'Aladdin, Jr.' Flies into Town

The day after Loudoun County Public Schools dismissed classes for the summer last week, 50 students got right back to work. From 9:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. five days a week, the students, aged 8 to 17, the students are rehearsing their roles in the upcoming production of Disney's 'Aladdin, Jr.,' which opens Friday, July 10.

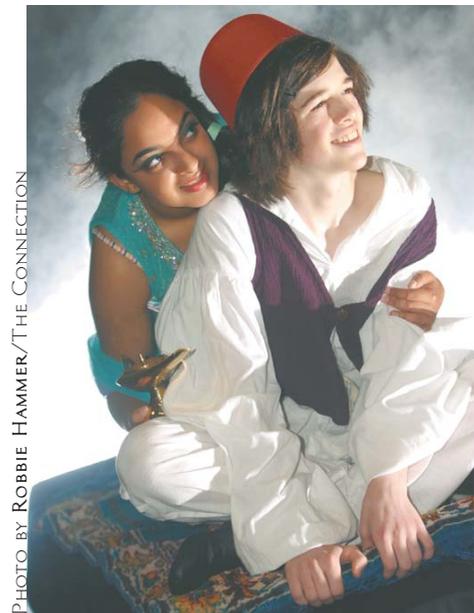

Last weekend the students had their first run-through without their scripts and all indications are that the show is coming along well, said director Kathy Bleutge. Putting in such work in the middle of summer is a major commitment from students, Bleutge said.

Those who have seen the movie will be ready for the play, which is virtually the same as the original 1992 Disney animated musical film. All of the songs from the original movie will be in the show, plus an extra song for the villain Jafar. Fans of local high school theater will see some familiar faces as well.

Aladdin will be played by Chris Sanderson, Jasmine by Roopali Kulkarni, the Genie by Brandon Spann, and Jafar by Ty Sheedlo.

The show has been funded by a $5,000 grant from the Northern Virginia Commu

Grappling with Alzheimer's Disease

Author reflects on losing her parents.

BY TOM CHRISTENSEN
THE CONNECTION

When Deborah Tornillo's parents were diagnosed with Alzheimer's Disease in February 2006, she knew a difficult journey was ahead of her. Tornillo details that journey in her new book, "36 Days Apart: A Memoir of a Daughter, Her Parents, and the Beast Named — Alzheimer's: A Story of Life, Love and Death."

A retired business-owner, wife, mother, and grandmother, Tornillo has lived in Sterling since 1999. While her parents were not diagnosed with Alzheimer's until February 2006, Tornillo recalls her parents exhibiting the signs of Alzheimer's as early as 2002. She said, "My mother kept repeating stories, I saw something wasn't right." Tornillo eventually took her parents to a neurologist, who diagnosed both her mother and her father with Alzheimer's Disease.

The next year, Tornillo spent her time traveling between her home in Sterling and San Antonio, Texas, where her parents lived. She hired a home health agency to take care of her parents while she was home in Virginia, however she soon decided to move her parents to Virginia. "The disease progressed so rapidly," she said, "the best thing to do was to take them to Virginia."

Tornillo quickly realized that her home in Sterling was also problematic to her parents' wellbeing. "It was the first night here that my mom disappeared right out the door," she said. After the police found her mother four and half hours later in a nearby model apartment, Tornillo concluded that her three-story town home, which presented additional problems for her wheelchair-bound mother, could not offer the security and care that her parents needed. So she placed them in a nearby nursing home, where they would receive proper attention.

THOUGH HER PARENTS were no longer living with her, Tornillo visited just about everyday, stating, "I put on hold my personal life, [and] being at home and being available to my daughters and grandchildren. Forty-eight hours a day was spent taking care of my mom and dad." When she was not with her parents, Tornillo spent much time researching Alzheimer's Disease and death. "I spent at least an hour a day at Border's book store," she said. "I knew my mom and dad were dying. I needed to know what to expect."

Her hours of research proved to be useful as the disease progressed within her parents. For instance, after Tornillo read that Alzheimer's sufferers could connect with baby dolls, she bought her mother a life-like baby doll from a local Toys R Us. "You could see excitement in her," she recalled of the day she handed her mother the doll. "It was like her very own baby from that day forward."

Tornillo's research also taught her that those stricken with

Airports Authority Reviews Toll Road Increases

Toll revenue will be used to finance 52 percent of Metrorail Extension.

BY JULIA O'DONOGHUE
THE CONNECTION

Reston resident Brian D'Silva said fee increases are unlikely to affect his use of the Dulles Toll Road, which stretches 12 miles from the northwestern edge of Fairfax County to the Capital Beltway.

The federal government employee receives a subsidy that already helps offset the cost of his commute to downtown Washington D.C. And he usually takes the toll road's express bus service to and from the West Falls Church Metro station in any case so he doesn't pay the toll to get to work every day.

For all of his other toll road trips, D'Silva is supportive of a higher fee if it assists in getting the 22-mile Metrorail extension to Dulles International Airport and beyond in Loudoun County.

"If that is what it takes to get Metro out here, that is what it takes. We want to be sure Metro actually comes out here in the next three years," said D'Silva, who thinks the subway extension would help with local traffic congestion.

OVER THE NEXT three years, the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority appears likely to raise rates on the Dulles Toll Road from 75 cents to $1.50 at the main gate and 50 cents to 75 cents at the ramp gates.

At the main gate, the fees are likely to go up incrementally, increasing 25 cents each year in 2010, 2011 and 2012. The 25-cent price jump at the ramp gates is likely to be implemented in 2010, said airport authority officials.

The airports authority board of directors will take a vote on the new tolls in November but is leaning heavily toward this short-term fee structure, which the authority officials shared with the Dulles Corridor Advisory Committee June 23.

The organization will seek public comment on the new rates during hearings scheduled for later this summer. Residents will also be able to comment on the toll increase vote through the airports authority's Web site and other means through the end of October.

The proposed rates would increase the average toll for a vehicle from 60 cents in 2009 to $1.10 in 2012 and provide more money to help finance the Metrorail extension to Dulles International Airport and Loudoun County, according to Jim Taylor, the airports authority's financial consultant.

Overall, toll road revenue is expected to pay for 52.6 percent of the $5.26 billion rail project. In order to produce enough revenue to support the Metrorail construction debt, toll roads rates will have to increase no matter what.

According to an airports authority presentation, the gross toll road revenue will have to rise from $65 million in 2008 to $87 million in 2010 and $220 million in 2020 to support the Dulles Metrorail project.

"The tolls will make some people unhappy. Some people are already unhappy but we have to keep our eye on the prize," said Douglas Koelemay, a member of the Commonwealth Transportation Board, which oversees some of Virginia's transportation spending. Koelemay is also a member of the Dulles Corridor Advisory Committee.

Over the next three years, the toll increases are not significant enough that the airports authority expects people to look for alternative routes into the city center, said Taylor.

"It is below a level where you would start to see riders drop away," he said.

But toll road revenue has already declined slightly since 2006, in part because of a previous rate increase, according to the airports authority presentation.

Despite the initial drop off, the toll road revenue has stayed stable over the past three years, even in the midst of national economic downturn and an increase in gas prices. Taylor said this speaks to the strength of the toll road's revenue capacity because it indicates that several people will continue to use the road during financially tough times.

STILL, THE TWO elected officials on the Dulles Corridor Advisory Committee appeared uncomfortable with the level of funding Dulles Toll Road users were being asked to provide for the Metrorail extension.

"Fairfax and Loudoun County will continue to press for more federal funding. I think the state needs to help out more too. Virginia stands to gain a lot from the economic development this project will generate," said Scott York (I), Loudoun County Board of Supervisors chairman.

Under the current payment structure for the rail extension, the federal government has provided $900 million, approximately 17.1 percent of the project's funding, and Virginia has provided $275 million, approxi-

BUSINESS NOTES

Gina M. Tufano of RE/MAX Select Properties Inc. has earned the Certified Distressed Property Expert designation, having completed extensive training in foreclosure avoidance and short sales.

This expertise timely with the real estate market ravaged by "distressed" homes in the foreclosure process. Short sales allow the cash-strapped seller to repay the mortgage at the price that the home sells for, even though it is lower than what is owed on the property.

Camp Attracts Youths to Golf

Managed by Billy Casper Golf, the 1757 Golf Club launches new junior golf program.

BY JASON MACKEY
THE CONNECTION

A few minutes after nine o'clock on Friday morning, June 26, Adam Harrell walked outside of the pro shop at the 1757 Golf Club in Ashburn and asked a group of campers if they were excited. And if they were, he said, they should raise their hand. Everyone did.

"We've never had 100 percent before," Harrell said.

That's when Colin Chung, one of Harrell's 12 campers for the day, reminded the 1757 Golf Club's new director of instruction that it was only the first week of the first summer camp. That's why he had never had a 100-percent showing of support before.

Harrell laughed, knowing Chung was partly right. He also wasn't about to complain. Last week was the first week of summer camp for the 1757 Golf Club's revamped junior program and, according to Harrell and several campers, everything was a success.

"It was better than I expected," said 11-year-old Dorothy Dimitrew, who, along with her sister, Audrey Dimitrew, has been playing with the Loudoun Junior Golf Association this summer. "It's not as serious as I thought it would be, but it's been fun. I learned how to grip [the club] and how I should line up my shots."

"I needed to learn golf, fix my grip and hit the ball farther," said Peter Tan, 12, of Herndon. "I've been here for five days and now I can grip the club better and hit the ball harder. It was a good time and I learned a lot."

Hired in mid-May to become the 1757 Golf Club's director of golf instruction, Adam Harrell has made learning a point of emphasis within the club's summer camp program.

The week-long junior summer camps will continue throughout the summer and wrap up on Friday, Aug. 21. Camps focus on fundamentals — full swing, woods, putting, chipping, rules and etiquette. The cost of a half-day camp (9 a.m.-noon) is $295 per camper for the week, while full day tuition runs $495. For more information about the junior golf camps, visit www.1757golfclub.com or contact Harrell at 703-444-0901.

THAT THE CAMP was such a success surprised Harrell, who had a little more than three weeks to lay the groundwork for it. On the site of what was once called The Presidential before it filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy last September, the 1757 Golf Club was purchased in mid-May by Billy Casper Golf.

While there are currently 10 playable holes on site, an 18-hole championship course designed by architect David Heatwole is slated for completion in the spring of 2010. And along with the course, a 16,000-square-foot clubhouse is also scheduled to open next spring. The on-course work available at 1757 Golf Club has been a primary draw for the camp, too. While more than a few summer golf camps will restrict youngsters' access to the golf course, the program at 1757 Golf Club has encouraged it.

In addition to a morning filled with a classroom session and driving range work, full-day campers will spend the entire afternoon on the course.

"We want to get the kids out, introduce them to the game and play as much golf as they can," Harrell said. "So we always take them out on the course. And it is, unfortunately, a little rare."

STANDING NEXT to each other on Friday morning, Ashburn residents Dan and Jack Courtney could not look more opposite. Dan Courtney is 16. He's 6-foot-6 and wears size 18 shoes. Jack Courtney, meanwhile, is 6 and likely has never seen the big and tall section of a department store. But both Courtney brothers took part in last week's activities as half-day campers. Jack Courtney, who also plays hockey, enjoyed improving his drive, while Dan Courtney wanted to shore up his all-around game — enough to compete with his friends at Bishop O'Connell High School and so he can have a hobby for when he gets older.

"This is the first real-time golfing I've done," said Dan Courtney, who also plays basketball for the Knights. "I really wanted to get into the sport because it's something I can play when I'm old." Dan Courtney's goal fits well with Harrell's philosophy, which basically involves mixing safety, fun and instruction together. It's all part of a plan that Harrell hopes can result in a much-improved instruction program at the 1757 Golf Club and maybe result in a few lifelong golfers.

"It's safety first. Lots of fun second and then instruction," Harrell said. "If we cover the first two bases and everyone's having a good time, then we're going to get into the grip, the set, chipping, pitching. "We want to introduce them to the game and hopefully have them become a golfer for life."

WEEK IN SPORTS

Summer Camps

Claude Moore Community Center in Sterling is hosting a Fit Kids Team Building camp from Aug. 10-14 from 2-4 p.m. Cost of the camp is $95. Campers will learn to work together through a variety of exciting and hands-on games and activities. Those attending should bring a water bottle and wear sneakers. Contact the Claude Moore to register at 571-258-3500.

DMB Sports Camp allows youngsters to enjoy a mix of sports, including soccer, lacrosse, capture the flag, and basketball. For ages 6-10, camp is offered all 11 weeks of summer at the National Conference Center in Lansdowne. Each camp week includes a visit from a different professional athlete who talks about their sport, what sports they enjoyed as a child, and other interesting things about themselves. For more info: www.dmbssportscamp.com, mdudek@dmbssports.com, 703-444-8805x104.

Flag Football Registration

The Northern Virginia Youth Flag Football League is registering children ages 6-13 years old to participate in the upcoming Aug. 3-7 camp, which will be held in Ashburn from 9 a.m.-noon. This summer marks the 12th year that the Northern Virginia Youth Flag Football League has been offering fall league and summer camp programs in the Loudoun County Community. For more information or to register, visit www.novaflag.com.

NOVA Senior Olympics

The Northern Virginia Senior Olympics offers something for everyone, from track and field to chess. If 50 years of age or more and enjoy friendly competition, consider competing in the NVSO to be held Sept. 12-23. Last year more than 500 adults competed.

The 2009 events will include track and field, swimming, diving, tennis, table tennis, pickleball, racquetball, ice skating, golf, miniature golf, bowling, billiards, basketball, bait casting, frisbee throw, shuffleboard, bunco, chess, cribbage, duplicate bridge, scrabble, softball hit and throw and team line dancing. New this year are Wii bowling and mini javelin throw.

The track events will be held at Thomas Jefferson Community Center, 3501 S. 2nd St., Arlington, following opening ceremonies at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 12. A health fair, sponsored by Virginia Hospital Center, will also be held on opening day from 9 - 11 a.m. and the Traveling Bicycle Museum, 9 a.m. - noon. Other events, beginning Monday, Sept. 14, will be held at various locations in the sponsoring jurisdictions. All events are open to the public at no charge.

Registration forms are available at senior centers and senior residences or by calling 703-228-3600, ext. 9996. Seniors can also download registration forms, rules and other details at www.novaseniolympics.com. Registration deadline is Aug. 28, however, early registration is appreciated. Registration fee is $10 which includes one event; additional events are $1.

Summer Women's Basketball

LoCo Ladies Basketball League registration for the Summer 2009 season is now open. The league is for women 18 years and up of all skill levels. The summer season will run July 12 through Aug. 30 at the National Conference Center in Lansdowne on Sundays. Be sure to sign up; individual players and established teams welcome. For more info:

nity Foundation, without which the students would have had to pay to perform and ticket prices could have been higher than the $5 each ticket will cost for this show.

"It's a very reasonable price to bring a family for entertainment," Bleutge said. Not only that, but with the old classical songs sung by performers marching through the aisles and a script full of humorous dialogue highlighted by fine performances, the audience will have a blast.

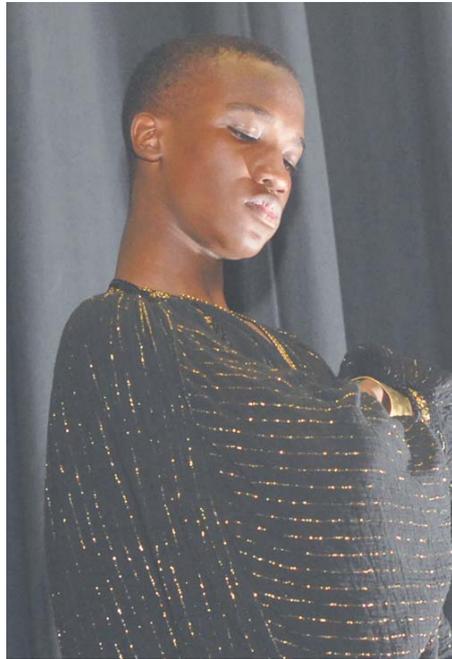

"They'll thoroughly enjoy themselves," Bleutge said.

As have the performers. The great thing about such a show, Bleutge said, is having such a wide age range that enables younger performers to learn from older, more experienced actors.

"They've definitely bonded," Bleutge said. "What's good is to see the older and the younger [actors] working together."

and Sunday, July 13. Friday and Saturday shows begin at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday shows at 2:30 p.m. On Saturday July 18 there is also a matinee performance at 2:30 p.m.

The Sterling Playmakers will present a production of "Aladdin, Jr." at the Sterling Middle School on 10-12 and 17-19. More information can be found at www.sterlingplaymakers.com.

Author Reflects on Losing Her Parents to Alzheimer's

Alzheimer's disease often become aggressive, so she was not surprised when her own father began to show aggression towards her during a visit. As she tried to calm her father, who was paranoid of his caregivers, her father swung at her with his fists. "My father wanted to hit me, and that was very emotional," she said. As she got up to leave, he followed her, this time swinging at her with a broom. Tornillo did her best not to confront her father, as she had learned from her research.

AS HER PARENTS' HEALTH continued to decline, Tornillo transferred them to a different nursing home, one that was better equipped to take care of them. Her father died soon after, following complications from a stroke he had suffered. Thirty-six days later, her mother died. "That's the longest that my mother and father were ever apart," said Tornillo, who titled her book "36 Days Apart" for that reason. "My mother knew he wasn't around," she said. "I truly think that's why she passed away 36 days later."

"36 Days Apart" stands as a dedication to Tornillo's parents, who had always encouraged her to write. "My father always said to me, 'I wish you would write', so that was my last gift to my parents," she said. The book was also inspired by the journal that Tornillo kept while she cared for her parents. Tornillo was grateful to have that journal, especially after her parents had died.

"I started looking back at it," she said, "it was my own therapy." She also said, "It was horrible for me because ... as a child I wanted my parents to comfort me but they weren't there to do it. That's why I wrote the book."

Tornillo will always appreciate the last moments she spent with her parents. "I was blessed to spend the last year and a half with them," she said. "My mom and dad were everything to me when I started taking care of them."

According to Tornillo, the most valuable lesson she learned from her experience with her parents was "how to have compassion for others, [and] compassion for self." She also said that the greatest advice she can offer to those caring for loved ones with Alzheimer's is, "It's OK to ask for help, [and] it's OK to walk away, because it's a very, very hard thing to do, even for an hour. It consumes every part of your mind." She also added, "Don't lose faith."

In light of her experience with her parents, Tornillo hopes to see a rise in awareness of Alzheimer's Disease. "I wish that it was more common for doctors to give check-ups and screenings for Alzheimer's on a yearly basis," she said. "I'm hoping there is more and more recognition that this is a health crisis."

"It's OK to ask for help."

Tolls Arising

mately 5.2 percent of the project's funding. "There is federal funding for phase 1 [which extends to Reston] but for phase 2 [which extends to Loudoun], there is no federal funding," said Sharon Bulova (D), Fairfax County chairman.

Should the project receive more federal funding, Bulova would want to revisit the toll increases and see if they could be tempered, she said.

By taxing the landowners who stand to benefit from the rail extension, Fairfax County has raised $848 million, covering about 16.1 percent of the Dulles rail cost. Loudoun County has chipped in $252 million, about 4.8 percent of the cost.

Phase 1 of the project, which terminates in Reston and runs through Tysons Corner, costs $2.75 billion. Phase 2, which extends to the Dulles airport and Loudoun, is estimated to cost $2.5 billion.

Overall, the toll road is expected to bring in $2.8 billion for both parts of the project, according to the airports authority.

Some toll road users are upset about bearing the brunt of the Dulles rail construction costs.

"The majority of the toll road revenue will be used for non-toll road purposes. That amounts to a tax that has to be paid with after-taxes money," said Rob Whitfield, a Reston resident who is troubled by the financing of the Metrorail extension.

Whitfield said it is unfair that commuters who will be coming into Tysons Corner from the east or those who would get on the train at Metro stations in McLean and Vienna do not have to pay for the cost of the subway construction. Due to where they live, they do not have to use the toll road regularly but will still benefit from the project, he said.

Landowners in Tysons Corner, who will benefit financially from the four new Metro stations, and the federal government, whose employees and contractors will use the train to get to work, should also contribute more money, he said.

"Can you think of anywhere else in the United States where such a relatively small group of people have to pay such a huge burden for a public project like this?" said Whitfield.

"Opera News;" Who New?

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As a currently-receiving-treatment cancer patient, I am often sitting in a medical-related office/facility somewhere either waiting for an appointment with a doctor, for some kind of scan/diagnostic procedure, lab work, prescription drug refill, etc. And as most people know — and likely have experienced — these waits can vary from minutes to hours.

Being prepared to fill this time is a prudent and practical step to take. Unfortunately, other than carrying my cell phone and my appointment book, I rarely do. As a consequence, if calls are not being made — or received — or notes not already written, I am left to fend for myself, you might say, in order to pass the time. And by fending, I really mean scrounging, as in looking around at the various tables, chairs, shelves, counters, etc., for something, anything, to read.

Most often, there is ample material to be found. Being able to actually read what's available though is another thing. The condition — and timeliness — of these magazines leaves a lot to be desired and may even leave a little to the imagination. Of the many magazines scattered about: Time, Newsweek, US Weekly, People, Sports Illustrated, as a few examples, most are out of date; in fact, One New Yorker Magazine had a Sept. '07 Issue date. In addition, the general condition of many of these magazines made them almost unreadable: front and/or back covers missing or torn; inside pages also missing and/or torn; many of the pages shredded, yellowed, stained, written on and some with corners bent and curled; less than ideal circumstances for someone who came ill-prepared to wait, needing something marginally stimulating to pass the time, time which needs to be filled two to three times per week on average.

Occasionally, I do find magazines that are not so difficult to read, shall I say. And during a recent visit, after encountering the normal appointment delay and magazine mayhem, I did notice one magazine that appeared by its cover's condition, to have been barely touched by human hands so I picked it up: "Opera News" was its title. And not that I know too much about the difference between "Opera News" and Oprah news (although now I know that they both have magazines), but I had never heard — or seen about the former, though I've certainly heard about — and seen — the latter.

Aside from the content (which was totally unfamiliar to me), it was the condition and publication date of the magazine that caught my eye. The condition was hot-off-the-press perfect and its publication date was the week of the month on which I found myself sitting and waiting. Of all the magazines strewn about whose content I might have had a passing-the-time interest in reading (most of which were fairly — or unfairly — unreadable as I've previously described), the one magazine that was the most physically readable and the most current was the magazine that I was least interested in reading, content-wise.

Under my present health circumstances, I can't exactly characterize this sort of irony as a cruel trick, but I can see its use a fodder for a column. Perhaps for my next appointment, I'll be better prepared to sit and wait because I expect little will change, other than me, that is.
