In preparation for the first steel beams to be placed across Route 123 at the Capital Beltway, a crane readies the cross frames that will help hold the beams in place.

First HOT Lanes Beams Go Up

Nighttime closures, detours accommodate work.

Construction workers hoisted the first steel beams of the high oc cupancy toll (HOT) lanes construction project in Tysons Corner around midnight on the night of Monday, Aug. 24. In total, 39 beams will be placed over Route 123 at its interchange with the Capital Beltway, as the highway is rebuilt and the new lanes added.

Nick Nicholson, program director for Virginia Megaprojects, said the placement of the beams over Route 123 represented a milestone in any bridge construction, when the substructure of foundations and piers is topped with the superstructure that would actually traverse the gap.

To allow for the work to be done, southbound Route 123 was closed and will be closed at night for the next couple of weeks, reopening at 5 a.m. Drivers trying to get from McLean to Tysons Corner or Vienna at night are being advised to either take the Beltway north to Georgetown Pike, where they can turn around and then get onto Route 123 south from the Beltway or take the Dulles Toll Road to Spring Hill Road or Route 7. No toll will be collected to get on the toll road from Route 123, but a toll will be collected to get off at Spring Hill Road or to get to Route 7. Those trying to go south on the Beltway from southbound Route 123 are also being advised to go north and turn around at Georgetown Pike.

The ramp from the southbound Beltway to Route 123 north was already shut down for 45 days, beginning on Sunday, Aug. 16. Drivers can instead make a short jump east on the Dulles Toll Road to get to Route 123. There are no tollbooths there.

In mid-September, the work will stop as another bridge pier is built, and then the nighttime closures and laying of beams will resume for the first half of October. The schedule, though, depends in part on the weather.

The bridge now being built will become the new southbound Beltway bridge sometime next spring, and the current bridge will be demolished to make way for a HOT lanes bridge and Dulles Rail piers, Nicholson said.

"What makes this convoluted is we have to coordinate with the Dulles Rail project," Nicholson said. Rail is to pass over the Beltway at that interchange and is being built at the same time as the HOT lanes. He said the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) and Flour were meeting weekly with Dulles Transit Partners to coordinate construction and stay out of each other's way.

Chris Collins, director of public affairs for Fluor-Lane, the company building the HOT lanes, said work on the new northbound bridge would not begin for another year or so.

Work will be cut back in November so that the outside lanes of Route 123, which closed down early this year, can be reopened for the holiday shopping season, but they will then be shut down again for at least another 18 months. HOT lanes construction is not expected to be completed until late 2012 or early 2013.

A connection from Westpark Drive to the HOT lanes is also planned for the interchange, but work has not yet begun on that project, Nicholson said.

Old Merchants Tire Demolished

The old Merchants Tire and Auto Center on Route 7 in Tysons Corner was torn down last week to make way for an entrance pavilion from the north side of the road to the planned Tysons Central Metro station. It is the only building to be demolished to make way for the first phase of Rail to Dulles, which runs to Whiele Avenue.

Merchants has relocated to a new location on Spring Hill Road. One other Route 7 business, the Business Bank, has relocated as a result of rail construction. The bank moved from the corner of Route 7 and Gosnell Road to Greensboro Drive.

A demolition team member uses a hose to keep dust down as the old Merchants Tire and Auto is torn down.

Another rushes her fifth grade son through the doors of Haycock Elementary. The mother and son are heading to writing clinic, designed to prepare students for fifth grade. Making sure that all students are at the same writing level is one of the ways that Haycock ensures it is a united school.

Haycock has a large gifted and talented program with 362 students out of the total 770 students at the school. Principal Maureen Boland said the gifted and talented program is now called the advanced learning program. Another method Haycock uses to bridge the gap between advanced and general learning students, is taking school wide field trips.

Haycock expects 770 students this year. "We are about 170 kids over capacity," Boland said. "Haycock is a great place, everyone is dying to get in here, that is why we are so overcrowded."

Last year, Haycock received the Green Apple Award for wellness. This school year, Haycock will be focusing even more on wellness by incorporating wellness lessons into the curriculum. "This year, we are aiming to get the Yellow Apple Award, an even higher wellness award than the Green Apple Award," Boland said.

This year Haycock's drama program will also be strengthened with the return of a retired music teacher who will work on a flexible basis.

School Goes International

Kent Gardens Elementary principal leads 'a fiesta school.'

At the entrance to Kent Gardens Elementary School, two messages are displayed. On one pillar, a sign reads, "Turning the Vision into Reality Child by Child," and on the other pillar the same message is written in French.

"We are becoming a duel language school," said Principal Robyn Hooker. Bulletins around the school are written in both French and English, and the weather on the student run morning show is also provided in both French and English.

Kent Gardens offers one of the two elementary school French Immersion programs in Fairfax County. More than 400 students are in the program. Hundreds apply every year for the 75 available slots in the immersion program. However, the immersion students are not the only ones receiving an education in French. Students that are not in the immersion program have lessons twice a week in French as well. Hooker wants all Kent Gardens students to receive an education in French because, she said, "all youngsters are gifted and talented."

People Need Food

Food pantries can't keep up with surging demand for food; donate now.

"Right now, things are so very bleak." That's how the coordinator of one local food bank described the situation, with demand for food up more than 50 percent from last year, and donations right now dwindling.

Schools and churches often provide the pipeline for food donations to pantries, food banks, but that pipeline runs dry in the summer.

Your family can help right now by donating food or money to your local food pantry. Plan to give again in early fall, and again at Thanksgiving and Christmas. You can organize a food drive at your place of work, or in your neighborhood.

Editorial

The ongoing recession and loss of jobs are driving the surge in families showing up a food banks. There are more unemployed people in Northern Virginia than in any other part of the state, with more than 80,000 unemployed here according to the Virginia Employment Commission. While the employment rate is lower here as a percentage of the population, this area still has the largest number of people unemployed.

People have lost their jobs, are unable to find new ones. In some cases people who own homes are stuck, unable to sell their houses because the homes are worth less than they paid for them, and are facing foreclosure as well.

These families have used up their safety net, spent their savings. They find themselves without being able to put food on the table, and they turn to local food banks, food pantries, churches and other charitable organizations for their most basic needs.

"The people coming in the door are people who have lost all their savings. The lack of jobs is the predominant theme we're hearing," said Bonnie Inman of Loudoun Interfaith.

The McLean SHARE Food Pantry, located in the McLean Baptist Church, is running low on food and other basic provisions. At this time of the year and because of the economy, food and other donations have fallen off significantly but the need for food and other necessities is growing, the organization says.

The message is the same around the area.

Gillies' Life As An Inspiration

To the Editor:

I read of the tragic passing of 20 year old Bryce Gillies ["Friends, Family Recall Bryce Gillies," McLean Connection, Aug. 12-18] who perished in the Grand Canyon and it took my breath away and broke my heart. Obviously, a stunning young man of character and accomplishment — as Eagle Scout, an impressive college student, accomplished outdoorsman/conservationist and volunteer at all stages of his young life — I send my sincerest condolences to his family, friends and all those he touched. His volunteer work to build an irrigation system for a village in Ghana was a testament to the scope of his determination, drive and limitless future of good works. His young life is already an inspiration to me and may all that love and learn about Bryce aspire to contribute and achieve in the world the way he did.

Teen Perspective

‘Doing It’ for Community

By Devon Maloney & Brittany Tholan

Devon Maloney, left, is a 14-year-old Vienna ninth grader at Marshall High. She has lived and traveled all over the world. Brittany Tholan is a 14-year-old Vienna resident who recently moved from California and now attends Langley High.

Ahhh, teens today ... when I was a kid I never texted, IMed and what’s with smiling sideways? This is what runs through a typical adult’s head, which is probably why teens end up being required to do 40 to 150 hours of community service in school a year. So is it just one of those “character building” tactics, or does it really impact teen lives?

“My parents feel like I need to get more involved, as in help more, in the community,” said Sydney Kee, 14, who lives in Great Falls and attends Langley High School. She did more than 40 hours of community service last year. “Some teens really want to help ... but others aren’t as motivated and do [community service] because they are forced to. It’s good that teachers make community service an assignment because teens who don’t do it, aren’t as aware about what’s happening around them.”

Just like any other activity that sounds a little boring to teen’s ears, there are excuses. The most common excuse heard from teens would be something like: “I don’t know what to do to ‘help the community’ or even what ‘helping the community’ means.” Well, it could mean something as little as baking 40 cookies, 10 for yourself and 30 for a senior center. Or it could mean actually going to the senior center and pushing wheelchairs around and having funny conversations with the residents. Helping your community is anything that you do voluntarily, without pay or being forced to.

“I believe that having students participate in the community teaches them how they can better serve the community as citizens,” said Daniela Goldstein, an eighth grade civics teacher at Cooper Middle School. “Although students are only required to do a certain number of hours, I hope that they learn that as citizens we should always help our community, not just for a school project.”

Currently, at Cooper Middle School, only seven hours of community service per quarter are required for the eighth grade civics class, making a total only 28 hours per year. At Marshall High School, 150 CAS (creative, action, service) hours are needed in an IB candidate’s junior and senior years. During Obama’s 2008 campaign, he made it clear that he was a big believer in youth service. “[I would like to] set a goal for all American middle and high school students to perform 50 hours of service a year, and for all college students to perform 100 hours of service a year,” he said, at one university.

After all, it was JFK who said in front of a cheering crowd, “Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.”

Longfellow Middle undergoes renovations.

Longfellow Middle School Principal Carole Kihm

Longfellow Middle School will welcome about 1,190 seventh and eighth graders on Sept. 8. This year students will go back to school to renovations, which started on June 22 and will last until June 2012. The renovation will come with 26 new classrooms out on the tennis courts — the so-called Villas of Lancer Park.

"The PTA has done a fabulous job," said Principal Carole Kihm. "They're doing a beautification of Lancer Park. There will be plants out there, benches, banners and they're putting Deer Park water in all the villas."

Due to the renovations, Kihm added a new goal to her usual goals for the school year: renovation will not impact mastering excellence.

Longfellow prides itself on its high-achieving and involved students. Last year, the Knowledge Masters team won first place in the country. Kihm has also added a new business partner for the school: Barnes & Noble. "We'll share authors," said Kihm, "when they visit Barnes & Noble, they'll also visit Longfellow." Some students will be returning to school a little early this year. Longfellow's Start to Success program, which teaches incoming seventh graders about note-taking and study skills started on Aug. 24.

Gift of Time

Immersion or not, all students at Kent Gardens participate in service learning. Hooker focuses on teaching students, she said, "that they have so many gifts to give the world, and the most precious gift is the gift of time." Hooker said she selects a "highly international staff, because we have a highly diverse population."

Kent Gardens teachers do not come just from traditional teaching backgrounds. The staff includes artists, lawyers, authors and medical school graduates.

"This is a fiesta school," said Hooker. "There is something warm and wonderful everyday of the children's lives." The PTA has a plethora of events planned for the new school year, including a Fall fete, French Bedtime Stories, International Night and March Madness.

Bob Hampton looks back on 89 years.

Bob Hampton, left, and Dennis Lucey stand near the scoreboard at McLean Little League's Hampton Field, which is named for Hampton. The two met while coaching baseball.

Some people think that McLean resident Bob Hampton is buried near a Little League field in McLean, where a stone bears his name, said friend Dennis Lucey. On a recent visit to that same field, however, Hampton was above, not below the stone. He even exhibited his pitching motion on the Little League mound.

Bob Hampton, 89, was raised near Galax, Va., which is located about seven miles from the North Carolina border. He called it a "very pleasant area" and said that it currently hosts a fiddler's convention that "people come from all over" to see. His dad loved music and spent time studying his family's genealogy.

Hampton received his first education at an early age. His mother, who taught in a one-room schoolhouse, would take the 4-year-old Hampton with her and let him sit in the classroom. As a result, he was a fourth-grader at age 6.

"That put me ahead of my class," he said.

He graduated from a Galax High School in 1935, spent a year with his grandparents, and then worked with his uncle for another year. Hampton then attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute from

Marshall High Dance Team Goes National

CONTRIBUTED

The George C. Marshall High School Dance Team went to the Universal Dance Association Dance Camp in Ocean City, Md. in July. Their goal was to qualify for The National Dance Competition in Orlando, Fla. in 2010. They also competed in many other dance categories and put together an additional team routine. The team won numerous awards including: 33 Blue Ribbons, 19 Champion Drill Down Ribbons. 12 Special Recognition Ribbons for various talents; The Spirit Award for all four days of camp; Second Place Trophy for the Home Routine, which qualified them for the National Competition in February in Orlando, Fla.; Superior Trophy awarded by UDA Staff; Most Improved Trophy, which was judged by UDA Staff for most progress during the four days at camp; Exceptional Coaches Award (Voted on by UDA Staff).

They started practice immediately after tryouts in May and gave up most of their summer to meet every day. The hard work really paid off for them. Winning second place and receiving the Superior Trophy has given them the opportunity to compete at the National Level in Orlando, Fla. in February and they also have been invited to perform at the 83rd Annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City 2009, the Capital One Bowl, Pre-Game Performance in Orlando, Fla. December 2009.

Rivals Compete for Fisher House

Alumni Golf Tournament brings together McLean, Langley, Bishop O'Connell graduates.

By Kenneth Burchfiel
The Connection

McLean and Langley high schools are known to be ri vals. Jeff Johnson, who graduated from McLean in 1977, remembers when at least one McLean student poured gasoline on the grass at Langley. Jackie Johnson, Jeff's wife and a class of 1980 graduate at McLean, recalls the time when Langley spray-painted the McLean track.

But on Oct. 1, alumni from those schools and Bishop O'Connell High School will come together for a golf tournament that supports the Walter Reed Fisher House.

"We were still friends" in high school, said Jackie Johnson, the Alumni Golf Tourney organizer. "It's just a fun event."

THE MCLEAN, LANGLEY O'CONNELL Alumni Golf Tourney has taken place since 2005. It commenced as part of the Johnson couple's efforts to support the Walter Reed Fisher House, which they learned about when delivering donations to the Walter Reed Army Medical Center. According to its Web site, the Fisher House charity provides a home environment for military families staying with an injured family member. Forty-three such houses exist in proximity to military health facilities.

"Our military families are probably the most deserving," said Doug Megill, a Sterling resident who graduated from Langley in 1979. Megill is the Langley representative for the tournament's golf committee.

The competition will take place at the Herndon Centennial Golf Course, located on 909 Ferndale Ave.

"It's a great course," Jeff Johnson said. He hit a hole in one on the 14th hole last year.

"We're honored to have [the tournament]," said course superintendent Mike Mueller. Normal preparations are in store for the event. Those include mowing the course surface and raking the bunkers. Mueller hopes to play host to the tournament in the future as well.

Langley and McLean might be rivals, but that did not stop students at competing schools from interacting. Although "people split up" when they attended different high schools in the area, they "still kept in touch," said James Whittaker, a member of McLean's class of 1976 and one of the sponsors for the event.

Whittaker first heard about the Fisher House from the Johnsons. He agreed to play in and sponsor the first Alumni Golf Tourney and invited friends from other high schools to play.

Of the $100 entrance fee, $25 goes directly to the Fisher House, Jeff Johnson said. That price provides players with 18 holes of golf, a golf cart, range balls, lunch and dinner and prizes.

REGISTRATION for the event will begin on Thursday, Oct. 1, at 10:45 a.m. After a lunch, the tournament itself will begin at 12 p.m. with a shotgun start. An awards ceremony and dinner are planned after the competition.

Jackie Johnson would like to see two things develop for the tournament in the future: an increase in female participation, and additional support from companies.

"We're looking for more sponsors," she said.

Every school has won the event so far, with McLean securing first place last year. But rivalries aside, this year's competitors will all support the same team.

"The winner will be the Fisher House," Jeff Johnson said.

Schlesinger Wins Four Medals in Colorado Springs

McLean figure skater shines at national scene.

Hannah Schlesinger, 10, of McLean, took home gold, silver, bronze and pewter medals at the 2009 United States Figure Skating Association's National Showcase Competition, which took place Aug. 13-15, at the World Arena in Colorado Springs, Colo. More than 190 qualifying skaters from around the United States participated in the National Showcase, which emphasizes artistic and theatrical figure skating. Schlesinger ended up fourth overall, earning a pewter medal, in the Preliminary Extemporaneous category, an event in which all the skaters must choreograph their own programs to the same music in a closed-door, 45-minute warm up with no assistance from coaches. Her national medal-winning performance was choreographed by Hannah just moments before she took the ice, to Ray Charles' rendition of "Hit the Road, Jack." She earned a gold medal in her Light Entertainment qualifier, performing a program choreographed to the bluegrass classic, "Foggy Mountain Breakdown." She finished fifth in the nation in that category. Schlesinger earned a bronze medal in her Dramatic Entertainment qualifier, performing a program choreographed to Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker." She finished sixth in the nation in that category. Schlesinger was one of only two skaters in her division to make all three final rounds, and one of only nine skaters to receive National medals. Her coaches, Inna Volyanskaya and Nick Perna, worked with Schlesinger for months prior to the competition, honing these programs. The full results of the event are available at www.icenetwork.com.

McLean resident Bob Hampton demonstrates his pitching abilities at the McLean Little League fields on Westmoreland Street. Hampton coached and managed Little League baseball for 40 years and continues to do so on an on-demand basis.

Four Decades in Little League

1937 to 1941. The college was "almost exclusively" a military school at the time, he said, but he chose to remain a civilian, as he had "no desire" to enter the infantry.

HAMPTON found employment in the Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service, which served to help prevent soil erosion on landowners' property. But he found himself drafted for the military not long after entering that field, and chose to go into the Navy.

After training at Notre Dame, Hampton traveled to San Francisco for service on the U.S.S. Bulmer, a destroyer that guarded merchant traffic on the route to Pearl Harbor.

"We were doing pretty easy duty," he said. Thanks to food stops in San Francisco, "we ate extremely well."

The destroyer later moved to the Atlantic for convoy duty. This time, it was German U-Boats that his ship guarded against.

After closing out his service with the Navy, Hampton traveled to Cornell for graduate school. While there, he served as an assistant for Herrell DeGraff, a professor whom he called a "tremendous man with a personality equally impressive."

Before receiving his degree, however, Hampton received a tuberculosis diagnosis in 1948. He spent time at a hospital for treatment and eventually received surgery on his lungs to aid in the treatment process.

After recovering from the disease, Hampton received a degree in marketing, with minors in international trade and cultural anthropology. He taught as an assistant marketing professor, then worked for the Dow Chemical Company. He changed careers in 1959, joining International Paper, for which he worked in New York. Hampton was later promoted to the position of marketing research manager there.

After his many changes of residence, Hampton settled in McLean, where he has lived for the past 45 years. He arrived in the Washington, D.C. area in 1964 to work in the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives trade association. When an employee cutback occurred in 1982, he joined the Automobile Importers Association. He called his 15 years there as a consultant the "most interesting part of my life."

In addition to his work in the D.C. area, Hampton established himself as a member of the McLean Little League community. A field in the McLean Little League system is named in his honor.

He began coaching baseball in 1965 and made sure to give his team plenty of batting practice. The many rocks he threw as a kid helped build his endurance for throwing pitches to Little Leaguers.

Hampton spent around 40 years as a coach and manager for various Little League teams. He won the McLean championship in 1972 with "a wonderful team," and recalls coaching Chris Pedersen, a "top pitcher" who sends him a Christmas card each year. The coaching veteran remains involved with youth baseball today, but mainly as an "on-demand" coach.

Hampton's life has not been a solo affair. He married Ruth Rosenbeck in 1943, having met her near the Brooklyn Navy Yard and remains with her to this day. He has six children as well.

MCLEAN RESIDENTS may know Hampton by the extensive tree planting he has done in the area. He "had the most beautiful wood lot" while working in New York, he said, which helped inspire him to increase the amount of foliage in McLean.

He has planted trees at seven different schools, including a group of white pines at McLean High. He also teamed up with Dick Poole, trees committee chairman of the McLean Citizens Association.

In his 89 years, Hampton has seen a diverse portrait of the world. His jobs and travels have taken him to all 50 states and some 20 to 30 countries. From those trips and perhaps from everyday life as well, he has learned one important lesson.

"The world is full of great people," he said.
