Fairfax County says Verizon 'failed completely' during June 29 derecho.

he eerie silence is what Steve Souder, Fairfax County's 911 director, remembers about the night of June 29, when the derecho hit Fairfax County.

"The derecho was fierce and sudden, a lot of things most storms aren't," Souder said in an interview on Friday. "We were busy as all get-out."

The fast-moving storms slammed Fairfax County at about 10:20 p.m., resulting in a record number of emergency calls-a 415 percent jump for 911 dispatchers and a 2,000 percent jump for Fire and Rescue. Approximately 30 minutes later, power flickered and then died in the McConnell Public Safety and Transportation Operations Center (MPSTOC), where 46 911 dispatchers were fielding hundreds of calls.

"We can't afford to be crippled, so our generators came on, and we're rocking and rollin' in the blink of an eye," Souder said.

At 1:30 a.m., the first wave of calls started to sub-

"We're taking a deep breath and looking ahead to sunrise, when we fully expected another wave of calls as people wake up and take a look around their homes at the damage," Souder said.

THE NEXT MORNING, as hundreds of thousands of county residents awoke to smashed cars, split fences and downed power lines from uprooted trees, the county's 911 operators braced themselves for another onslaught of calls.

But the next wave never came.

"The phones just stopped ringing. We were dead in the water... Never, ever, ever has this happened to us," said Souder, who has been in emergency operations for 44 years.

Fairfax County's 911 Call Center located in the McConnell Public Safety and Transportation Operations Center, named after former Fairfax County Supervisor Elaine McConnell.

It would be several more hours before Souder and other County officials learned that no calls were getting through due to a problem with Verizon. According to Souder, all calls to Fairfax County's 911 go through the Verizon network, regardless of the commercial carrier service. From 7:36 a.m. until 3 p.m. on June 30, 911 service was completely down and for the next three days service was sporadic.

Souder said signs of trouble with Verizon came around 7 a.m., when Verizon sent a cryptic email to Fairfax County staff saying that the Arlington central office was without power or backup battery/generator. The references to Arlington, according to Souder, suggested that 911 service was affected only in Arlington County, so Fairfax County's 911 staff continued with their normal operations.

"We are completely unaware that incoming 911 call service from Verizon is slowly dying...We don't get officially notified until about 10 hours after [the] whole mess begins, which is completely unacceptable," Souder said, adding:

"It's like the Captain of the Titanic telling passengers the ship hit an iceberg when the bow is on the bottom of the ocean floor.'

As a result of this critical outage, Fairfax County submitted official comments to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) detailing what happened, suggestions for Verizon to improve its service and exhibits to show supporting documentation and Holy Transfiguration Church hosts 12th annual food and culture festival on Labor Day weekend.

By Donna Manz
The Connection

f you love freshly-roasted aromatic meats, rich syrupy pastries, exotic dance and music and very congenial people, you'll love the ethnic food festival in McLean that brightens Labor Day weekend.

For the 12th consecutive year, the parishioners of Holy Transfiguration Melkite Greek-Catholic Church on Lewinsville Road are throwing its annual Middle Eastern Food Festival on Saturday, Sept. 1, and Sunday, Sept. 2.

The Middle Eastern Food Festival was created to introduce other people to the Melkite Greek-Catholic culture and to share a meal with the community.

"You never know somebody unless you share a meal with them," said Rt. Rev. Joseph "Father Joe" Francavilla, pastor of Holy Transfiguration Church. "We're sharing something on a very fundamental level. Breaking bread, sharing food, brings people together." He also noted that the festival offers the "best food going anywhere."

THE FOOD sold at Holy Transfiguration's food festival is not simply Arabic cooking, it's cooking and baking that has been handed down from mother to daughter for generations. Everyone in the church helps out for this festival, which is as much an introduction to Arabic culture as it is a foodfest.

"The most important thing about this festival is exposure of our church to the people of the D.C. area," said Rt. Rev. "Father Charles" Aboody, festival chairman. The Rt. Rev. Charles Aboody, festival chairman, Nikki Haddad, parishioner and food coordinator, and Rt. Rev. Joseph Francavilla talk about Middle Eastern food and culture. The cookbook compiled by Haddad is on sale at the Labor Day weekend food festival on the church grounds.

church itself looks like no other in the area with its gilded icons. "We feel we have a unique church in the area, culturally and in its beauty," Father Charles said. "We're also known to have the best food in the whole D.C. area."

Admission to the festival is free. There is a charge for the food and children's activities. Plates, featuring stuffed grape leaves, kabobs, falafel, spinach and meat pies, are priced individually and served throughout the day, as are the pastries and sweets from the 50-plus-foot long dessert table. Pastries start at $1 per piece.

The highlighted meal of the food festival is the Saturday evening spit-roasted-lamb dinner, priced at $12 per person. While fragrant seasoned lamb and chicken fill the air with an aroma that only grilled meats have, most likely it's the dessert table that all age groups gravitate toward. Women of the church have been baking for weeks for this event.

"The lamb dinner is something you don't want to miss," said Nikki Haddad, food coordinator for the festival. "And we serve a great cup of real Arabic coffee."

The lamb dinner "hafli," beginning at 6 p.m., features live music and dancing, as well.

The dessert buffet showcases an assortment of honey-rich baklava made with different nuts, date-filled mamoul cookies, and pastries dipped in rosewater syrup, among a myriad of other popular Arabic sweets.

THE FESTIVAL introduced pony rides for children in 2011 and the rides were such a big hit with children that they will run again this year. The kids' all-day pass is $10. That includes unlimited activities—face painting, moon bounce, games, and one pony ride. Pony rides can be bought separately for $5 per ride.

One of the festival's non-eating highlights is the series of food demonstrations throughout the weekend by home "chefs." The focus, said Haddad, is on healthy Middle Eastern eating. At the festival, the church is selling its recipe book, compiled by Haddad, a personal chef and dietary consultant.

The Middle Eastern Food Festival kicks off at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 1, running to 11 p.m. that day, and reopens on Sunday at noon, running until 6 p.m.

To volunteer as an apprentice cook, learning Arabic recipes from the people who prepare Arabic meals at home, call Father Joe at 703-734-9566 and he'll pass your contact details along to the festival's food coordinators.

"This food festival is definitely a gift we have to share with our community," Father Joe said. "The whole person is touched by God's grace through food, music and our icons."

McLean Woman Dies Following Car Crash

Police responded to 1856 Kirby Road for the report of a crash. On Tuesday, Aug. 21 shortly before 11 a.m., 81-year-old Beverly Sargent was in her car in her driveway getting ready to head to a local service station. She had arranged for another driver to follow her and bring her home. She got out and walked to the rear of her car to make sure the other car, a 2002 Toyota Camry, was behind her. The 86-year-old man in the Camry started his car and put it in gear. His car started to roll forward and he was not able to stop before striking Sargent. She was transported to a local hospital where she was pronounced dead shortly

Speed and alcohol are not factors in this crash.

Two McLean Teens Assaulted

Police are investigating a report that two 14-year-old girls were inappropriately touched on Monday, Aug. 20 at about 3:30 in the morning.

The girls were walking north on the east side of Chain Bridge Road from the area of Chain Bridge Court. As they turned to walk back, they noticed a man run across Chain Bridge Road and hide behind a bush at the far end of a church parking lot. As the girls walked down Davidson Road, they saw the same man walking toward them. As he got close, he reached out and grabbed one of the girls and wrapped his arms around her waist. The other teen tried to loosen his grip on her friend. The suspect then grabbed the second teen. He allegedly touched both of them inappropriately. The girls screamed, a dog barked and the suspect fled on foot, north on Chain Bridge Road. The girls ran home to contact police; they were not injured.

The suspect was described as Asian, in his 20s, about five feet 10 inches tall, with a thin build and short hair. He was wearing an orange and white striped T-shirt and blue jeans.

County Files FCC Complaint

Bulova (D-at large). The County's response to the FCC, released last Thursday, lays the blame for the outage squarely at the feet of Verizon, and Verizon acknowledged some responsibility in its Aug. 13 report to the MWCOG.

After first denying it had major problems with Arlington County's 911 service, Verizon officials admitted they did not know 911 emergency service was out in Fairfax County until alerted by County officials.

In the Verizon report, officials said two major generator failures—one in Fairfax and one in the central Arlington office, which routes 911 calls to multiple centers—caused "multiple failures cascading from these specific generator problems."

Verizon also reported that it lost visibility over its own network, so that technicians did not know that power was draining from battery-operated generators until it was too late.

"When the batteries in the Arlington central office were being depleted... why was there a delay in deploying additional resources to remedy the situation before the Arlington facility went dark?" asked County officials, in concluding statements in the FCC report. "Verizon's 911 service in Fairfax County failed completely during the June 29, 2012, derecho. Both immediate and longer-term changes are needed to improve 911 service in the metropolitan Washington, D.C., area."

THE CURRENT FCC REPORT is one of several investigations launched into the 911 fiasco. According to officials, Fairfax County is pursuing the issue from many angles, including the report to the FCC and regional work through the Metropolitan Washington Council of Government.

"We are very fortunate that no one died as a result of the 911 outage," said Supervisor Pat Herrity, (R-Springfield). Herrity is a member of the statewide 911 panel tasked with looking into the outage.

"I have every confidence that Fairfax County is up to whatever emergency comes our way—in as much as we have control. I'm more worried about third parties such as Verizon based on our 911 experience. Frankly, that was wholly unacceptable and we are going to do everything necessary to hold their feet to the fire," said Supervisor Jeff McKay (D-Lee).

Souder said it's gratifying to know Verizon is taking some responsibility, and attempting to fix its communication problems.

"The public should know that, seven weeks after this storm, we're still a long way from being done from making sure this (911 failure) doesn't happen again," Souder said.

he Old Firehouse Teen Center in downtown McLean hosted their annual block party on Saturday, Aug. 25, opening up their center for a variety of activities. The event featured the second annual McLean Teens Got Talent variety show, contests between acts and other arts and crafts opportunities.

The weather forced the acts indoors for the day, but that didn't stop local teens with many talents from taking the stage. Acts ranged from bands to singers to multi-instrumentalists and more. One act, performed by Tara McLaughlin, 11, and Elise Flick, 13, was unlike anything the judges had ever seen before.

"We originally started a club at school, where we would choreograph dances for songs and perform them," McLaughlin said. "It was very different performing here, we were more nervous, because at school there are a lot of friends around."

The duo performed a dance to Christina Perri's "Jar of Hearts," working the area in front of the stage with moves resembling those of a pair of figure skaters.

"I saw the flyer for the McLean Teens Got Talent contest while I was at a summer camp here, and thought it would be a good chance to perform in front of a new audience," Flick said. "Hopefully this will give us a good start going into this school year."

Between acts, children could participate in various events such as a hula hoop or pie-eating contest.

"It was fun because something was always going on," said Nikki Omi, 11, of McLean. "The robot dancer was my favorite, he could stop and start so fast."

The "robot dancer" was Bang Yan Pham, 13, who performed a "pop and lock" style routine. Judges Darrick Speller, Jimmy Reed and Sarah Schallern praised his unique presentation, but also gave him some pointers.

"You had great movements, but you really need to work on locking them down when you're trying to stay still," Schallern said. "It's all about isolating one movement."

This was a move for the block party, which was moved from the fall, and took place earlier in the day

"We wanted to make it a more inclusive event, for our regular users, but also to expose it to some new people," said Ryan Brookes of the OFTC. "We want people to be aware of what we can offer here."

First Day of School Coming Up

And never too early for parents to get involved.

he first day of school in most of Northern Virginia is Tuesday, Sept. 4. We don't agree with having the General Assembly dictate the first day of school, requiring the start date to be after Labor Day, but starting school after Labor Day does seem more hospitable than the Aug. 27 start in many other areas.

Attending Back to School EDITORIALS Night and making contact with teachers is one of the most important things parents can do to set up the school year for success. Back to School Nights begin the first week of September. Find the date for yours:

Fairfax County http://www.fcps.edu/news/ backtoschool/.

This school year will be the last for superintendent for Fairfax County Public Schools Jack Dale, who has announced his retirement effective June 30, 2013. The School Board will spend much of the coming months in the search and selection of the new superintendent.

In Fairfax County, students will be encouraged to BYOD. That's "bring your own device." With written parental permission, students will be allowed to connect to school wireless with their smart phones, tablets and laptops. Students and parents should remember that school officials will be able to examine those devices and discipline students for content and activities that are in violation of conduct rules and act accordingly. More at http://www.fcps.edu/

Reminder: Check Voter Status

While Northern Virginia has remarkable rates of voter registration, many changes to polling places, political district boundaries and rules for voting in Virginia, make it worth double checking your status now. Virginia's front seat role at the Republican National Convention serves as a reminder that every Virginia vote cast will count in November.

To vote on Election Day, you must be registered at your current address no later than Oct. 15, 2012. You can check your registration status online by going to www.sbe.virginia.gov. There you can also download a voter registration form and mail it to your local elections office address.

Every Virginia voter should expect a new voter identification card in the mail at the beginning of October, very close to the Oct. 15 deadline, so better to check now.

Mail or FAX updates to your local Electoral Board.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Deliberate Falsehoods in Health Care Debate

To the Editor:

When I saw the letter 1 "Questioning the War on Women," [Connection, August 15-21, 2012] I had that Yogi Berra feeling of "deja vu all over again" because I had read the same letter in a July edition of your paper. A second reading did not improve the contents or make them any more accurate.

Though the letter is replete with inaccuracies, one in particular stands out and demands a response. As a leader with the nonpartisan Prevent Cancer Foundation, I was appalled to read the allegation linking abortions and contraception to an increased chance of getting cancer. These kinds of scare tactics and deliberate falsehoods are dangerous and as inimical to the public interest

By e-mail: mclean@connectionnewspapers.com as Congressman Akin's recent assertion that a woman won't get pregnant if she is a victim of "legitimate rape." Medical misinformation on this scale deliberately victimizes vulnerable people with both lies and intimidation.

Ms. Burke may "believe it or not" but most women expect to make their own health care decisions in consultation with their doctors, and they do not wish their government to obstruct access to those decisions. Among the options that they expect to have available is the right to contraception, whether directly provided by an employer or through an insurance mechanism such as an exchange. Regardless of how they feel personally about abortion, they expect to make their own decisions in consultation with their doctor on the need for an ultrasound. They know that conveying full rights to a zygote ignores some basic facts about physiology, let alone the implications for criminalizing the health care prescriptions their physicians might recommend.

Call it what you will, but if government presumes to dictate or otherwise proscribe a person's own personal health care decisions, that is wholesale disenfranchisement and a greater threat to the freedoms Ms. Burke seems to cherish so much. I suspect she is among the many who would be willing to deny women the right to make their own decisions while demanding that we "get government out of our health care."

Let's call an end to these false protestations of trying to protect women while patronizing them with misinformation, disenfranchising them in the name of health and safety, and then wrapping it all in the banner of liberty. The majority of Virginians, especially northern Virginians, aren't buying it.

It's Income, Not Values

To the Editor:

I think the suggestions in recent letters to the editor that the imbalance in admissions at TJ is the result of differing cultural priorities are mistaken. The imbalance has much more to do with a family's income than its cultural values. The contest is unfairly rigged to favor those who have the money and the time to enroll and transport their kids to and from the SCAT and STB prep courses for elementary school students, ACT and PSAT practice sessions for ter for us besides the trees? Thanks middle schoolers, math and science tutors, summer enrichment programs and other such costly means of giving students a leg up in the competition to get admitted to TJ. Even the TJ Admissions Test Prep Seminar offered by the Fairfax County Public School System to rising eighth graders costs $581 this year and reduced tuition is not offered to students with limited means. The inherent economic bias against promising students from low income households all but guarantees that they will continue to be disproportionately under-represented at TJ.

Looking for Shelter

To the Editor:

I want to voice my opinion about the trees at the Great Falls Shopping Center. We have lived here for 59 years and seen a lot of changes but this one about the trees is disturbing to me. I know the trees are beautiful but... I like the one near the Safeway and CVS where the handicapped park for this was where I had to wait many times for someone to go in the store. I am 83 years old and in a wheelchair now and there is no shade for me anymore because no one thinks of older people, only money.

Is there any way to provide shelfor listening to me.

COMMENTARY

Our Health Depends on the Air We Breathe

By Jim Moran U.S. Representative (D-8)

or too many Americans and Virginians, simply breathing the air can be dangerous. That's especially the case for the 306,000 Virginia children and 96,000 adults who battle asthma, the 1.1 million with cardiovascular disease, the 154,000 with chronic bronchitis and the estimated 411,000 who live in poverty. But it is true for all of us and it's that way because of soot in our air.

Soot, or fine particulate matter (PM2.5), is composed of a mixture of solid particles and liquid droplets, usually made up of several different types of harmful chemicals. It's easy to recognize as it contributes significantly to the haze that blankets many cities and national parks. Smokestacks and tailpipes churn out soot and we breathe it in, every day.

The body reacts to it in much the same manner as it does to tobacco smoke. Smaller than a grain of sand and only visible with a microscope, tiny soot particles travel deep into the lungs when inhaled and swiftly penetrate the bloodstream, immediately increasing the risk of severe respiratory distress, heart attacks and strokes.

Soot kills; leads to hospitalizations; triggers asthma attacks, heart attacks and strokes; and has been linked to causing permanent lung tissue and airway damage, reproductive complications and cancer.

For decades, the Clean Air Act has helped protect the air we breathe by letting us know and track what pollutants make it into our air and allowing us to set targets, make plans, and have accountability for reducing those pollutants over time. And perhaps most importantly, it requires that we review those standards as science helps us understand new risks.

That's happening now with soot. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is reviewing the current standard for soot, last set in 1997. Since then, more than 10,000 studies have demonstrated that soot is a public health threat and that we must ensure that fewer smaller particles are able to get into the air and into our lungs.

Earlier this summer, the EPA proposed a new stronger standard for soot and is accepting public comments on these standards until the end of August. What are the potential benefits of enacting the strongest standard? By cleaning up soot, we can prevent 35,700 deaths, 23,290 visits to the hospital and emergency room, 2,350 heart attacks, 1.4 million cases of aggravated asthma and 29,800 cases of acute bronchitis every year. An estimated 2.7 million days of missed work and school due to air pollution-caused ailments would be avoided annually.

It's August in Washington and the humidity makes it hard enough to breathe for even the most healthy among us. While we see the haze of air pollution on really bad days, we do not see the particles within it. And those particles are a threat to our health and the health of our families and neighbors. I hope all Virginians and Americans will join me in asking the EPA to stand strong for a strong soot standard. We'll all breathe a bit easier when you do.

Iconic Athlete Returns to Marshall

his year, Kathrine Switzer's been official in the Boston to celebratory events in Prague, Berlin, Athens, Vienna, New Zealand, New York and the London Olympics. And on Nov. 9, she returns to George Marshall High School in Falls Church, where much of it all began. Today, Marshall High School serves the cosmopolitan community of Tysons Corner.

Switzer has long been one of the most iconic figures in athletics and returns to her high school roots in one of sport's most dynamic years. She will be the honorary speaker for the George C. Marshall High School's 50th Anniversary Gala Celebration at the Fairview Park Marriott in Falls Church on Friday, Nov. 9, 2012.

"This is a big year for sports—and we are so excited to have Kathrine Switzer, the person who made so much of our history happen, here with us to celebrate and tell us about it," said Jay W. Pearson, principal of George C. Marshall HS.

"Mr. Pearson is so right," said Switzer. "This is a whopper of a year—it is the 40th anniversary of women being 'allowed' to run, of the first women's road race, and in the USA, of the passage of the Title IX amendment to the Constitution, which mandated equality of educational opportunities for women-including sports. This totally changed the landscape for women, socially as well as sportwise. And, of course, this is an Olympic year and more than ever, that history will be reflected in amazing performances. By the time I get to the Marshall anniversary celebration on Nov. 9, we'll have a whole new set of heroes to talk about."

Kathrine Switzer was in the first class of graduates from Marshall in 1964. Three years later, she became the woman who changed sports history when she officially entered and finished the famous Boston Marathon in 1967. It was still a men's only event in those days and Switzer's entry created a worldwide uproar when the race director attacked her mid-stride and tried to remove her from the event. The photo of this incident flashed around the globe and became one of Time-Life's "100 Photos that Changed the World." Radicalized by the incident, Switzer campaigned to make women

Marathon in 1972 and later that year was one of the creators of the first women's road race...and the women's running boom was on. This year is that 40th anniversary. It is one of several important anniversaries this year.

Switzer went on to run 39 marathons, and won the New York City Marathon in 1974. She ran her personal best in 1975, finishing second in Boston (2:51:33). She then put her substantial energies into creating the Avon International Running Circuit of women's only races in 27 countries with over a million women participating from 1978 to the present time. It was this series of events, which showed global participation and performances that largely convinced the IOC to include a women's marathon for the first time in the 1984 Olympic Games.

Switzer is now an Emmy award-winning TV commentator and has covered the Olympic Games, World and National Championships as well as the New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles and every televised edition of the Boston Marathon (34 consecutive years). She is a dynamic pubic speaker, journalist and author of three books, including her memoir, "Marathon Woman." Other books include "26.2 Marathon Stories," co-authored with her husband, Roger Robinson and "Running and Walking for Women Over 40."

At age 65, Switzer is still running marathons, having completed the Berlin Marathon in 2011 to launch the German edition of

A Historic Photo: In 1967, irate race official Jock Semple tried forcibly to remove Kathrine Switzer from the then all-male Boston Marathon simply because she was a woman. Luckily for Switzer, the official was bounced out of the race instead by her boyfriend and she went on to finish.

"Marathon Woman." She also won her age group in the extremely difficult 2011 Motatapu off-road mountain marathon in New Zealand, and in 2010 fulfilled a lifetime dream of running the 2500th anniversary race of the Athens Marathon.

Last year, when she was inducted into the U.S.A. National Women's Hall of Fame, it was not just for breaking barriers but also for creating positive global social change. Because of her, millions of women are now empowered by the simple act of running. Or as Kathrine says, "It's not about running. It's about changing people's lives."

Diagnosed But Not Sick

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Or so I tell myself - and others, as often as the opportunity presents itself. It's a distinction with which I can live, a distinction with which I'm comfortable, and a distinction which enables me to live my life as normally as possible; which when one considers my diagnosis: NSCLC (non-small cell lung cancer) and the original, terminal prognosis – received back in Feb. 2009: "13 months to two years," and my age when all this stuff hit the figurative fan: 54, it's no wonder I assimilate such delusions and don't give them a second thought. (The first thought: premature death, is bad enough.)

But it does take a little convincing. And it's not to say that having cancer isn't an excuse/explanation for me acting a certain way and/or requiring certain things (not exactly accommodations). Because it is. As much as I don't want having cancer to seep into my thoughts and/or actions, it is impossible to prevent it from doing so (and you regular readers know how much I try). Its reality has a life of its own, whereby it almost creates new instincts in how I think and feel and react, instincts that I am aware of when they happen, but not quite predisposed to prevent their appearance/occurrence. Being diagnosed with a terminal disease at age 54 and a half tends to narrow your vision and unleash - occasionally - the beast which resides within, a beast with which vou're likely well acquainted but not particularly proud.

As much as I'm able to minimize the damage, collateral or otherwise, from these cancer-driven behaviors (see how easy it is to place blame), I still maintain that these behaviors are not because I'm sick, but rather because I'm diagnosed. My feeling is, once I start using/invoking sickness as an explanation, it might become a slippery slope. And once I've begun using and in turn becoming increasingly comfortable with the cause of, and description for, my inappropriate and selfish words and deeds, then the cancer has indeed won; and as a direct result, sooner rather than later these columns will cease as I will have permanently desisted.

I imagine these words probably sound like mind games, and too little too late at that. However, it's been my experience that being diagnosed with a terminal disease leads to an awful lot of self doubt, recrimination, insecurity, fear, anxiety, stress and non-stop introspection and deals you don't ever want to make with the devil. Ergo, any little thing I can do - or think, or tell myself - repeatedly, is what I have to do. I suppose it's a bastardized version of the power of positive thinking, or the act of a desperate man. Either way, I'm still alive and rationalizing my

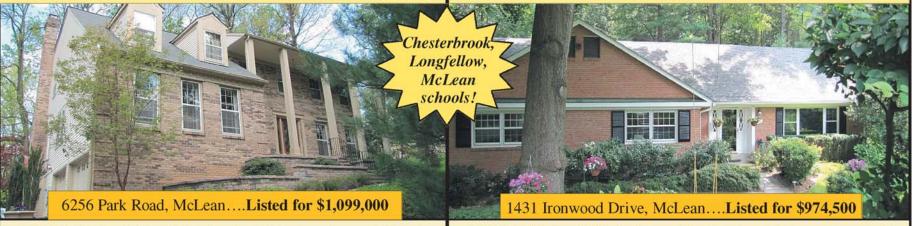

If my not calling a spade a spade enables me to deal the cards with which I've been dealt a little bit longer, and I'm not cheating anybody but death in the process, then I will continue to do so. Having/being diagnosed with cancer/a terminal disease is neither fun nor funny; however, unless I find some humor or wishful thinking in how I approach this situation, I don't suppose I'll be approaching it much longer. To me, it's always been mind over matter, and even though these matters are rather serious, I still don't mind.
