The proposed plan is available for review on the Park Authority website at: http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/parks/plandev/mtgilead.htm, or from the Fairfax County Park Authority at the Herrity Building, 12055 Government Center Parkway, Suite 406.

Comments on the plan will be received by the Park Authority for 30 days after the meeting. The public comment period will close on October 16, 2008. All comments must be received by this date in order to be included in the official public record. Testimony will be accepted at the meeting or can be emailed to parkmail@fairfaxcounty.gov. Members of the public may sign up to speak in advance by calling the Public Information Office at 703-324-8662 or may sign up at the meeting. Written comments should be directed to Pat Rosend, project manager, Planning & Development Division, Fairfax County Park Authority, 12055 Government Center Parkway, Suite 406, Fairfax, VA 22035. After all comments have been considered, the plan will be presented to the Park Authority Board for approval.

Horner was involved in the Democratic club at her high school and as a teenager in the mid-60s, she traveled to Atlantic City, N.J. as part of a youth caravan for President Lyndon Johnson.

Her political activism reached new heights last week at the Democratic National Convention in Denver. Horner, who is the 8th Congressional District Chair of Virginia and a member of the steering Committee of the Virginia Democratic Party, made the trip for the four-day convention, Aug. 25-28 as part of the 101-member Virginia delegation that included members of Congress, state lawmakers, city council members, and others.

"EACH CONVENTION EVENT is like a great chapter in a book about all of the great things that we've done," said Horner. "You just keep going every night and it is constantly building on something and has absolutely been phenomenal."

For many, the most emotional moment was the convention's historic finale, when on the 45th anniversary of Reverend Martin Luther King's "I Have a Dream Speech," Sen. Barack Obama accepted the Democratic Party's nomination for president, becoming the first African-American to become a major political party nominee.

Euille, who was attending his third convention, said Obama's acceptance speech "elevated Martin Luther King's work to its

Hazel Rigby, a delegate from Alexandria who was attending her first convention, found the convention particularly important.

"I was led into politics while I was a teacher at T.C. Williams High School," said Rigby, who taught at the school for 30 years and was on the faculty during the school's desegregation process. She is a precinct chair in Alexandria and was in charge of credentials for the delegation.

"I was overwhelmed by all of the action on the floor," she said. o"I've been involved in many campaigns. My father was a yellow dog democratic and he told me to be one, so I've always been a Democrat."

"THIS IS A ONCE-in-a-lifetime event and I'm glad I'm here to be part of it," said Euille. "I wouldn't have missed it. Even if I weren't a delegate, I would have found a way to be here in Denver ."

Horner who has attended conventions in the past as part of the Virginia delegation said that one of the key differences in this year's convention and those of years past was the group's proximity to the podium.

"Now we're a battleground state," she said. We haven't been on the floor and close up in a long time. In the past, we've been in rafters or what you call the bloody-nose section."

Each morning during the convention, the Virginia delegation held a breakfast at the delegation's hotel, the Crown Plaza Denver Hotel. Each night there were social receptions. During the day, it was a mix of caucus events, meetings and party politics.

Outside of the state delegate events, Virginia leaders were featured throughout the week at national events.

The state Democratic Party produced and posted video of convention events. The videos are available on the front page of the party's Web site, www.vademocrats.org.

Candidates Decline Debates

Voters may have few opportunities to see how candidates match up side-by-side before the election Nov. 4.

U.S. Senate candidate Mark Warner (D) and Rep. Frank Wolf (R-10) have turned down invitations to participate in upcoming televised debates sponsored by the nonpartisan League of Women Voters.

Eleventh district congressional candidate Keith Fimian said he is unaware of any scheduled debate between himself and his opponent, Fairfax County chairman Gerry Connolly (D).

Some candidates choose not to participate in a debate if they already have an advantage in the polls, according to Olga Hernandez, president of the Virginia League of Women Voters.

"Sometimes, when candidates are ahead, they perceive they have more to lose than to gain in a debate. So they decide not to participate. But we do not think that is good for voters," said Hernandez. "I think the citizens of Virginia lose out."

Warner's campaign has said his busy schedule could not accommodate the League of Women Voters debate before the election. But Hernandez said the League of Women Voters extended an invitation to both Warner and Republican Jim Gilmore within a week of the Republican convention last May, which confirmed Gilmore would be the Republican Party nominee for U.S. Senate.

"The scheduling matter is ridiculous. He knows he is high up in the polls and he wants to hide his positions and ride that wave to the U.S. Senate seat," said Ana Gamonal, a spokesperson for Gilmore.

The debates which Warner and Wolf have agreed to might not to be available to as wide of an audience as those organized by the League of Women Voters.

Warner and Gilmore squared off once before a private audience at The Homestead resort this summer. The Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce has scheduled the only other debate before the U.S. Senate election Nov. 4.

Though the chamber's event is open to the public, it takes place in middle of a workday and people must pay a fee to attend, said Hernandez. The chamber has also reported that the event is sold out.

"We are putting is a request for C-SPAN [to cover the Fairfax Chamber debate]," said Gamonal, who added that Warner has declined to participate in several other televised appearances with Gilmore.

Wolf has agreed to participate in two debates with his Democratic opponent Judy Feder. He said one will take place before the Prince William County Committee of 100. Another will be located in Loudoun County.

But Wolf – who represents McLean, Great Falls, Herndon, Centreville and Chantilly in Fairfax County – has turned down the opportunity to participate in a Fairfax County debate. The local chapter of the League of Women voters had initially scheduled an appearance between Wolf and Feder Sept. 8.

"They have sort of backed out. His staff had called and said they would not be participating," said Luke McFarland, Feder's campaign manager.

McFarland added the Wolf and Feder – who challenged Wolf in 2006 – had participated in a League of Women Voters debate two years ago.

Wolf said that Congress will be in session on Sept. 8, and he will have to be on Capitol Hill.

According to Fimian, he and Connolly have only made one joint appearance together. The two candidates talked to the residents of Greenspring Village, a Springfield retirement community, about four months ago, he said.

With the presidential race taking up the attention of many, voters need more than cable television commercials and glossy direct mailers to find out more about each candidate. One key tradition involves live candidate debates, which voters can attend in person or watch on television (or YouTube).

Because our three congressional districts are relatively compact, voters should be able to see the candidates debate in EDITORIAL person, as well as having the option to watch on video. It's fair to say that all the candidates who

Of course no one admits to ducking a debate. There is always as specific reason why one or the other debate won't

We urge the candidates to appear in public in multiple venues, with candidates for the House of Representatives scheduling multiple debates so that at least one is accessible to each locality.

And let's admit that we're living in the YouTube era, and let have every debate appear on television and with replays available.

Ramadhan: A Month of Peace

To the Editor:

This September, Muslims are welcoming the blessed month of Ramadhan, and it couldn't have come at a better time. With so many global events occupying our attention, we could all do with a bit of a time-out. It's the perfect opportunity to reflect and enhance our conduct and behavior, and this holy month allows us to do that.

Ramadhan is a commandment of God that holds its place as the fourth of five pillars of Islam. Muslims are required to fast during the hours of daylight, while focusing their attention to the remembrance of God and reflecting on their past errors and mistakes, in order to correct them in the future. Observing fast is obligatory for every adult Muslim, except for certain exemptions like when undergoing illness, pregnancy, or when a female has her menstrual cycle. Fasting teaches physical, moral and spiritual discipline (though it's not to be confused with penance).

Its object is to protect against evil and to promote righteousness within oneself.

Ramadhan comes at a good time for Muslims because it gives us the chance to stop and take a look at ourselves and what's around us. During this time, we regard the poor and needy a lot more and make an effort to offer our support wherever we can. Islam highly emphasizes the giving of alms and providing care to the poor, in hopes of bringing about an awareness of gratitude for the things we have. The Holy Quran says:

"And spend out of what we have provided for them." (CH 2, verse

It tells its believers to spend a portion out of what you have for the welfare of the individual and the public. Everything we have comes from God Himself, so to spend for His cause is our responsibility, whether it be wealth, power, influence, even our physical and intellectual capacities, they are all blessings from Him alone, blessing we should share. However, spending out what you have isn't necessarily restricted to the poor and destitute; you could know someone who is quite well off but suffers hardship and misery. Or how about the people who have suffered from natural disasters, like these tropical hurricanes in the news. We would make sure to remember them in our prayers and offer whatever support we can. Ramadhan encourages and brings about a sense of community and love within us. We try to incorporate these good habits so that we stay away from trouble, even after Ramadhan is over, we are meant to keep with us what we learned, so that every cycle we can work on improving something else, therefore elevating higher in our spiritual status.

By continuing with these acts it is possible to adopt a good lifestyle, and fasting helps in many ways. During that period we know Muslims stay away from food and drink, but that's not the only restriction. We are forbidden to engage in vain talk, quarrels and fights, or anything that is below the dignity of a true believer. Even the act of carnal pleasure is off limits. These are things which will distract and delay the spiritual development of the soul during Ramadhan. Therefore we make it a constant practice to remember God, pray, and indulge in good deeds, as many Muslims will be doing now as we speak.

Ramadhan is a time when souls get to recuperate and gain spiritual nourishment. These 30 days will be a training period for us. Let us all hope to achieve our goals to guarantee a bright future.

Thanks for Help With All-Night Grad Party

On June 18, more than 775 seniors graduated from Westfield High School at the George Mason Patriot Center. Later that evening, approximately 687 of them once again filled WHS with laughter and excitement as they attended an All-Night Graduation Party, held in their honor. Since Westfield first opened its doors in September of 2000, each graduating class has been provided the opportunity to attend a safe, fun and memorable drug- and alcohol-free celebration. ## What's New in Schools?

over a third of the classrooms, and now we'll have them in at least half," said Larsen. "We're very excited about it."

Deer Park is also becoming a new, Responsive Classroom school, which is the approach teachers use in terms of handling student discipline, classroom rules, social skills, greeting students and working with parents. It's comprised of 10 guiding prin-

1. A morning meeting with students – To greet each other, share news and get ready for the new

2. Rule Creation - Students help create the classroom rules so they'll better understand them.

- 3. Interactive modeling -Teachers model the behavior and routines their students should follow.
- 4. Positive teacher language -Encouragement to students.
- 5. Logical consequences Responding to a child misbehaving in a way relevant to what the child did, so he or she may learn from it. For example, the child would have to clean up his or her mess in the cafeteria.
- 6. Guided discovery Introducing something new with creativity and inviting students to make their own connections so they're excited about it.
- 7. Academic choice Encouraging students to have a choice in what or how they're studying something. For example, writing a song or selecting from a variety of assignments.
- 8. Classroom organization Setting up the room physically to better accommodate this new approach.
- 9. Working with families Doing so will help the teacher understand the parents' hopes and dreams for their children, and the parents understand the overall philosophy.
- 10. Collaborative problem-solving Using roleplaying and other strategies to help students resolve problems with each other.

"Our theme this year is 'We place value on fitness,' which combines math and fitness," said Larsen. "For example, students could discuss the Olympics and data related to fitness. It's also about ways to incorporate physical activities, the need for lifelong, goodhealth habits and to emphasize our math program."

WILLOW SPRINGS

Willow Springs had 660 students in June, and Principal Liz Rhein expects to begin the new school year with 650-660 children. Grades one and five will each have one, new teacher, and the FLES (Foreign Language in Elementary Schools) program will have a full-time teacher.

Last year, it was just a half position, with first-graders receiving lessons in both English and Spanish. This year, FLES will encompass first- and secondgrade classes so, said Rhein, "We're excited about that."

"The teacher will also go on our morning news program and talk about Spanish language and culture so everybody is introduced to it," said Rhein. "And she'll put up pictures in the hallways with the words in Spanish. It's one more piece that adds enrichment to the academic program we offer here."

As always, the school motto is "If it is to be, it is up to me." It's a can-do message about students taking personal responsibility to make things happen. And, said Rhein, "We have teachers here to help them achieve."

All the Willow Springs classrooms have SmartBoards this year and, that, too, enhances instruction. "We're very fortunate — our PTA [which funded them] has been very generous," said Rhein.

Now starting her fifth year as principal there, she's eagerly looking forward to the new school year. "Every year's a new beginning with a new group of students," she said. "Our staff is fantastic. They're hardworking professionals who have the children's best interests at heart."

UNION MILL

Also excited about the upcoming year is Union Mill Principal Susan Shadis. "Parents have been coming in all summer, and it's nice to hear from them how much they love the school," she said.

There's been little teacher turnover. Angela Hoernko will teach fourth grade, Jayne-Anne Maresca is a new special-ed instructor, Elizabeth Bottorf – who graduated from and played volleyball at GMU - will teach P.E., and Nichole Hellman is the new music

"She was handpicked for us and is coming all the way from Arizona, so we're excited about her, since our fine-arts program is so important to us," said Shadis. "All these teachers will be great additions to our staff."

Enrollment is up a bit, with almost 800 students expected. Said Shadis: "We're going to a fifth, kindergarten class — which we haven't had in years."

The school also plans to have a mural painted "to represent all the great things that go on at Union Mill," she said. "It'll be in the foyer above the back doors and will be done by former Union Mill parent is 'Celebrate 2008' — celebrating the successes of Edie Brown, who already painted a beautiful one in our cafeteria."

She'll do it in stages so the children can watch her paint, and the students will take photos of things meaningful to them — either inside the school or on its grounds — for Brown to incorporate into her mural. She'll paint approximately 20 vignettes, showing scenes such as story times in the library and a particular, shady tree on the playground that the children love.

Fairfax County has a new, student-assessment program, e Cart, that Union Mill will implement this vear. That way, said Shadis, "We'll be able to align our curriculum better — for example, adding in extra activities — so each child will get a gifted education. I am looking forward to working with small groups of teacher teams to really target our instruction and make sure we meet the needs of every student."

Previously, the School Board initiated two, other goals — responsibility to the community and essential life skills — so this year, Union Mill will also emphasize recycling, plus nutrition and the importance of a healthy body, as well as a healthy mind.

CENTRE RIDGE

Centre Ridge has new teachers in third and fifth grades, a new counselor and a new music teacher, plus some new faces in the office. Enrollment is down just a bit, at 830-840 students, and Principal Jim Baldwin is starting his fourth year at the helm.

"We're excited," he said. "Our theme for this year our students. We're proud of our mentoring programs and positive-behavior support, our test scores have improved and teachers are going in new directions with the growing curriculum."

"Using e Cart, we're expanding the ways we assess children, and we're also integrating more technology into the classroom," said Baldwin. "For example, we're expanding our use of the BlackBoard program. I communicate with teachers through it and parents communicate with teachers about the [homework] assignments. And this is all really taking off this year so we're celebrating it."

Centre Ridge fifth-graders will also do a big, community-service project this year. They'll have some choice in it and will be trained during the year in research and presentation tools. They'll learn how to do computer graphics, slide shows, voice overlays and video clips to illustrate the project they've done.

In addition, said Baldwin, "We'll probably have a Share Fair in the spring so parents can see the products their children have created this year and how they connect to the community and to various cultures. We're looking forward to an exciting year."

He believes that children should have a "tactile experience with nature," instead of only reading about it. "We're looking at putting in a lilac garden, bird boxes to attract four or five types of birds, and a garden to attract monarch butterflies," said Young. "And we hope to have our native Virginia garden certified as a natural wildlife habi-

He's delighted to see how excited the students are about it and how much they want to be a part of it and study it. Ultimately, he said, "I'd like to have 900 'naturalists' at our school who can talk about the watershed and our community [because of their firsthand knowledge]. This also meets our School Board goal of students having a responsibility to their community, wherever they end up living."

CENTREVILLE'S ALSO had a large influx of technology last year that will continue benefiting students this year. The school added more than 100 laptop computers, revamped its technology lab and purchased more SmartBoards for the classrooms. And nearly every teacher has a projector to enhance images so students may see them more clearly.

"Our first-graders are the class of 2020 and technology will fuel them," said Young. "So our kids have to be savvy and comfortable with it."

This year, students will also help create their classrooms' rules so they'll feel ownership of their rooms and will be more likely to obey. Young says the school's on a "nice trajectory" in its academic achievements so "we feel we've made a lot of strides in improving and stretching ourselves.'

"But it's more than that," he added. "We want our kids to be excited about learning and school, and we want their education to be something they value and will build upon." That way, said Young, they'll "see obstacles as problems to be solved and will put forth good effort because they're capable. We want them to be challenged and to see school as a place of endless possibilities."

Phillips Takes Charge at Stone Middle

served teachers in the classroom," he said. "I liked doing that so I decided to become an assistant principal."

In that post at Stone since August 2002, he got to know the students as they came fresh from elementary school and helped make their transition to middle school easier. So now, he said, "I feel I have great connections at our feeder elementaries." He also supervised and evaluated the seventh-grade teaching staff, plus the math, English and ESOL departments.

Phillips chaired the School Improvement Plan and managed the Thursday After-School Enrichment Program. Students worked on their studies with mentors for an hour and participated in various activities for another hour. It was so successful, Stone eventually hired an after-school specialist to make it a full-time program.

The idea of becoming a principal came up about four years ago when Stone hosted summer school and Gaudreault asked Phillips if he'd be interested in running it. He was, and he served as summer-school principal for four years to-

In addition, said Phillips, "Ken prepared me to fulfill the principal duties, either here or somewhere else. I preferred it to be here because my wife's parents live a block from the school, and my brotherin-law and his family live on the same street."

AND GAUDREAULT couldn't be happier with his successor. "I think Scott's an excellent choice," he said. "The community is very fortunate to have him as principal to continue the wonderful things here and add a new perspective and initiatives that'll be good for children. We're only as good as our staff, and he'll continue our leadership team of Zena Chapman, director of student services, and Christine Sciabica, eighth-grade assistant principal."

Phillips, too, has great confidence in them. "Honestly, I think any one of us on the administrative team could have been principal," he said. "And fortunately, we retained the other two." He also took leadership training, over the past few years, and then beat out some 40-80 other candidates for the job. He says the continuity at Stone has made his transition easier and he's excited to take the lead.

"Both the strength and challenge of the school is in its diversity," he said. "It's gradually becoming more

"Both the strength

Stone Middle School

and challenge of

in its diversity."

the school is

socio-economically and culturally diverse, and we're adapting to it. The biggest challenge is language and being able to communicate with parents. I supervised ESOL as an assistant principal, and many students picked up English within a month. For the parents, it's harder because they speak their own language at home, and the child is a bridge between two worlds."

However, added Phillips, "Fairfax County provides translators, and we have a fantastic parent liaison." At Stone's International Night in February, more than 30 countries were represented. In June 2007, the school's students were 60 percent Caucasian, 15 percent Hispanic, 14 percent Asian and 6 percent each, black and other (mixed race).

"This past year, close to 16 percent were Hispanic, and 17 percent, Asian," said Phillips. "When I started here, we were 6 percent Hispanic. But our ESOL program has actually shrunk because more of our students were born here and about 17-20 percent of our school population has exited from ESOL."

Still, he said, "Students coming from different backgrounds have different knowledge and experience in each of the subject areas. For example, students from other countries don't always have the background knowledge and content vocabulary [needed] for success in school]." At the same time, he said, Stone must keep challenging students doing really well and make sure they're ready for high school and advanced-placement courses.

Phillips says the school must also continue growing in technology. "We have a new, countywide, assessment tool called e Cart," he said. "It's for teachers to collaboratively design assessments for the four, core areas — science, English, math and social studies — and change their teaching [methods] based on it. They'll make sure students master the material and will pinpoint areas where they're not."

As chairman of the School Improvement Plan, the past five years, Phillips gathered the school improvement initiatives and data analyses every year and submitted them to the Cluster VIII office for approval and feedback. "I created a parent-review committee for that document so 20-50 parents reviewed it and gave their feedback," he said. "My promise to them was that they'd learn more about the school than they'd ever know, otherwise. They were impressed with the school and had a better comfort level with it."

NOW, PHILLIPS wants to continue and broaden that level of parent involvement and knowledge so parents can see both Stone's strengths and challenges. Then, he said, "They can engage with us to help make their kids' experience with us successful."

Stone's mission is to develop the full potential of each child, each classroom and their community. "When we have nearly 1,000 students, it's tough to keep our focus on each child," said Phillips. "But that's the challenge we're given and we need to make adjustments to make sure it's working for every kid."

The classroom portion of the mission statement deals with best-practice instruction so teachers reach every student. Explained Phillips: "It's about working collaboratively with the staff and people working together in teams to do the absolute best they can so no child slips through the cracks. And if there's a need, we can fix it." The community section refers not just to the immediate school, but to the community feeding into it. "My family's been a part of this school since 1967, so I like to see students at Westfield High being successful in whatever they're doing after they leave here," said Phillips. "In my office, I'll have a legacy board with pictures of past students. I always had one as a teacher, too, because students take away a little piece of you that helps them do what they'll do [in the future]. My former students are now in the tens of thousands."

SINCE BEING PRINCIPAL entails a myriad of responsibility, he expects the hardest part of it to be finding time to balance everything. "Luckily, I have a good staff to help me with that," he said. What he'll find most satisfying about his new job is more complicated.

"I was a student on public assistance," said Phillips. "My father passed away after being unemployed a couple years, so I was a good student from a family that was struggling. I worked my way through college and paid for both my master's degrees and rose out of a place where not a lot of people went to college. So the most rewarding part for me is to watch a student who was struggling be able to turn that around and succeed and be strengthened by it."

"This is my 20th year in education, so I've had some experience, and I'm looking forward to growing into the position of principal and the responsibility implied by it," he continued. "We do some great things here, and I'd like to see us do even better things."

PTA President Cathy Pisarcik says the PTA members have gotten to know Phillips as an assistant principal and are looking forward to working with him. "I think he'll make a great, new principal for us," she said. "He's very approachable and experienced and he really knows the kids and has their best interests at heart. And the continuity for the school, staff and community will be beneficial for everybody involved."

Gas Station Robbery Goes to Grand Jury

On Oct. 30, 2007, around 1 a.m., two men — one, armed with a shotgun — entered the Sunoco gas station at 14010 Saint Germain Drive in Centreville. Fairfax County police said they demanded money and struck a male employee with the butt of the gun.

They fled in a car with the cash. But the victim, 26, of Centreville, wasn't seriously injured and described the two suspects and their car to police. Officers stopped their vehicle on Westfields Boulevard at Rouge 28.

Police then charged two Maryland men with the crime, as well as their alleged driver, Nadia Childs, 20, of Temple Hills, Md. She was charged with robbery, use of a firearm in the commission of a felony and possession of a sawed-off shotgun in the commission of a crime.

In January, the charges against both men were dropped and Childs's case was continued several times. Then on Aug. 20 in General District Court, Judge Mitchell Mutnick sent her robbery charge to the grand jury.

Free Carseat Inspections

Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections, Thursday, Sept. 4 and 11, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. They'll make sure the carseat is correct for the child's age, height and weight, the child is securely placed in the seat, and the seat is properly installed in the vehicle.

No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves, so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed. Call 703-814-7000, ext. 5140 to confirm dates and times.

17 Years Prison for Wife's Murder

trauma, plus the suffering and heartache from his hardship, changed him."

After two years of surgeries, Kim returned to work. But he began avoiding his friends and became suspicious of other people. Those closest to him said he believed people were stalking him, and they worried about his mental stability.

Eventually, he and Lee developed marital problems and planned to divorce; then, on June 20, 2007, he told his attorney they were getting back together.

That was the last time Kim's relatives heard from him until last summer's tragedy — witnessed by Lee's young niece and nephew, who were in the house watching TV when she was stabbed.

ON JUNE 2 in Circuit Court, Kim entered an Alford plea of guilt to second-degree murder — not admitting culpability, but acknowledging the existence of enough evidence to convict him.

Deputy Commonwealth's Attorney Ian Rodway explained the prosecution's case against him. He said police went to the Centreville home, July 4, 2007, for a report of an assault with a weapon and Kim told Officers A.A. Neff and J. Clerkin that he'd killed his wife.

Defense attorney Eric Clingan said that, when his client emerged from the house, "He was actually holding two knives inward, as if to kill himself. It was through good police work that he didn't."

Kim returned to court Aug. 22 for sentencing, and both attorneys told Judge Randy Bellows they'd reached an agreement. Kim would serve 17 years in prison, waive any defenses to deportation proceedings and willingly return to his native Korea after being released. When he pleaded guilty, Bellows had warned Kim that he wouldn't be deported until after he'd served his active prison time.

He'd also relinquish all rights to the Centreville home to his stepson, Lee's 16-year-old son, and pay $7,500 compensation to the Virginia Victim Injury Fund. Rodway said the family members were agreeable to this sentence.

Still, asked Bellows, "Given the viciousness of the murder — 31 stab wounds — I'd like to understand why a sentence not at the high point of the guidelines [5-40 years] is on the table?"

"The monetary satisfaction in this case weighed heavily in its disposition," replied Rodway. "The defendant was concerned about his stepson, and the family wanted the stepson monetarily taken care of for the rest of his life."

The judge agreed and then Kim — a small, slight-built man with dark hair and a mustache — stood and said, "I'm so sorry, Your Honor." Bellows sentenced him to life in prison, suspending all but 17 years, and placed him on active probation for life. He also ordered Kim to comply with the rest of the elements of his already-agreed-upon sentence.

AFTERWARD, outside the courtroom, Clingan said, "It's a tragic circumstance where my client clearly understood after the event what had happened. But it's our belief that what happened between the two of them just prior [to the murder] was a matter of speculation."

He said Kim's "had the benefit of a psychologist," the past six to eight months, to help him work through the events of that day. However, he still "has no active memory of what occurred. He feels regretful and sorry about what happened and is concerned about the stepson."

"He had a number of mental injuries from the car www.ConnectionNewspapers.com accident that may not have been sufficiently addressed in the past two or three years," continued Clingan. "And his mind, to some degree, may have been impacted by [the lack of treatment]. He's lucid and completely able to understand his [current legal] predicament, but the issue is his level of culpability, based on his mental state at the time."

Regarding Kim's immigration status, Clingan said he's a legal U.S. resident with a green card, but is not an American citizen, so ICE now has a detainer on him. Kim also has another worry because, on Sept. 28, 2007, two family members filed a wrongful-death lawsuit against him. Damages are claimed in the amount of $1 million, and a civil jury trial is scheduled for Dec. 1 in Circuit Court.

Years ago, when Kim won his own lawsuit against the man responsible for his accident, he was awarded $700,000, plus an additional $2,000 a month until his death. He also received $50,000 annually for each of the first five years after the judgment was rendered.

"The family wants to receive the money Kim receives every month from the insurance settlement for his accident," said Jim McConville, representing the plaintiffs in the lawsuit, Byoung K. Kim and Hae Deok Kim. "They filed the suit last year to claim this money and to freeze the house so he couldn't sell it, and we'd like to get this resolved."

McConville represented Lee in the divorce case and said it was on the docket for trial in October 2007. "For a few months, he was in New York and she was at home [in Centreville]," said McConville. But then, the couple made up.

"I saw her, the day before the murder," said McConville. "She was in my office and was happy. They'd reconciled, and she'd come to see me to remove the divorce proceedings and get things re-titled and put back in both names."

"She was excited and anxious to get the divorce proceedings rescinded and dismissed," said the attorney. "Kim had some jealousy, but there was no basis for it." When McConville then learned that Lee had been murdered by her husband, he said, "I was just shocked."

o, these aren't last year's Westfield Bulldogs. And that's OK. This year's team is well on its way to forging its own identity.

The Westfield football team graduated 48 seniors — 18 of which were starters — following last year's 15-0 season and state title run, leaving senior linemen Tyler Barfield, Tyler Delph and Jacob Ryder, as well as senior defensive back Evan Winfrey to shoulder the load.

But last Friday at South County Secondary School, though by a much slimmer margin, the new Bulldog regime hit the field and did exactly what last year's squad did so much. "We'll, we got a win," said Westfield coach Tom Verbanic, when asked to analyze his team's 9-7 victory. "I thought our kids played real hard ... we just didn't play real smart."

Westfield was guilty of two holding penalties and two delay of game calls, surely a total of four flags that were attributable to youth Facing South County, a team that runs a complicated spread offense predicated on speed and deception, can often turn even the most cerebral team into spectators. But the Bulldogs, owners of five shutouts last season, didn't flinch.

Westfield consistently pressured South County quarterback Aaron Andrews and forced three interceptions – the first on South County's second drive of the game.

"On that first [interception], I have to give credit to Jason Delaney," Winfrey said. "He got his hand up, tipped it, and I was there because the coaches had me in position to make a play."

Winfrey's interception led to a 29-yard field goal from junior A.V. Lawless, as Westfield held a 3-0 lead after the first quarter of play.

Westfield running back Jordan Anderson breaks a tackle during the Bulldogs' 9-7 win over South County last Friday. Anderson rushed for 113 yards and a touchdown on 13 carries.

But early in the second, South County's spread offense finally broke through. From its own 43-yard line, South County ran a screen play to the left side to gain 22 yards and Eric Dorsey's 5-yard touchdown run capped the drive to put South County ahead, 7-3.

In 2007, a four-point deficit could've been quickly solved with one or two Mike Glennon passes to Johnny Pickett or David Kruchko. However, with his Division I-A quarterback and two talented receivers gone, on Friday Verbanic opted for the opposite.

With a 13-carry, 113-yard performance, senior running back Jordan Anderson emerged as one of Verbanic's best options on the ground. Anderson, who played for Annandale last season but transferred to Westfield after his family moved, scored the Bulldogs' first and only touchdown on a 19-yard run.

WITH KEY RETURNERS like Barfield, Delph and Ryder setting the tone up front, Anderson exploded on several off-tackle runs.

"I can't do it without our offensive line," Anderson was quick to point out. "The line gives me holes, I'll get 'em the yardage."

Anderson was helped in the backfield by senior Phillip Vasquez (7 carries, 27 yards) and Jay Jackson (8 carries, 27 yards), but a physical running style and impressive vision may have endeared Anderson to his new coach.

"[Anderson] definitely showed up and played real well," said Verbanic, whose team will host Lee on Friday. "He ran the ball real hard along with some other guys, and I think he's going to be valuable asset to our team."

Taking Glennon's spot under center was junior Danny Fenyak, whose older brother Tommy was a standout pitcher for Westfield's baseball team. The 6-foot-4 Fenyak completed 5 of 14 passes for 49 yards but was intercepted twice.

"It was his first time starting a varsity football game, he's a junior, and he did some good things and he made some mistakes," Verbanic said. "Danny's a kid who's a competitor and we have all the faith in the world in him."

Westfield didn't turn any heads with deep touchdown passes or nifty runs, but the Bulldogs did generate more than a few sparks on defense. Defensive back Zach Sargent, linebacker Ben Casper and Winfrey all delivered bone-jarring hits, further emphasizing the physicality and willingness to work that's developing as a hallmark of Westfield's defense.

"It was a good game on defense for all of us," Winfrey said. "We made a lot of improvements from our last scrimmage."

Centreville High volleyball finds string of success.

pproach Centreville volleypproach Centreville Volleyball coach Ken Moser and pepper him with a few questions about his trade. Go ahead, he won't mind. Just don't ask him about his "team."

After all, it's a "program." And a successful one at that.

"We always call Centreville a program," Moser said. "We never say we have freshman, junior varsity and varsity [players]. It's a program at Centreville and that's why we stay competitive year after year."

MOSER'S PROGRAM has won the past three Concorde District championships and took its first step toward winning No. 4 on Tuesday, cruising to a 3-0 road win (25-15, 25-8, 27-17) win over Lake Braddock.

A testament to their two-a-day summer practices — conditioning for two hours in the morning and regular practice for two more at night — the Wildcats have appeared in six of the eight Virginia AAA state volleyball tournaments since 2000.

Though they have never won a state title, the Wildcats' run of suc-

to the program."

are willing to

cess can't be solely attributed to practice. There has to be someone willing to put in the work. "The girls are committed to the program; they're willing to do whatever I ask them to do," Moser said.

Senior Allie Darling, whose spectacular performance against Lake Braddock featured eight kills and only one hitting error, has been entrusted — along with fellow seniors Lindsey Hunter and Kari Owens — with making sure that run of success continues.

"We have so much fun bonding with the girls and we've won districts three times in a row, so there are always big expectations to look forward to and we always try to achieve that," Darling said. "There's a lot of team chemistry. We're just able to bring that on the court and it works really well."

Following last season's 17-7 mark, which ended with a loss to state Centreville's Allie Darling is one of seven seniors on the team's roster. An outside hitter, the Wildcats will rely on Darling's force and athleticism this season.

runner-up Langley in the Northern Region semifinals, Centreville graduated four talented seniors. But this season, with nearly double that number on its roster now, Moser's 'program' remains one of the top teams in the region this fall.

"We have some big shoes to fill, but I think our team has been doing a really good job of it so far," said Celine

Alasomuka, a junior who finished with six aces and 10 kills. "I think we have the holes covered."

Against a young but talented Lake Braddock squad, Centreville found itself with a slim 8-6 lead in Game 1 when Alasomuka took over. After her kill put the ball in Centreville's control, Alasomuka trotted back to serve. Her first two serves resulted in points, but it was her third that truly deserved attention. Preparing her serve by tossing the ball in the air, Alasomuka jumped behind the ball and delivered a bullet, an irreturnable bullet to boot.

The serve was one of four consecutive aces for Alasomuka, zapping Lake Braddock's momentum and propelling the Wildcats to a game-changing 7-0 run. Timeout Lake Braddock. Five of seven points delivered by Alasomuka, though she deflected credit nearly as well as did sets from Hunter (28 assists).

"I couldn't do it without the momentum of all my teammates," Alasomuka said. "It takes a whole team for one person to be great."

A TEAM EFFORT would best characterize Game 2, as five difference players recorded kills, including two apiece from Darling and junior Jenny Smith. With Centreville holding a commanding 2-0 lead after the first two games, Moser was even able to utilize his bench.

"We did it well as a team and that's what I liked," said Moser, whose team will host South County on Thursday night. "It's nice to get your bench on the court, let them play, and see that we can keep the same intensity."

Though it will certainly enjoy its fair share of success, Centreville's program faces plenty of tough tests throughout the state this fall in Stone Bridge, Loudoun Valley and Frank W. Cox, Moser knows that his team has what it takes to succeed.

"I'm successful," Moser said, "because I have girls that are willing to learn and commit to the program."

Fairfax Stars Win 2008 U.S. Junior Nationals

Congratulations to the Fairfax Stars U12 Girls Gold team as they defeated the Philadelphia Belles in the championship game, 67-42, to win the 2008 U.S. Junior Nationals Championship tournament.

In the semifinal game, the Stars beat the Long Island Lightning from New York, 51-34, to advance to the championship game. For the tournament, the Stars finished undefeated with a 7 - 0 record. The most incredible part of the tournament is that they did it with only eight players. Congratulations to Jade Clark, Julianne Abruzzo, Keara Finnerty, Daiza Hall, Taylor Delgado, Amanda Fioravanti, Meaghan Gilmartin and Zoe Beard-Fails.

July proved to be a very good month for the Stars.

SYA East Advances to Tournament of State Champions

The SYA East Little League 9-10year-old All-Star team recently advanced to the championship game at Mitch Stadium in the regional Tournament of State Champions in Ceredo-Kenova, WV. Five players returned from last year's Virginia's District 10 championship team including Matthew Blaise, Daniel Lachance, Christian Leckert, Daniel Woodruff, and Michael Coritz with newcomers to the 9/10 team Carter Bach, Sean Culleiton, Zach Forbes, Ronnie Orie, Trey House, Tyler Gambone and Kyle Barnes.

Despite losing 6-5 in the championship game to the team from Georgia after being up 3-0 on the first three pitches of the game, the SYA team enjoyed their six-week run with an overall record of 15-2, outscoring their opponents 211-49. Having won the Virginia District 10 and Virginia State titles earlier this summer, the team won their first four games in West Virginia by a combined score of 53-14.

These games were broadcast live via the tournament Web site, allowing the greater SYA community to follow the team's progress. The 9/10 All Stars appreciate all the support they received from their families and friends and the entire Clifton/Centreville area.
