Virginia lawmakers will push work sharing legislation this session.

When Springfield business owner Tony Coombs felt the “mind-boggling impact” the $87 billion in budget cuts would have on his IT and cyber-security company, he began preparing his 600 employees for the fallout.

He froze bonuses and pay raises; he cut some employees’ hours by as much as 50 percent; he consolidated where he could and he began leasing his Springfield office building on a month-to-month basis.

“I wanted to do everything I could to avoid laying off employees,” Coombs said. “There’s not someone here who doesn’t have some family connection, and a feeling of family is something we’ve always encouraged and embraced.”

But the sequester caused serious setbacks to his company and employee morale, and after a few months of treading water, Coombs considered layoffs.

“We had to rearrange our teams to use less people,” Coombs said. “That’s the worst thing for me because everyone knows my employees always come first.”

Coombs, who participated in Congressional business roundtables to keep his company moving forward, learned about a government program adopted in several other states that help employers keep experienced workers on the payroll.

CALLED WORK SHARING, more than two dozen states are now using the program—a kind of unemployment insurance in reverse—which comes with free federal dollars to keep workers in their jobs instead of supporting them after they’re laid off. Instead of getting a pink slip during an economic downturn, workers have an opportunity to stay on the job and receive unemployment benefits for the hours they lose.

And thanks to national employment policy experts such as David Balducchi of Arlington, work sharing is getting a new look from employers across the country and the state.

“With work sharing, an employee’s lost day of work doesn’t have to mean a lost day of pay,” Balducchi said. “The hours of all employees are reduced instead of sacking some employees. Employees receive

Virginia’s Potential Saving

According to David Balducchi:

❖ If Virginia enacted a work sharing law, the commonwealth is eligible for a U.S. Department of Labor planning and implementation grant of $2,739,420. The cutoff date to apply for the U.S. Department of Labor grant is Dec. 31, 2014.

❖ Also, had Virginia enacted work sharing the commonwealth over the three-year period beginning with passing of the federal law in February 2012, it would have enabled Virginia to receive 100 percent of federal reimbursement of work sharing benefits. According to the center for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR), the potential annual estimated saving in Virginia with federal financing of work sharing could reach $14,506,300. CEPR says this is an annual saving.

partial unemployment benefits only for their lost hours of work. And employees keep working and don’t have to search for a new position in a bleak market.”

Balducchi has been crisscrossing the United States to educate lawmakers about work sharing and to help them enact legislation. In Washington State, for example, the program has paid dental technicians and plumbers at struggling companies. “The funds enable companies to hang on to experienced workers while they wait for the economy to improve,” Balducchi said.

State Senator George Barker (D-39), a proponent of work sharing, is urging fellow lawmakers to make Virginia the next state that adopts the legislation.

Barker, who said he is making work sharing legislation one of his top priorities for the 2014 General Assembly legislative session, worked with Balducchi and John Horejsi of SALT (Social Action Linking Together) to lobby other lawmakers to enact work sharing.

“Having been through the recession and recent slight increases in Virginia unemployment rates as federal sequestration takes effect, it is important that we give Virginia businesses all the tools we can to help them and their employees get through challenging times. This bill does that,” Barker said Tuesday.

The program, Barker said, is not a red state or blue state issue. In fact, the most recent states to pass some form of work sharing legislation this summer—Wisconsin and Ohio—are led by Republican governors.

“This is a bipartisan bill put forth by Republican Senator Bill Stanley from Franklin County and myself,” Barker said. “We have worked with the business community on this bill, including the Virginia Federation of Independent Businesses, the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, and Virginia Association of Manufacturers as well as with community organizations. We have addressed the questions and concerns

‘Shared Work:’ A Win-Win-Win Solution

Preventing layoffs, maintaining the well-being of employees and their communities and keeping businesses competitive.

BY MARK COOPER
TYSONS CORNER

PERSPECTIVES

How do we mitigate the devastating effects of layoffs on employees, employers and their communities? Is there a “win-win-win” solution?

There is most definitely such a solution and it is called “Shared Work.” Borrowed from a program called “Kurzarbeit” in Germany, a country considered one of the world’s perennial industrial economies who knows a thing or two about surviving business cycles, this concept can decisively help Virginia companies, both large and small, weather temporary downturns by keeping their skilled workforce intact and on the job.

I know. Before coming to Virginia, I was employed by and operated my own businesses in Germany from 1980 through 2008.

From Fortune 500 companies like Texas Instruments, my first employer, to global giants like Mercedes, Bosch and others, I have personally experienced the effectiveness of these programs. And they work. A survey conducted by the state of Bavaria’s Chamber of Commerce in July 2009, the depth of the Great Recession, revealed that 60 percent of respondents were able to avoid permanent layoffs, another 16 percent were able to come away with only minimal layoffs so that well over three quarters or 76 percent were able to keep all or most of their workforce through “Shared Work.”

How? By reducing the days worked per week from 5 to 4, as an example, the companies are able to reduce a sizable portion of their labor costs, in this case 20 percent, maintain their workforce and additionally avoid costly rehiring and retraining expense when business picks up. More importantly, communities keep their breadwinners employed, which in turn continue paying taxes and consuming local goods and services. This keeps the “doors open” which in turn keeps families together.

While the employee will see a reduction in gross salary or wages, through the clever use of unemployment benefits which the employer has been contributing towards previously, take-home wage reduction would be not as pronounced. And that extra day would be a welcome respite to those families where both spouses are working full-time and could restore some work-life balance in the interim; or the employer could decide to use the extra day for retraining and skill improvement.

How do we proceed? In the U.S., 26 states have already adopted such “Shared Work” policy. Our commonwealth has not, to date, but the General Assembly should consider this proven public-private solution. Virginia’s labor market, like many others, is still languishing. “Shared Work” can prevent layoffs, maintain the well being of employees and their communities and keep businesses competitive over the long run.

This is an intelligent, tested policy that can truly provide a “win-win-win” for all Virginians.

How To Set Realistic Goals

Local experts say the key to success is setting achievable goals.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Laura Wheeler Poms, of Fairfax, set out to earn a doctorate degree and make a career change. As a wife, mother and working professional, the goal, she said, often felt lofty.

“Writing my dissertation at times felt overwhelming, especially if I looked at it as one huge project,” said Poms, who now holds a Ph.D. in industrial/organizational psychology and is an assistant professor of global and community health at George Mason University in Fairfax. “I set goals like writing one page or doing one analysis each day and I was able to get it done. I also gave myself little rewards along the way.”

While Poms set and achieved an ambitious goal, she and other psychologists say many people do not. Whether one desires to make a career change, set boundaries in an unhealthy relationship or lose weight, setting and achieving goals is difficult for some.

“The biggest reason people fall off the bandwagon is that they pick goals that are outside their behavioral repertoire, that are environmentally impossible or that they don’t have the skills to accomplish,” said Linda Berg-Cross, Ph.D., a therapist in private practice and a professor of psychology at Howard University in Washington, as well as a Potomac, Md., resident. “If you say, ‘I’m going to exercise an hour a day,’ but you have a full-time job and children, you really don’t have time to exercise for an hour.”

Poms says that a person’s reasons for waiting to make a change could affect his or her success or failure. “If your goal is motivated by guilt, fear or regret, you’re less likely to achieve that goal,” she said. “If someone tells you that you need to lose weight, unless that realization has come home to you, it is not very useful. ... If you don’t see the need, you’re not going to be motivated to accomplish it.”

To make lasting changes, experts say, one must be prepared for the work involved in making the shift. “Sometimes when people want to make a change, they are not quite ready,” said Amy Van Arsdale, Ph.D., assistant professor of psychology at Marymount University in Arlington and a therapist in private practice who lives in Fairfax.

“Another reason that sometimes makes it really hard for people to make changes like setting boundaries with someone they love, is because that person might feel hurt, so the person who is trying to change backs down,” Van Arsdale continued.

Whether your goal is getting out of a toxic relationship, making a career change or maintaining an exercise plan, there are strategies that you can implement to maintain your perseverance.

“If someone starts to give up,” said Van Arsdale, “I recommend that they do a check-in and ask

When working to make behavioral or physical changes, experts recommend dividing one’s goals into small, gradual steps.

“What is going on that makes me want to quit?”

Assessing how much control one has over the situation is another key tactic. “A person should look at what they can change and what cannot change,” said Van Arsdale. “When setting a boundary with another person, for example, a person could say, ‘Maybe I can change how often I call my mother, but I can’t control how often she calls me so I need to change how I respond, because I can only control myself.’”

Berg-Cross recommends small, gradual changes. “Make the tiniest changes you can think of that are part of your normal routine,” she said. “It is not making behavioral changes, it is fading from one behavior to another on a long continuum, little by little.”

Van Arsdale said that sometimes she asks clients to think in reverse. For example, “If I didn’t lose weight and I didn’t get in shape, what is the worse part?” she asks. Re-evaluate specific goals and tweak them if needed. “Sometimes people set goals that are too high,” said Van Arsdale. “If you set you goals to go to the gym five days a week and that isn’t happening, instead go three times a week. Hanging in there and tweaking goals so that they work for you is better than giving up.”

Work Sharing Gains Support

UNDER THE BILL proposed by Barker, the legislation would establish a shared work program that provides employers with the option of reducing the hours worked by employees, while permitting the employees whose hours are reduced to receive partial compensation for lost wages. Program participation requires Virginia Employment Commission approval of a plan, which must provide that the reduction in hours of work is in lieu of a layoff of an equivalent percentage of employees and that employees' fringe benefits cannot be reduced or eliminated during the plan.

According to U.S. Department of Labor data, work sharing has saved 61,299 jobs in a combined 19 states in 2012. Some states, like Colorado and New Hampshire, saved less than 100 jobs, while California, Texas and Washington each kept between about 10,000 and 21,000 employed, according to a Justice Center report.

Balducci said work share programs are gaining momentum with employers nationally because it gives them flexibility during an economic downturn. Instead of laying off highly-trained, experienced employees—which may save employers money in the short term—they have the flexibility to reduce hours and maintain a specialized workforce, which ultimately benefits employers in the long term.

For an employer like Coombs, who has invested significant time and money in training top-rated cyber-security employees, the program gives him and his employees some breathing room.

“If I have to lay off people, I'm not going to 7-11 and find the talent, training and security level my clients expect. ... This business revolved around a qualified team of people,” Coombs said.

The Department of Workforce Development estimates work-share programs will save the unemployment reserve fund $4.9 million.

“We almost got it passed in 2013 and look forward to success next year,” Barker said, adding that he remains optimistic the bill will pass in 2014.

“We will rally the troops next year,” Horejsi said. “We are energized by the prospects for success for this commonsense legislation.”

Later Start Times for High School

It's past time to act; let this year be the year.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 3, the first day of school in Fairfax County, Dr. Karen Garza began her official day at 6:30 a.m. at Chantilly High School. While Garza was making herself available for interviews before the first class started at 7:20 a.m., many students were already on the school bus.

That means the students, and most likely their sleep-deprived parents, were rousted out of bed before 6 a.m., a time that is essentially the middle of the night for teenagers.

The science on teenagers, sleep schedule, health, learning and more all points in a single direction.

"The scientific evidence is irrefutable: chronic sleep loss and disruption in circadian rhythms associated with early high school start times are associated with negative consequences including poor academic performance, increased sport-related injuries, and potential long-term increases in cardiovascular and metabolic (i.e., type 2 diabetes) health risks, said Judith Owens, MD, director of Sleep Medicine at Children's National Medical Center. "We know that delaying high school start times increases total sleep time and positively impacts academic achievement and school attendance. There are also documented mental and physical health benefits for students that include reductions in rates of depression and fewer drowsy driving crashes."

EDITORIAL

Children's National Medical Center's Division of Sleep Medicine has been contracted by the Fairfax County School Board to develop a plan to delay high schools' start time to 8 a.m. or later.

A 2011 survey showed that more than a quarter of 10th and 12th grade students were getting less than five hours of sleep on school nights, about half of the recommended eight-and-a-half to nine-and-a-half hours of sleep for teenagers.

Sleep deprivation can also affect teen mood and ability to cope with stress. About a third of Fairfax County students surveyed in the last county student youth survey reported feeling depressed, with more than 15 percent reporting that they had considered suicide in the past year.

Fairfax County Public Schools, with a new superintendent supportive of later start times, is poised to do the right thing. It's time to make this the last year that high school begins at 7:20 a.m.

Heading to Polls

To the Editor:

Thanks to The Connection and reporter Victoria Ross for the "Every Year is Election Year in Virginia" information in the Aug. 28 edition. I hope that readers will clip and save the article and then go to the polls and vote on Nov. 5.

I would like to add two points that were not mentioned in the article:

❖ Virginia citizens who have a current Virginia driver's license or ID card issued by the DMV can now register or update their registration information online by going to: <https://www.vote.virginia.gov>.

❖ The Fairfax County Office of Elections will need over 2,000 election officers to work at the polls for the Nov. 5 election. Persons with fluency in several languages are especially needed. Persons able to spend election day plus several hours for training to "help make democracy work" can sign up by calling the Office of Elections at 703-324-4735 or going to the office's website at: <http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/elections/working.htm#electionofficer>.

The League of Women Voters of the Fairfax Area (LWVFA) will be at the Reston Multi-Cultural Festival at Lake Anne Plaza on Sept. 28 to register voters and provide (nonpartisan) election information. Stop by.

COMMENTARY

Dangers of Failure To Act

Our current and future standing in the international community is on the line.

BY JIM MORAN
U.S. REP. (D-8)

President Obama has sought Congressional approval to carry out limited surgical strikes in Syria against the regime of Bashar al Assad in response to his use of chemical weapons to attack Syrian civilians, which killed 1,429 people, including 426 children.

The Administration, led by Secretary of State Kerry, has presented what I know to be irrefutable evidence that the Assad government is responsible for this heinous attack.

I support the president's decision, but regret the fact that he chose to entrust this Congress, one of the most divisive and ineffective in history, to authorize force against the Assad regime for their use of chemical weapons. I hope the president calculated correctly, because our current and future standing in the international community is on the line. Should Congress vote down the Administration's effort, it will severely undermine America's future leadership role in foreign policy and cripple the Obama Administration's ability to respond to subsequent challenges, both foreign and domestic.

President Obama's request for authorization to attack the Assad regime rests on three considerations: (1) the ethical responsibility to react to what Secretary of State Kerry has called a "moral obscenity," Syria's clear violation of the 1925 Geneva Protocol against the use of poisonous weapons; (2) The humanitarian doctrine known as "the responsibility to protect" civilians at imminent threat from their own government; and (3) The strategic imperative to establish a clear limit to the Syrian military's power, and thus a deterrent against further use of chemical weapons.

That's not to say we should ignore the dangers involved with taking military action. The impact a strike would have on opposition fighters, our regional allies, and on civilian communities in Syria is of serious concern. We also want to ensure that we are not helping extremist groups like the al-Qaeda connected Al Nusra front gain strength due to our actions.

Should a vote in Congress fail, a U.S. attack may occur anyway. The president has the authority to carry out limited strikes, similar to what Presidents Clinton and Reagan carried out during their time in office. But by rejecting the president's request for Congressional support, our ability to deter the use of weapons of mass destruction in the future, be they chemical or nuclear, will be diminished.

America is the only country in this world with the ability to stop the use and proliferation of such means of murdering civilians on a massive scale. I believe we have the concomitant responsibility to use that ability today if we want to bring about a more peaceful world for our children tomorrow.

What we decide to do now is transcendent of this specific situation and not confined to what we do with Bashar al-Assad. We must act in a way that represents our fundamental values and moral convictions, one that will endure through the inevitable subsequent challenges we are sure to face. The use and proliferation of chemical weapons is so abhorrent, so beyond the pale, that the world must act. In this case, our only option is military. We cannot fail to accept this responsibility today. The challenges and costs will be all the greater if we fail to act.

Chess Champ Wins by Strategy

At the age of 9, Fair Lakes Crossing resident is ranked 4th nationally.

BY STEVE HIBBARD
THE CONNECTION

At the age of 9, Aasa Dommalapati, a fourth-grader at Greenbriar West Elementary, competed against the top chess players in Brazil and Canada during the summer months. She is currently ranked fourth nationally in the girls U-9 category.

Representing the U.S. for U-10 girls, she took third against nine challengers at the Pan American Youth Chess Championship in Brazil. Then it was off to Toronto in mid-August where she competed in the North American Youth Chess Championships and placed 22 out of 31. She was also part of a team of 80 players from the U.S. who played in Slovenia last year — her first international experience. She has qualified to play in Dubai at the World Youth Championship this coming December. The child wonder won her first national tournament in 2009 in Dallas while she was in kindergarten.

Since that time she has been tutored on Skype by Vempati Kameswara Rao, 33, from Hyderabad, India, who also uses the website MyChessGuru.com. He has a FIDE rating of 2088 in the Worldwide Chess Federation and is a national arbiter for chess tournaments.

He calls Aasa an “attacking” player. “I’m expecting her to become a Woman Grandmaster,” he adds. “That is a long-term goal. The short-term goal is World Youth Champion.”

Aasa also gets help from her dad Anand, who was chairman of the Greenbriar West Elementary Chess Club for four years.

BEFORE TOURNAMENTS, he often takes three hours of prep time to coach and prepare his children to win. “Usually we don’t know these people,” said Anand. “We get a basic idea of what to expect ... the coach can work with them to come up with an alternative solution and what to expect.”

For strategy, Aasa says she breaks down chess matches into three parts: openings, middle and end games. Her strategy is to use different tactics and attacks, she says: “We think of a plan and we just play it.”

If that doesn’t work, she says she tries another plan, and plays that. “And if he stops it, we think of another plan. And it goes on and on. And if he defends the plan, then we change it,” she adds.

During the Brazil tournament, she played nine rounds for almost four hours each. “I was expecting a little more, but I think I did pretty good,” said Aasa. “I played two U.S. players, from Washington state and California.”

Brother Abhinay, 14, is a freshman at Chantilly High who has been playing chess since second grade. He’s traveled all over the U.S. competing in state and national tournaments. He says he always learns something new with every chess game he plays. “I like to defend at first—then I like to attack when my opponent is not expecting,” he said. “I don’t just attack or defend—I do both.” At Rocky Run Middle, he maintained a 3.9 GPA and was in the e-Cyber Mission Club and Model U.N.

The GBW Chess Club, which is coached by Paul Swaney, meets Mondays and Thursdays for students in grades second through sixth. An advanced club has 20 students who meet on Mondays.

“We group the strong with the strong,” said Anand, of the Fair Lakes Crossing community, of organizing the club. He is a certified USCF—United State Chess Federation senior tournament director. He also works as an employee for BAE Systems, Inc.

FOR CHESS PRACTICES, he’ll organize five minutes of fast games called a “Blitz” just for fun. He also organizes simul-chess or simultaneous chess, and “Bug House,” or team chess for fun.

“Basically by doing that they get to play the stronger players,” he said. “So when one tournament is over, you’ll have players with four to zero points. Those with zero points get moved into another section where they are paired with others with similar strengths.

The GBW Chess Club is now taking registration for the new school year, with 90 children maximum. They are split into two groups that play from September through January, and then February through June. The 90 are split into five or six sections, with about 16 children in each section, based on ratings. On Thursdays, students play four rounds in a tournament. Students with the highest scores win trophies and medals. During the entire season, the club plays three to four tournaments.

Woodson’s Fisher Totals Career-high 31 Kills

Cavaliers beat Robinson in five sets.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

The Woodson volleyball team on Tuesday night, Sept. 3, dropped two of three sets to the Robinson Rams for the second time in four days.

There was no chance for recovery on Aug. 31 as Woodson’s 2-1 deficit meant Robinson secured a victory during a best-of-three tournament match. On Tuesday, however, the Cavaliers used intensity, positivity and career-best performance by senior Eliza Fisher to bounce back and win the regular season best-of-five rematch.

Fisher amassed a career high 31 kills as the Cavaliers won the final two sets to capture a 3-2 (25-19, 22-25, 22-25, 25-18, 15-9) victory over Robinson at Woodson High School.

“On fire. That’s all you can say,” Woodson head coach Len Palaschak said about Fisher’s performance. “She’s an amazing ball player.”

Fisher, a left-hander, tallied five kills in the fifth set, including the final two points of the match. She also totaled five aces during the contest.

“The thing about our team is when we get into ruts, we’re really good at bringing each other out of it,” Fisher said. “We’re constantly being positive. It’s very easy to get frustrated, but we’re always trying to uplift people and always try to have something positive to say.

“... [W]e were out for blood. We were mad that they beat us. ... We were just really pumped to play this game.”

Woodson’s Mackenzie Reed finished with eight kills, Dara Stevens had six kills, Bella Brahm had four kills and Kaelin Jennison and Jennifer Scott each had three.

Palaschak said Jenna Yost, who switched to the libero position late in the match, performed well. Yost will play for the University of Mary Washington.

“Jenna Yost did an amazing job,” he said. “She got to everything. She made a couple great saves.”

Woodson won back-to-back Patriot District championships in 2011 and 2012.

Even though the Cavaliers are now a member of Conference 7 (same teams that were in the Patriot District, minus Lee) after the VHSL’s six-class realignment, Fisher, a four-year varsity athlete, has her sights set on a three-peat.

“I would love to get another district championship,” she said. “Our banner is right over there and we got our very first district championship ever my sophomore year, we got another one last year [and] I’d love to continue the streak with my senior year.”

Woodson will host Oakton at 7 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 9.

Silence of the Court

Justices deny public access to shield personal conversations.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

The Virginia Supreme Court operates in silence, denying public access to audio recordings of its oral arguments. Unlike the U.S. Supreme Court, which denies video recordings but allows audio recordings, the commonwealth's top appeals court has a complete blackout on public access to proceedings. In a written response to questions from Connection Newspapers, the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Virginia Supreme Court explained that audio records were once public, but the installation of new equipment in January 2008 created new concerns for justices.

"The new digital recording equipment is more sensitive so that the recordings now include any confidential comments any justice makes to another justice during the oral argument," wrote Katya Herndon, director of legislative and public relations for the Office of the Executive Secretary. "Accordingly, the recordings, which are for the internal use of the justices, are no longer made available to the public."

That's unacceptable, according to several advocates for open government and freedom of the press. Virginia Press Association executive director Ginger Stanley said that she would raise the issue next month during a meeting of the Rights and Responsibilities Subcommittee of the Virginia Freedom of Information Advisory Council. During the meeting next month, members will be discussing whether or not to look at parts of government that are not subject to the Virginia Freedom of Information Act, which includes the State Corporation Commission and the Virginia Department of Corrections. Stanley said the August meeting would be an ideal opportunity to challenge the lack of transparency at the Virginia Supreme Court.

"I don't believe that new technology should stand in the way of transparency," said Stanley. "If this is new technology, then it should be able to block the parts that are considered private conversations."

THE LACK of transparency at the Virginia Supreme Court fits into a pattern of behavior for the commonwealth, which has a reputation for shielding basic information from the public. Last year, the State Integrity Investigation ranked and graded each of the 50 states on government accountability, transparency and corruption. Virginia got an F, largely because police agencies use an exemption clause in the Virginia Freedom of Information Act to withhold basic documents — even in cases that are closed. Now advocates for open government say it's a mistake for the Virginia Supreme Court to operate in secret.

"It just seems unnecessary to allow the justices to make private comments like that that don't serve any function in the hearing and use that as an excuse to keep the entire thing confidential," said Gregg Leslie, legal defense director for the Arlington-based Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press. "If they really have that concern they need to have better microphones that are off unless the justice pushes a button to turn them on."

Some lawyers see the lack of transparency as a necessary and expected part of the court system.

"If a judge leans over to another judge and says something during the oral argument, to me that's part of the deliberation," said Ed Weiner, a Fairfax County attorney with 33 years of experience. "And I just don't think that the public should be invited into chambers during deliberations."

THE COURT is an infamously closed operation. No video records are allowed. No audio recordings are permitted. Visitors to the court are not allowed to enter the building with a cell phone. The court does not even produce transcripts of the oral arguments. Some say the failure to allow public access to audio recordings is a mistake that should either be fixed with some kind of tweak to the recording system or by a new law forcing the courts to allow more sunshine into the dark corridors of power in Richmond.

"The recordings should be made public," said Del. Scott Surovell (D-44). "These cases are some of the most important cases in Virginia, and it's important to have as much sunshine on the public part of that process as possible."

That's a bipartisan view. Courts of Justice Chairman Del. David Albo (R-42) says the Virginia Supreme Court should allow public access to oral arguments or face an effort from the General Assembly to force transparency.

"They are denying the public recordings because they chose crappy technology," said Albo. "I just don't see why they shouldn't give them out. People are allowed to be there. It's a public forum."

"The new digital recording equipment is more sensitive so that the recordings now include any confidential comments any justice makes to another justice during the oral argument."
