Fairfax County Public Schools FY 2013 Proposed Budget News

Coming in February: School Nutrition News

January marks the beginning of the budget process for the Fairfax County School Board. Superintendent Jack Dale released the FY 2013 Proposed Budget based on priorities set by the School Board. The $2.4 billion proposed budget is a 9 percent increase ($202.3 million) over the FY 2012 budget.

This Just In:

The total number of FCPS students taking AP and IB exams continues to rise. More than 16,100 students (5.4 percent increase) took AP exams and more than 2,600 students (2.1 percent increase) took IB exams in 2011.

The proposed budget includes 721.3 new positions, most of which are being added to address rising enrollment -- projected to be 181,608 students in FY 2013. In addition to increased enrollment, the proposed budget also takes into consideration changes in student demographics, including an increase in the number of students receiving English for Speakers of Other Languages services and the number of students eligible for free and reduced-price meals. Extended learning time for students and extended time for teachers are also included in the budget.

"We continue to dedicate the majority of our budget, 85.9 percent, and the majority of our positions, 94.6 percent, directly to instructional programs," said Dale. The proposed budget includes a 2 percent market scale adjustment and a step increase for eligible employees as well as a salary adjustment for custodial positions. "It is imperative FCPS stay competitive in the marketplace in order to attract the best employees to support student success," said Dale.

FCPS receives the majority of its funding from Fairfax County and this year will request an increase of 8.4 percent over FY 2012. The FY 2013 Proposed Budget includes an increase in state funding due to increasing enrollment and the state's update to the Local Composite Index. However, federal revenue is decreasing due to the loss of

The projected cost per pupil for FY 2013 will be $13,654, an increase of 6.5 percent over FY 2012. FCPS ranks fifth among 10 area school systems in cost per pupil and has the lowest percentage of leadership team and management positions in relation to total positions of all Washington area school systems for FY 2012, according to the Washington Area Boards of Education.

FCPS operates 196 schools and centers including 139 elementary schools, 23 middle schools, 3 secondary schools, 24 high schools, and 7 special education centers. Two new schools will open in FY 2013, an elementary school at the Lacey site in Annandale and a middle school at the South County site in Lorton.

Getting To Know Us

FCPS Budget Coordinator Matthew Norton

Determining an operating budget for a school system the size of Fairfax County is a lengthy and detailed process. A critical component of the budget is calculating the number of staff needed at each school based on student enrollment and the services provided.

Matthew Norton, a coordinator for budget services, works closely with the schools to determine appropriate staffing levels for each school

"My job involves collecting large amounts

Did You Know

FCPS student enrollment has grown by more than 15,000 students of data from various sources including enrollment, free and reduced-price meals eligibility, special education services and enrollment, square footage of buildings, and other information and assimilating it so we can determine the number of teachers, instructional assistants, special education assistants, assistant principals, administrative, custodial, and other positions that will be budgeted for each school building," said Norton.

He also works with the Department of Special Services to calculate how many students will need special services and what will be the cost of providing those services.

Norton has worked for FCPS for more than 12 years. He says his greatest challenge is working with the large volume of data and helping schools understand the process and the calculations used to determine staffing.

"One of the challenges is that the budget process is very fluid from the time Dr. Dale proposes the budget, through finding out how much the county government will transfer to the school system, to the time the budget is actually approved by the School Board," said Norton. "But it's a detailed process I enjoy being a part of."

ith the sluggish economy at the fore-front of voters' minds this year, former Democratic Gov. Tim Kaine hopes to put fiscal issues at the top of his campaign to fill the seat vacated by Democratic U.S. Sen. Jim Webb. In an interview on Thursday, Jan. 19, Kaine said he hopes to promote a "talent economy" in Washington. It's a reality the former governor says has become evident in the last few decades, when Virginia moved from being one of the lowest median income states to being one of the wealthiest.

"How did Virginia move from sluggish economy to strong economy?" asked Kaine. "I would argue that the main thing that moved it for us was that we decided to become a talent economy."

For Kaine, the key to pursing the talent economy and fixing the broken economy is education reform. One example would be creating accountability reports for every state's public education system, an effort he said would create a sense of competition between the states that would improve education nationwide. He would also invest more money in career and technical education, and he's critical of the Obama administration for failing to take action in this area. Kaine's vision of the talent economy also expands beyond education reform, encompassing a broad range of economic policy including everything from workforce development to comprehensive immigration reform. And he hopes to land a spot on the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee to push his talent agenda.

"Kaine's agenda sounds like a very classic Democratic argument," said Kyle Kondik, political analyst with the University of Virginia Center for Politics. "It's aimed at improving people's prospects without endorsing socialism."

KAINE'S CAMPAIGN is aimed solidly at budget issues and the economy, hoping to capitalize on lingering uncertainty from the global economic crisis and persistently high unemployment figures. Kaine says balancing the budget will involve tax increases and cent for months on end and high fuel prices continuing to hurt Virginia families and businesses, we need a voice in Washington that will represent Virginia values," said Del. Ron Villanueva (R-21). "George Allen will fight every day to unleash our energy resources for jobs and security and that's why we need him in the U.S. Senate."

KAINE'S OPPONENTS are also focused on the economy, although they're attacking the former governor from the right. Last week, Kaine's decision to back President Barack Obama's decision to reject an application to build the Keystone XL oil pipeline

"I'm not going to be a senator telling Nebraska, 'You've got to have this whether you like it or not," said Kaine. "I frankly think in terms of energy policy that there are a lot more immediate and likely successful strategies."

ASIDE FROM TRYING to help the sluggish economy by pushing a talent economy, Kaine hopes to find common ground in the Senate, which he calls a "broken institution." If elected, Kaine said he wants to find a Republican senator elected at the same time and join the bipartisan and moderate Gang of Six, potentially making it a Gang of Eight. By casting himself in this role, budget cuts. Kaine said he would let the massive tax cuts created by former President George W. Bush expire at the top end. Specifically, Kaine said, he would propose eliminating the Bush tax cuts for those who make more than $500,000.

"Higher income earners are job creators," said David Logan, economist with the conservative Tax Foundation. "So Kaine is talking about taking money from people who are most likely to invest in the economy."

On the issue of cutting the budget, Kaine, trumpeting his time as governor, said he had a better record than Allen. When asked what kinds of cuts he would make in Washington, Kaine said he wants to allow the federal government to negotiate with pharmaceutical companies to reduce the price of drugs covered by Medicare. And he anticipates cost savings associated with a smaller military as the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan draw down. He would also like to close some overseas bases, although he couldn't say which ones or how much money would be saved. Critics say it's a flawed agenda.

"With unemployment stuck above 8 per-brought criticism from former Republican Gov. George Allen and Del. Bob Marshall (R-13). Both campaigns hoped to use the issue to tie Kaine to Obama and portray the Democratic Party as irresponsible.

"The Keystone pipeline could produce thousands of American jobs, reduce American dollars going to regimes with little sympathy for western democratic governments and increase America's energy security," said Marshall. "What is the real reason Tim Kaine and Barack Obama are in a rush to avoid constructing this pipeline?"

Kaine rejected criticism from Allen supporter Del. Terry Kilgore (R-1) that his support of the Obama's decision on the pipeline shows that he is a "reflex liberal," citing his elimination of the estate tax and Forbes Magazine description of Virginia as the most business friendly state all four years he was governor. Kaine also said that the Keystone decision needed to be thoroughly analyzed, and he criticized Congress for trying to force a decision in a short period of time and tying it to the payroll tax extension. He was also critical of Kilgore and Allen for pushing the pipeline when Nebraska was opposed to it.

Kaine hopes to find what he calls "common ground" with Republicans rather than holding up nominations such as the administrator for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid, which has been vacant since 2006.

"Under both presidents under both parties, the advice and consent process in the Senate has fallen apart because they utilize secret holds and cloture," he said. "But more than that, they just don't work together."

He acknowledged that a freshman senator wouldn't be able to do much about secret holds and cloture, although he said something had to be done about excessive partisanship and an unwillingness to work together. Because of the dynamics of the House of Representatives, he said, that would not be the place where the culture of Washington begins to change. The Senate, on the other hand, operates more on personal relationships, and so it would be a more logical place to begin increasing bipartisanship in Washington.

"More senators want to work together, but their chafing under each of their respective sets of leadership," he said. "The president says this, that we're four or five votes away from a mutiny in the Senate, and that would be a good thing."

t. John Neumann Catholic Church provided shelter to almost 40 people per night last week, as part of FACETS' Hypothermia Prevention Program, which provides shelter for homeless people in the area during the winter months.

More than 35 different faith communities around the county participate in the program which participate in the program, which goes on from November to March at rotating churches.

"We're trying to make sure people have a place to sleep when it's cold, and we also try to provide food, services and entertainment," said Mary Supley Foxworth, assistant director of development for FAC-ETS, which is a Fairfax-based nonprofit.

The idea is to get homeless people into a warm building on winter nights.

"We're trying to get the clients into a place of safety, so we don't hear these sad stories about homeless people freezing to death," said Joe Burke, treasurer of FACETS, and a member of St. John Neumann.

Since 2009, FACETS has also provided case management at he shelters, allowing the clients to take advantage of the various services offered.

"Many of our clients have been homeless for a long time, and our case managers provide them with opportunities to strengthen their life skills," Supley Foxworth said. "At the end of the first season, 18 of them found housing, so now it's required."

THE SHELTER opens every night around 5:30 p.m. Clients show up on their own or are bussed in from other parts of the county. On Thursday, Jan. 19, the Bank Street Band played for them as they ate, and there were even stations set up where they could get foot baths.

"Feet are one of the most affected parts of the body when you're homeless, they get fungus, calluses and blisters, and they can get very sore," said Lori McLean, a nurse and member of the St. John Neumann Health Ministry. "We're here to give those feet some TLC, and we're following our mission, literally washing the feet of our disciples."

According to FACETS, 141 people spent at least one night at one of the shelters last winter.

"A quarter of the people living in Northern Virginia can't meet their basic needs," said Amanda Andere, executive director of FACETS. "Sixty percent of the people we serve work every day, but still can't afford to live in this community."

One of their clients, Deric, who asked only to be identified with his first name, has experienced first-hand what FACETS can do to break the cycle of homelessness. He switched jobs back in 2008, but the new job fell through, and he found himself unable to find a new one.

"Eventually I fell behind on rent, and I was literally homeless for almost two years," he said. "I ended up coming to one of the shelters when it got cold, and it was amazing to walk into a warm place with food and caring people."

Deric began taking advantage of FACETS' case management services, and in June 2010 he was able to find an apartment through FACETS. He was also able to find seasonal work during the holidays, and is currently looking for a full time job.

"The best thing is knowing where I'll be every night, and that wasn't always the case," he said. "My life is in such a better place. I'm still looking for a job, but I've taken the first step and have a place to live."

School Board Needs Your Input

By Janie Strauss CHAIRMAN, FAIRFAX COUNTY School Board

ecently, Fairfax County Public Schools Superintendent Jack Dale presented the School Board with his proposal for next year's budget. The proposed $2.4 billion budget outlines programs and services for our growing student population, which is projected to be 181,608 students for the school year 2012-13. It also includes funds to give eligible employees a step increase and a 2 percent market scale adjustment.

Our population is projected to grow by more than 3,900 students, and many of these students face great challenges. In addition, we are opening two new schools: a middle school at the South County site in Lorton and an elementary school at the Lacey site in Annandale. To meet our enrollment growth and other critical needs, the budget proposes to add 721.3 positions, the overwhelming majority of which are school-based great fiscal responsibility during these tough economic times. During the past four years (FY 2009-FY2012), we took reductions and cost avoidances totaling more than $475 million and eliminated more than 1,400 positions.

Now the School Board needs to hear from you as we consider the Superintendent's proposal over the next few weeks, then move to adopt the advertised budget on Feb. 9. Here's what you can do to get involved. First, learn more about the budget by visiting www.fcps.edu where you'll find details on all aspects of the budget and the process. Second, sign up to speak at the board's public hearing on Jan. 30-31. Or third, send your school board member an email with your comments.

The quality of our public schools is important to our children's well-being and the economic strength of our county. We look forward to hearing from our citizens.

hat is what a reporter for Norfolk's Virginian Pilot called Reston in a column recently. She was reacting to a bill in the legislature that would create a Reston license plate. "Is there a more soulless spot in the Commonwealth than this bland ant colony near Dulles?" she wrote.

I was aghast reading it. How could someone be so unaware? How could an otherwise reputable and progressive newspaper print such a misdirected statement? Are there others who are so misinformed about our community?

Unfortunately, her column is an example of the misunderstandings that are too common across the regions of Virginia and that make the state legislative process challenging. I know the city where her newspaper is located; I lived there for almost four years while I completed a degree at Old Dominion University. It is a struggling city with too much poverty, perpetual redevelopment projects, and a continuing struggle to keep its downtown alive. Derogatory comments could be made about the city, but they would serve no good purpose.

I often hear comments from Northern Virginians that we do not get our fair share and that downstate gets all the state benefits. Riding through communities on a federal interstate highway, it is easy to assume that all the surrounding communities may have excellent roads when some actually have some unpaved roads. When all our Northern Virginia graduates do not get into Virginia colleges, the assumption may be that the students in southern Virginia fill all the openings. Many of these and other generalizations about communities we do

versity of Virginia, and who has been in Northern Virginia for more than four decades, I am advantaged by knowing the state and traveling about it frequently. It helps me in the legislative process. A part of my responsibility is helping persons in other areas of the state get to know Reston and Northern Virginia better. I often introduce commending resolutions for the General Assembly to pass including ones for Best of Reston awardees as a way to help my colleagues get to know my district.

Back to Kerry Dougherty, who wrote the misdirected comments about Reston: I have written her a long, introductory letter about the place I call home with the biggest soul I know of and that is anything but bland. You can help me educate her. Send her an email telling her your views of Reston at are unworthy of consideration. kerry.dougherty@cox.net. Be nice. Let's all invite her to visit our community. We can turn her into a downstate advocate for us. I cannot wait to read the column she writes when she really gets to know us!

esides a race for President in 2012, we have elections for one-third of 100 U.S. Senate seats and all 435 seats in the House of Representatives. The House has a substantial right-wing Republican majority. Prospects for Democratic gains are good, but a takeover is unlikely. In the Senate, a Democratic majority of 51-47-2 is precarious. The Virginia contest to replace a one-termer Jim Webb PROGRESSIVE could be pivotal in averting a takeover by the Tea Party's righteous renegades.

NDEPENDENT

To date there is little media coverage of the Senate primary races. What coverage there is leads readers to believe there are only two candidates, both former governors—Democrat Tim Kaine and Republican George Allen. There are in fact six more announced candidates, two Democrats and four Republicans for the June primaries. The latter have proposals for action if elected, but none of their visions appear in the media. Granted Kaine and Allen records include major elective office (governor, Senator) while the others have much experience in other realms. It seems the media preemptively decides the newcomers, although eligible for public office, The fourth estate's failure to cover candidates not on their list of usual suspects limits the field, and is one of several reasons (money being number one) that democratic governance is in decline in the U.S.

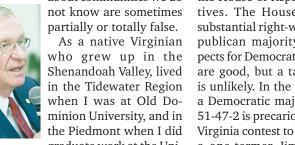

Given the records of the "estab-

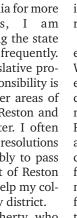

ing his re-election bid, and his racist tendencies were apparent, capped by use of the racial slur "macaca" captured on video. As Governor, Kaine proved to be an agent of inequality, abolishing the fairest tax of all-the estate tax. Then, as Chairman of the Democratic

The other candidates deserve a look and your consideration. Fairfax Democrat Courtney Lynch (see www.lynchforva.com), for example. Ms. Lynch runs a successful leadership development consulting business, has written a best seller on the subject and is a former US Marine officer. She has a vision for guiding policies for America's future and they are more coherent than a lot of what we hear these days from dysfunction central in D.C. Is she ready to be our U.S. Senator? Check her yourself and you be the judge. I would argue that what she may lack in experience in a corrupt political system, she makes up in things like intellect, integrity and empathy.

Check out other Republicans as well: E.W. Jackson, David McCormick and Jamie Radtke. Google will tell you all about them. Just ask!

Police Place Charges in Deadly Shooting

Investigation of the shooting in the 1500 block of Cameron Crescent Drive in Reston on Monday, Dec. 12 around 4:15 p.m. – in which Colvin Morris, 34, of 7967 Richmond Highway was killed - has led police to charge three individuals: Jose Santos Ponce Zuniga, 31, has been charged with murder. Amilcar Noel Urbina Zelaya, 29, and Saul Pacheco Mejia, 45 were both charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine. All three are believed to have fled the country.

Responding to a report of a shooting, police discovered an adult male with trauma to the upper body. The victim was transported to a local hospital where he was pronounced dead.

This was the ninth homicide in Fairfax County for 2011.

Frying Pan Hosts Music Series

Artists will examine history of music.

BY ALEX McVeigh

usicians Katy Benko and Julie Crosson will perform at Frying Pan Farm Park's Raise the Rafters winter music series. The series will examine the history of music from the birth of rock and roll, through it's impact on social change and covering the impact women have had on the genre

"The first installment was really neat, covering the birth of rock and roll, it's hard to imagine a time before that for me," said Peggy Poole of Herndon. "I grew up with Buddy Holly and the Beatles, but I learned that they weren't even at the beginning, they were sort of the second generation."

The first installment took place Jan. 15, which covered the origin of rock. On Sunday, Feb. 19 the duo will explore the social and political change that rock music inspired and that was inspired by it.

The final performance, on Sunday, March 18 will examine the role of women and how they made a big impact in musical culture, even from its earliest day. "I'm really looking forward to the final one, I can't wait to hear about women who shaped rock and roll, because that's certainly not a story that's told very The performances are co-sponsored by the Fairfax County Park Authority and the Council for the Arts of Herndon. Each performance will take place in the Visitor's Center from 2 to 4 p.m. More information is available at http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/parks/fpp/

Looking for Elusive First Win in District

Hornets have lost close games in Concorde.

By Rich Sanders The Connection

he Herndon High girls' basketball team came up just short in a 49-46 overtime loss at Concorde District opponent Westfield last Friday night.

Westfield, one of the better teams in the Northern Region, improved its record to 11-5 overall and 2-2 in district play. Herndon, meanwhile, slipped to 8-7 and 0-4.

It was a tough defeat for the Hornets, who lost their fourth game in a row (all district contests). But they gave the Bulldogs everything they had in Friday's affair. Trailing 26-17 at halftime, Herndon put the defensive clamps on Westfield in the third quarter when it outscored the home team 10-2 to get within 28-27. The Hornets then scored 13 points to the Bulldogs' 12 in the final quarter to force the overtime. There, Westfield edged Herndon 9-6 to pull off the

It was Herndon's second overtime loss in its last three games. The Hornets had also lost an OT heart-breaker, 68-67, to visiting district opponent Centreville on Jan. 10.

Herndon's last victory prior to the recent four-game losing streak came in overtime, 61-57, at Edison High (National District) on Jan. 3.

Herndon was hoping to get back into the win column this week with scheduled district home games versus Robinson on Tuesday, Jan. 24 and Oakton this Friday, Jan. 27. Both opponents are tough with the Rams entering this week 11-4 and the defending district champion Cougars being unbeaten at 16-0.

"We've done well in some areas, and severely underachieved in others," said Herndon High head coach Reggie Barnes, of his team's overall play this season. "We've challenged our ladies to step up and play like we know they're capable of playing."

In Friday's loss to Westfield, Herndon was led in scoring by junior Chloe Owens, who finished with 19 points as did Westfield's Jules Abruzzo. Deborah Headen, a senior, was also in double figures for the Hornets with 11 points and teammate Alexis Brown, a junior, contributed six points. Both Headen and Brown pulled down seven rebounds for Herndon, as did senior Brandi Delgado (4 points).

Herndon High girls' head coach Reggie Barnes saw his Hornets win their first six games this season.

HERNDON WON its first six games this season, including a 52-36 non-district win at Lake Braddock (Patriot District) on Dec. 13. Owens tallied 21 points in that win over the Bruins as the Hornets improved to 5-0.

They made it 6-0 with a 59-44 non-district home win over Hayfield (National District) on Dec. 16. Owens, Headen and Brianna Moses scored 21, 20, and 11 points, respectively in that win over the Hawks.

Herndon's first loss of the season came in its following game on Dec. 20 when it fell at home to cross-town rival South Lakes (Liberty District), 66-53. Owens led her team with 18 points and 10 rebounds and Headen netted 15 with seven boards. Also for the Hornets, Brown scored seven points and had 10 rebounds. South Lakes, meanwhile, received strong outings from Abigail Rendle (21 points, 9 rebounds), Caitlin Jensen (15 points), and Gabrielle Schultz (13 points, 8 rebounds).

"We are looking to get out of our minilosing streak," said coach Barnes, prior to last Friday's loss to Westfield. "We have gone back to basics and refocused on our defense and free throw shooting."

Barnes said his team's top players have been Owens (14 points per game), Headen (13 points per game), Moses, and senior Jenna Aschenbach.

"Brandi Delgado and Alexis Brown have also played well for us, especially with their great hustle and defense," he said.

The coach said his team has to improve its play later in games in order to gain some wins in the district.

Presenting Reston's History

Historians present story of colonial Reston.

By Alex McVeigh
The Connection

ong before Reston became the community it is today, it was almost an afterthought by those who owned the land. The Reston Historic Trust hosted a program about the early history of Reston Thursday, Jan. 19, featuring historians Karen Washburn and Ted McCord at the Reston Community Center Lake Anne.

Washburn told the story of the Northern Neck Proprietary Grant, which was a land grant that included Reston. The land was largely unsettled until Thomas, Fifth Lord Fairfax of Cameron inherited fivesixths of the property through his wife's father, and they began to explore the area.

"Land ownership then was not as it is today. If you had a proprietorship, you owned the land, and you would give others the right to use it. The others could use the land as they saw fit, but still had to pay rent," Washburn said. "The owners who bought the land didn't want to move up from the Tidewater region, so Reston remained vacant."

Brent Reolon of Reston, who considers himself a history buff, said he was first attracted to the program when it promised a glimpse into the pre-1964 days of Reston.

"One of the things I like about this community is that its history can be traced back to literally the beginning, to the day Robert Simon founded Reston," he said. "But for me, almost everything before that was a blank, so it was interesting to see whose hands this land passed through, and it made me chuckle to think how nobody wanted it for so long."

The land was mostly primordial forest then, and with no easy access to rivers, it wasn't the most desirable land.

"There just wasn't much to look at other than woods," McCord said. "Even in the Tidewater region, most of the settlements were along the major rivers."

Washburn talked about how Robert "King" Carter, who managed the land for Lord Fairfax, owned the land that later became Herndon, but didn't seem to be interested in settling Reston.

"My conjecture is that Robert was looking for copper on his land near Herndon, and he thought there might be some in Reston, but he was wrong," she said

After the Tidewater soil was used up by excessive tobacco farming, people eventually moved into this area of the proprietary. After the Revolutionary War, Benjamin Thornton purchased 8,663 acres.

"His rationale was that the land was right between Alexandria's ports, and merchants needed to get their goods to the Shenandoah, and they would need to build a railroad on the land," Washburn said. "He thought it would go through the middle of the parcel, and he was right."

The crowd at the community center filled the Jo Ann Rose Gallery to capacity, and several audience members said they were interested to hear about the land's role in relation to the rest of the county.

"It was neat to hear about how these places started out as the same bundle, and then became Herndon, Reston, Great Falls," said Peter Saules of Reston. "It's funny how all these boundaries that mean so much when it comes to mailing, schools, tax districts and that sort of stuff were often created by a seemingly random decision a few hundred years ago."

ZONE 1 AD DEADLINE: Tuesday 4 p.m.

For All I Know...

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Skipping my monthly targeted treatment (Avastin) because my kidneys are under stress might be a good thing. It might mean my body doesn't need (it certainly doesn't want) to be infused. Alternatively, it might mean that, after nearly 33 months of it, it can't take it anymore (even though it may need it). Outliving your original prognosis and existing between the cracks - and beyond the cracks - of heretofore standard protocols/life-expectancy for stage IV lung cancer patients who live years longer than anticipated, presents its own unique set of problems (maybe challenges would be a better description). Although many books have been written on the lung cancer subject, the number of chapters written about individuals who don't succumb to their disease – according to the statistical history of similarly diagnosed patients, is unfortunately a function of supply and demand/cause and effect: there aren't enough survivors.

As one of the few-and-far-between survivors, my treatment is subject to change and subject as well to how I/my body tolerates what is going into it and how that is measured coming out. Whatever I think I feel is not nearly as important as what the lab work indicates is happening – internally. Absent any complaints/observations from me concerning my symptoms – or lack thereof, the tale of the tape is the blood and urine that I provide every month. After providing an early morning sample, later that day or mid morning the following day, I will have received confirmation that my ongoing treatment can proceed or that it can't. Sometimes my treatment has been delayed a week, other times by as long as a month; waiting for levels to return to semi normal – for me, under treatment, that is.

Given that I am now officially an anomaly: still alive; what happens next, what timetable for treatment will likely follow, what schedule of medications and/or scans will occur going forward, is cast in quicksand. Ever-changing, always in the pursuit of prudence and of not causing collateral damage/making matters worse by being too aggressive or unresponsive to what my body (via the lab work) is indicating, is the bane of my rather fortunate existence. Commonsense medicine becomes the order of the day, and the night, too. It's all one big definite-maybe, a process with which I am happy to live (live being the operative word).

I remember the early days of my diagnosis/prognosis when I was undergoing the heavy-duty (I call it "'Big") chemotherapy, an every-three week, six-hour cocktail infusion of three drugs which naturally took its toll. Like the Fairy Tales, my prognosis was grim. I recall asking my oncologist for a scenario-type assessment of my future. He was not particularly encouraging; he was honest, as I asked him to be. Nevertheless, I persisted and when the opportunity presented itself, I would ask him if it was still OK for me to buy in bulk. As I continued to not decline, his answer was always "Yes." Nearly three years post-diagnosis, I can't help wondering if skipping treatment because a certain level of something or other is off the standard charts (high or low), should I stop buying in bulk or rather continue what I'm doing because whatever it's been, with my oncologist's help, it's been working?

I don't want to make too little of what's now not happening as regularly as it once did, but it's becoming increasingly difficult to not make too much of it, either.
