Community Weighs Transportation Options on Route 1

Route 1 Multimodal Transportation Alternatives Analysis to be completed this summer.

By Janelle Germanos
The Gazette

At a public meeting on multimodal transportation for Route 1, community members and politicians made it clear that the time to decide on a plan for future transportation along the corridor is now.

“We’re getting some great revitalization momentum on the highway that we don’t want to kill,” Lee District Supervisor Jeffrey McKay said at the meeting.

Community members came to hear about possible future transportation alternatives along Route 1 at the second public meeting of the Route 1 Multimodal Transportation Alternatives Analysis on March 26 at South County government center.

“This study is all about the future of our community. This is about what our community will look like when I’m 62 years old,” Del. Scott Surovell said at the meeting.

Representatives from the Virginia Department of Rail and Public Transportation, Fairfax County and other stakeholders presented findings of the study to date. The study should be completed by this summer.

“It’s about a vision through 2035. To me, it’s very exciting,” Del. Scott Surovell said at the meeting.

“We’ve done a lot of studies of Route 1. What we haven’t done is a lot of work,” McKay said. “It’s time to do something.”

Integrated Health Care Now Provided at Gartlan Center

Primary and behavioral health care clinic celebrates grand opening.

By Janelle Germanos
The Gazette

The Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board and Alexandria Neighborhood Health Services, Inc. celebrated the integration of primary and behavioral health care at the Gartlan Center at the clinic’s official grand opening on March 27.

Visitors were able to tour the clinic, which is a collaboration of CSB and ANHSI. Clients of CSB are now able to receive primary and behavioral health care treatment at the same place.

“It may be just a little tiny space with two exam rooms, but this really is groundbreaking and it’s important, and it’s something to celebrate,” said Sharon Bulova, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

On average, people with a serious mental illness die 25 years earlier than the rest of the population, a 2006 study conducted by the National Association of State Mental Health Program Directors found.

“Many people who have behavioral health needs also have difficulty with accessing primary health care, and this clinic is one very obvious way to increase that access,” Bulova said.

According to Bulova, the grand opening of the clinic at the Gartlan Center is timely as the Board of Supervisors recently approved a motion that reinforced Fairfax County’s support for Medicaid expansion.

“Fairfax County strongly supports expanding Medicaid and allowing more people to get coverage,” Bulova said.

Bulova said people should always be treated holistically, with their primary health care needs in mind.

“Adding primary health services to this busy Gartlan Center site brings a whole health focus which is so important to the successful outcomes for people in all facets of their life,” Bulova said.

ANHSI, a non-profit health care provider, provides primary care services at the Gartlan Center on Tuesdays and Fridays, providing a primary care physician, a medical assistant, and an enrollment specialist.

“The integration of primary and behavioral health care is a strategic priority across the country, not just here in Fairfax County,” said Pat Harrison, deputy county executive for human services.

Trouble navigating the health care system, health literacy, socioeconomic status, transportation and insurance problems are among the reasons those with serious mental illness face disparity in life expectancy.

“Providing health care services to people with mental illness, substance use disorder, and intellectual disabilities is truly a milestone for the human services system,” Harrison said.

The new clinic at the Gartlan Center will be a one-stop place where patients can receive a wide range of services.

“We know that when people get these needs addressed together, people have better health outcomes, and they live longer and their care becomes more holistic,” Harrison said.

According to Harrison, the improved access to health care is a natural addition to the care provided at the Gartlan Center.

“This truly is a collaborative partnership between two agencies,” Harrison said.

The partnership has occurred without a grant, which is somewhat uncommon.

Martha Wooten, the executive director of ANHSI, said the partnership with the Fairfax-Falls Church CSB aligns with ANHSI’s mission and goals.

“It was a really natural transition to us to be able to see the benefit and recognize the value of moving a primary medical team

Weighing Metrorail, Light Rail, Bus Rapid Transit

The study includes a 15-mile stretch of Route 1 from the Huntington Metro Station to Route 123 in Prince William County. Four transit alternatives to relieve transportation problems along Route 1 were presented at the meeting, including curbside bus rapid transit service, bus rapid transit service in the median, light rail transit, and Metrorail/bus rapid transit hybrid.

The first alternative presented, bus rapid transit curbside, would designate curbside lanes for buses only from Huntington to Pohick Road North. Between Pohick Road North and Woodbridge, the buses would operate in mixed traffic.

The second alternative has buses operated in the median, with a transition to mixed traffic in Prince William County. The third alternative is Light Rail Transit in the median, which would extend for the entire length of the corridor.

“I don’t think having a light rail system running down the middle of a six-lane, 45 mile-per-hour highway is an attractive option for people, plus studies show it is the most expensive option for riders out of all the options,” Survell said.

The third option is a mix of Metrorail and Bus Rapid Transit. The yellow line would be extended to Hybla Valley, and buses would operate in designated lanes from Hybla Valley and then with mixed traffic in Prince William County.

“I think our long-term objective should be extending the yellow line down Route 1 through Fort Belvoir,” Survell said.

Mount Vernon Supervisor Gerry Hyland said that a rail option along Route 1 would attract development to the corridor; however, both Metrorail and light-rail should be taken into consideration.

“In looking at what density we need to normally support Metrorail, that’s the reason that I would then back up and ask us to consider a light rail option, which is not as expensive and we have a better opportunity to justify that than trying to bring heavy rail down Route 1,” Hyland said.

In addition to transit options, plans for pedestrians and bicycles were also included. “If you haven’t worn the hat of a pedestrian lately on Route 1, let’s consider that angle,” said Jason Mumford, AECOM project manager.

Karlene Sinclair-Robinson, a Mount Vernon resident, said she is in favor of a rail option.

“We already have bus transit,” Sinclair-Robinson said. “We need to consider something new.”

The final recommended plan will include a suggested mode of transit, the number of vehicular lanes, and bicycle and pedestrian elements.

“We’re blending those and putting them together on this corridor for a multimodal recommendation,” Mumford said.

These types of projects don’t depend on a single funding source, and includes federal and state programs and grants, local funding, and more.

“We have another budget amendment that’s pending in the budget we’re fighting about right now — for another $4 million to pay for the preliminary engineering and federal grant application and environmental studies to further this work over the next two years,” Survell said.

A recommendation is expected to be made this summer. Anyone interested in viewing the presentation can visit http://route1multimodalala.com/.

UCM Spring Gala Raises More Than $170,000

Hundreds of community members celebrated United Community Ministries’ 45th Anniversary at its annual Spring Gala on Saturday, March 29, at the Madison Building Atrium, U.S. Patent and Trademark Building, in Old Town. Hosted by The Friends of UCM volunteers, the event raised more than $170,000 to bring help and hope to thousands of local low-income individuals and families.

The evening featured cocktails, silent and live auctions, gourmet dinner, raffle drawing for a special Casa de Campo resort trip, and dancing with the Tower House dance band.

“Since 1969, UCM has grown from a small collection of services providing food, clothing, and shelter to people in need — to a robust organization with diverse services that stabilize, empower, and engage,” said UCM Executive Director Shirley Marshall.

“We are so grateful for the Friends of UCM’s enthusiasm, energy, and creativity. They exemplify the caring and can-do spirit in our great community. Thank you to all our generous supporters and attendees for a wonderful evening celebrating this special milestone.”

UCM also premiered a new video “The Heart of Community.” It is available for viewing via www.ucmagency.org along with a list acknowledging gala sponsors and auction donors.

Local Farm Provides Fresh Food for Underserved Populations

Arcadia hosts mobile market and camp for children.

For many, spring symbolizes fresh flowers, new beginnings and baseball, but for those who work at Arcadia Center for Sustainable Food and Agriculture, located on the grounds of the Woodlawn Estate in Mount Vernon, spring means another season of working to ensure that all members of the community have access to fresh, healthy food.

“All of our programs start up again in spring,” said Morgan Maloney, farm education manager.

These programs, which advance Arcadia’s mission and serve the community, include the Arcadia Farm, which serves as an example of environmentally and economically sustainable growing practices; the Mobile Market, which distributes fresh, affordable food to underserved D.C. area neighborhoods; the Food Hub, which provides services that support and promote local sustainable farms, and the Farm to School program, which provides healthy, local food for school meals as well as hands-on food and farm education.

“There is always a lot of work to do in the off season,” said Benjamin Bartley, mobile market director. “It is exciting because we’ve been able to expand our services each year. We’ve expanded our number of stops to 10 this year. I feel particularly good about the way that we’ve gone. I feel pretty prepared for the market season.”

“The mobile market is very expensive,” said Pam Hess, Arcadia’s executive director. “They are in the right places, our prices are great, the food is fresh. We get first quality food and bring it to low income people. We don’t take leftovers like mushy apples or bruised bananas and give it to them.”

“It is easy to eat well in this town if you have money,” she continued. “One thing we’ve learned from our customers is that they care about eating healthy, but have less economic power to make those wishes known.”

How to Get Involved

For more information on becoming a member of Arcadia Center for Sustainable Food and Agriculture, The Arcadia Mobile Market Seasonal Cookbook, the Arcadia Farm Camp, Spring Dinner or any of the organization’s other programs, visit: http://arcadiasfood.org/

The staff is also excited about their new cookbook, “The Arcadia Mobile Market Seasonal Cookbook,” written by Arcadia’s culinary educator and mobile market outreach coordinator JuJu Harris.

“We put together seasonal recipes that incorporate ingredients that are WIC (The Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children) staples,” said Bartley. “We are going to be giving these away to those who use food assistance programs. We’re looking forward to getting it into the hands of those who it was written for.”

Additionally, Arcadia runs a camp where children from ages 6-11 get to experience life on a farm and learn about the source of their food. Arcadia officials are raising money to offer financial assistance to those who need it.

“Campers spend most of their time in our educational garden,” said Maloney. “One fourth of the farm is specifically designed for that age group and is called the groundhog garden.”

“I am really excited because we have 30 farm camp scholarships, but we still need more money to make it happen for families who would not be able to send their children to camp,” said Hess.

She is passionate when she talks about her mission to ensure that all children are able to attend a camp where they are safely immersed in the outdoors. “This camp counteracts nature deficit disorder,” she said. “There are no electronics. The children are sweaty and happy. They have a lot of independence and freedom to make choices.”

Arcadia offers other educational opportunities for children. “In the spring when school is in session, I am running field trips,” said Maloney. “Kids come to the farm for purpose of hands-on learning.”

“We have efforts going on right now to expand all of the organization’s services,” said Hess.

One of Arcadia’s signature fundraisers is its annual spring dinner. “It is an evening of wonder and whimsy,” said Morgan Maloney, farm education manager.

“I am really excited because we have 30 farm camp scholarships, but we still need more money to make it happen for families who would not be able to send their children to camp,” said Hess.

Why I Support Medicaid Expansion

MAINTAINING A VULNERABLE, DIVERSE COMMUNITY

While the need for housing, childcare, healthcare and other human services have grown, these programs have faced significant cuts over the past few years.

To the Board of Supervisors:

The following open letter to the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors concerns housing and human services budget recommendations from the Fairfax County Budget Advocacy Coalition for Housing and Human Services.

As you consider the proposed FY 2015 county budget, we urge you to make additional and needed investments in housing, health and human services programs. These recommendations were developed through a collaborative process of nonprofit housing developers, human service providers, and advocacy organizations identifying community needs. Strategic public investments in housing and human services can leverage significant amounts of private capital to provide a return on the county’s investment. These investments help us maintain a diverse, caring community that provides access to opportunities for all.

The guiding principles that informed our decisions are as follows:

- No one recommendation takes priority over the others;
- Each recommendation funds a program that is an essential component of a system of housing and services that offer individuals and families in need the optimum chances for success;
- These recommendations support a wide spectrum of households along the housing continuum;
- No funding for new initiatives is requested. Instead, these recommendations fund coordinated efforts between housing and service providers to deliver critical safety net supports with maximum efficiency and adoption of best practices.

Our coalition supports the limited housing and human services funding in the County Executive’s Budget, and respectfully urges no further cuts to these budgets. This request is made in light of significant cuts to these programs over the past few years, even as the need for housing, childcare, healthcare and other human services have grown. In supporting the County’s Executive proposals, we would like to highlight the following:

Contract Rate Increases for Human Service Providers: We support the County Executive’s inclusion of $2.17 million for a contract rate increase for human services providers in the County, especially nonprofits. These providers offer critical services to low and moderate income households that would fail to the county alone if the nonprofit partners did not exist. These community-based organizations have built corporate and private sector support for their efforts to leverage public resources. However, funding for these organizations that provide

The Virginia General Assembly continues to discuss the expansion of Medicaid, the costs and consequences of doing so have received a great deal of attention. Debates rage in the media, among businesses and around the kitchen tables of ordinary Virginians throughout the state. At our board meeting of March 25 my colleagues and I reiterated, in a bi-partisan vote, our strong support for Medicaid expansion in Virginia, and here’s why:

First and foremost, Virginians have already paid for most of Medicaid expansion through our federal tax dollars. Through the year 2022, Virginians will pay $29.7 billion in Affordable Care Act related taxes and fees to the federal government. The federal government will cover almost all of the cost for Medicaid expansion with tax dollars collected from the states, including Virginia. If Medicaid is expanded in Virginia, the federal government will pay 100 percent of the cost through 2016, decreasing incrementally to 90 percent in 2020 and subsequent years. If Medicaid is not expanded in Virginia, we will still pay those same taxes but will see no corresponding benefit to our uninsured population—rather, our tax dollars will be used to pay for uninsured individuals in other states.

Second, the economic benefits of expanding Medicaid, aside from the obvious return of taxpayer dollars to our state, far outweigh the costs. To put it plainly, not addressing affordable health care coverage in Virginia costs Virginia money. Employed Virginians with insurance already subsidize care provided for uninsured Virginians needing urgent treatment when they show up in emergency rooms. These visits result in higher premiums for employed Virginians as well as increased provider costs. Medicaid expansion would increase less expensive preventative care thus reducing more expensive emergency care. This would not only drive down costs but could also improve the overall health of Virginia residents.

A largely unseen cost of our current situation is the existing financial burden on county-funded safety net providers, including nonprofit organizations that assist lower income residents. The Fairfax-Palls Church Community Services Board estimates that the percentage of clients receiving substance abuse treatment or mental health services who are covered by Medicaid will rise from 38 percent to 50 percent under the proposed expansion, freeing up County funding for other critical needs.

Lastly, Medicaid expansion provides a tremendous opportunity to do more to help our most vulnerable residents. In Fairfax County alone, up to 30,000 low-income residents would become eligible for Medicaid through expansion, including: individuals earning less than $15,302 per year; families earning less than $31,155 per year; low-income children who lose Medicaid when they turn 19; and, adults with disabilities not eligible for Supplemental Security Income or Social Security Disability Insurance. Under Medicaid expansion, Virginia’s health care delivery system will have the resources needed to provide quality services to those in need.

The Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce and Fairfax County’s local hospitals recognize these facts, and have strongly endorsed Medicaid expansion. Let’s keep Virginia’s tax dollars in Virginia and increase access for uninsured Virginians at the same time.
We recognize this Wednesday, April 2, as World Autism Day, taking a moment to raise awareness around the fastest growing developmental disability in the U.S. Autism incidence in the U.S., and in Northern Virginia in particular, is reaching astounding levels. While we don’t yet know the causes of Autism, most signs point to environmental factors. We do know that each year, one in 68 children and one in 42 boys will be diagnosed with an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) according to the Centers for Disease Control. That’s a nearly 30 percent increase from the CDC’s own estimate just two years ago.

Part of this increase, of course, comes from greater awareness and a better understanding about Autism Spectrum Disorder. Parents and medical professionals are increasingly alert to the signs and symptoms of ASD. Armed with this knowledge, early accurate diagnoses are easier to make.

In just the past 10 years, we have learned a tremendous amount about the importance of early detection for children with ASD, but less so on the kinds of high quality intervention methods that will help these children succeed. Because of the rapid increase in students with ASD, many teachers are ill equipped to effectively teach children on the spectrum.

We learn more and more about children with ASD every day, most importantly that they do not need to be sequestered in their own classrooms. Last year, I had the privilege to tour Barcroft Elementary and see how they’ve set an example for the rest of the country by providing innovative training for all staff members on methods to teach students with ASD. I met a number of classes where non-ASD and ASD students were side by side, mastering new vocabulary and working on math problems. To help promote this model of learning, I introduced the Autism Educators Act last year which would establish pilot programs based on the Barcroft model. The bill would link school systems across the country with universities and non-profits to help train general education teachers who work with children diagnosed along the Autism spectrum. Because it’s a pilot program, it would be narrowly focused on school systems with a very high incidence of ASD — at least 10 percent or more of the special education population.

All children face obstacles in their education, and with the growing prevalence of ASD in U.S. classrooms, we need to be prepared to help these children overcome additional barriers to success so they too can thrive in mainstream classrooms. I look forward to working with my colleagues to secure this legislative victory for children with ASD, to show them that we can make this investment in their educational success.
T he script of “The Thousand Night” by Carol Wolf arrived in the mail un- solicited and unexpected almost 20 years ago, and I immediately knew I wanted to produce it. With its dramatic flair, incredible storytelling, grounding in a historical period for context, and an amazing tour de force role for an actor, I knew that it had all the elements I looked for in a play and would be perfect in an intimate space. But at the time I had no theatre!

When our new space opened in 2001, I pro- duced it the first season to great acclaim. Knowing I would someday re- turn to this play (and that it had a fabulous great acclaim. Knowing I would someday re- looked for in a play and would be perfect in an actor, I knew that it had all the elements I

The challenge to the individual actor in a solo piece is tremendous. The level of commitment to the material and the passion for the story must be palpable. For an audience to exper-ience this level of storytelling from a stage when they are intimately involved and invested in the story is an unmatched opportunity for a theatre-goer. Carol Wolf has written a remarkable play on so many levels that this live the-atre experience promises a rich emotional and intellectual journey for both the actor and the audience.

In addition, through shear chance and a little serendipity I was introduced to “Underneath the Lintel,” written by Glen Berger, by actor Paul Morella when he was here last spring perform- ing in “Ghost-Writer.” I couldn’t believe how perfectly this script fit with “The Thousand Night.” I immediately called director John Vreeke, and we decided that for the first time ever we would produce two plays “In Rep” on the same set and hope that our patrons would agree that there is an interesting, intriguing compatibility and connection between the two. It is storytelling at its best with underlying themes of individual choice and determination and that universal search for the meaning of life or, in other words, untangling the mystery of life. Entertaining yet poignant, and viewed in the story is an unmatched opportunity for a theatre-goer. MOUNT Vernon Gazette
Special Session Begins Work on State Budget

BY SCOTT A. Surovell
DELEGATE (D-44)

Last week, we returned to Richmond for the first day of our special session to finalize Virginia’s two-year, $90 billion budget. Gov. Terry McAuliffe proposed amendments to the budget originally introduced. The major change was for Virginia to expand its Medicaid program to all adults earning less than 133 percent of the federal poverty level with the cost reimbursed by the federal government for the next three years and phased down to 90 percent of the cost by the year 2020 pursuant to the Federal Affordable Care Act.

Shifting this cost to the federal government frees up at least $225 million of Virginia taxpayer money to fund other programs this budget cycle. Governor McAuliffe proposes to use those savings to provide $100 million for a “rainy day fund” to cover unexpected expenses and phased down to 90 percent of the cost by the year 2020 pursuant to the Federal Affordable Care Act.

Most importantly, he proposes a two percent salary increase for all K-12 public school teachers and support personnel, state employees, college and university faculty, constitutional officer personnel (sheriffs and clerks) and state-supported local employees. With Fairfax County’s teacher salaries lagging behind Arlington, Alexandria, Washington, D.C. and Maryland by thousands of dollars, this would be a sorely-needed boost and an especially effective way to retain and attract good teachers.

He also proposed new funding for pre-kindergarten education, covering costs shifted to local governments; mental health programs and land conservation. Overall, Fairfax County would receive at least an additional $36 million over two years instead of $28 million.

The Republican majority in the House of Delegates’ Appropriations Committee killed Governor McAuliffe’s proposals about three hours after they received them and voted to send their original budget to the full House. In response, the Senate adjourned on Monday night for three weeks so they could give it more careful consideration.

On Tuesday night, we debated the budget again. Governor McAuliffe’s budget was reintroduced on the House floor and rejected on a party-line vote with one Republican voting for it and two Democrats voting against it. We passed the House’s budget on a party-line vote and adjourned for the time being and its now on to the Senate.

We did get one thing done. We passed legislation wrapping up last year’s budget and passing along $440 million of excess revenue to the next budget cycle. I voted “no” because it also funded a new $400 million Capitol office building for the General Assembly. Our current building is an asbestos-laden, energy inefficient, allergy-inducing fire hazard, but I could not tolerate the irony of spending $400 million on ourselves at the same time we are refusing to extend healthcare to Virginia’s 400,000 neediest citizens at minimal cost to taxpayers.

The Senate will return on April 7 to hold hearings on the budget. The House is not scheduled to return at this time. Last week, I wrote about many of the consequences of inaction. More analysis provides more consequences. As of today, Virginia taxpayers have lost over $450 million due to the legislature’s gridlock. One study estimates that failure to act will lead to 200 to 600 preventable deaths per year. Another report estimates $28 million in savings to local governments via medical services provided by their community services boards such as Fairfax County’s.

Some opponents argue that the federal government could prohibit Virginia from withdrawing after changing reimbursements. After Governor McAuliffe produced a letter from the federal government stating that Virginia could withdraw at any time, opponents moved the goalposts, conditioning that that was not good enough and demanded a new federal law.

The state now has spending authority through June 30, 2014. It is unclear what will happen if a budget is not approved. The state would clearly not close its jails, stop processing criminal cases or shut down university hospitals, but there would be consequences.

I will continue to work with my colleagues to find a bipartisan solution to our stalemate, but that path is not clear today. As always, if you have any ideas, drop me a note at scott@scotturovell.com. It is an honor to serve you in the state legislature.

Cheer Team Takes Top Honors at National Harbor

The Panther Cheer Club from Carl Sandburg Middle School in Alexandria took home top honors this weekend, March 29 and 30, at the annual Battle at the Capitol, a destination national performance cheerleading and dance championship. The hometown Panthers earned a first-place finish and garnered over the two-day competition the highest overall combined score of all the middle schools that competed at the event, which included teams who traveled from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New York. The Panthers also received a bid to attend the invitation-only U.S. Finals competition that will be held in Virginia Beach on May 3. This was the second weekend of wins for the team, who also took home championship T-shirts on March 22 at the Live! Cheer and Dance Championship held at the convention center in Washington, D.C. The team has been training all season in performance cheerleading, which entails an athletic routine that includes tumbling, stunting, and dance. For more information and to view a video of their winning performance, visit www.panthercheerclub.org.

Colorado’s school voucher plan offers limited hope for lower-income students

Commentary

by Scott A. Surovell
Delegate (D-44)

As we near the end of our special session, I have been reflecting on the limited hope that the state’s school voucher plan offers for lower-income students.

While the voucher program may seem like a Band-Aid solution, it is important to remember that it is just one part of a larger strategy to improve education in Colorado. The state must also focus on increasing funding for public schools and ensuring that all children have access to high-quality education.

In the meantime, parents in low-income areas should stay vigilant and continue to advocate for their children’s educational needs.

We must work together to ensure that all students have the opportunity to succeed and reach their full potential.

held in reserve pending approval of the plan.

Katherine K. Hanley Townhomes $235, 220 (office to find and Prevent Homelessness): We support funding to provide supportive housing and services to families with children. Two 3-unit buildings are scheduled to open in December 2014.

Domestic Violence and Sexual Violence Services: $139,973 (Department of Family Services): We support funding for one new program manager position to address both increasing caseloads and the complexity of work in the Office for Women and Domestic and Sexual Violence Services.

Investment in School Readiness $714,000 (Office of Children): We support the County Executive’s proposal to increase the funding for the Community Education Initiative program to expand community-based programs for children living in poverty to reach school benchmarks.

Affordable Housing (Housing and Community Development): Securing safe, decent affordable housing remains one of the greatest challenges for low and moderate income households in Fairfax County and is a considerable barrier to a family’s ability to achieve stability and self-sufficiency.

Housing Blueprint: The FY 2015 advertised budget includes $1.95 million to fund the Bridging Affordability rental program as a portion of the FY 2015 Housing Blueprint. The funding for this program was reallocated in the FY2014 budtet, and the proposed FY2015 allocation is approximately $2 million less than FY2013.

Bridging Affordability was adopted as the county’s signature program within the Housing Blueprint to move families out of homelessness and onto a more sustainable future. This program provides temporary subsidies and case management to extremely low-income households, and has successfully served over 281 families. Bridging Affordability works. Nearly 70 percent of the households have successfully transitioned out of Bridging Affordability into permanent housing have moved on to fair market housing.

With the current Bridging Affordability program funding, we are positioned to continue to serve approximately 150 new households through FY14 and FY15. Beginning in FY16, it is critical that Fairfax County continues to invest in this high-impact, high-demand program to ensure that hundreds of extremely low income families have access to stable housing options and don’t cycle back into homelessness.

The FY2015 advertised budget also incudes $5 million for the New Private Partner Acquisition to increase the county’s stock of committed affordable housing. This funding would be used to preserve or develop 120 units of affordable housing for low income working families, but this amount is inadequate to provide the gap financing for housing projects especially if the goal of serving formerly homeless persons, as stated in the Blueprint, is to be achieved.

In considering these requests, please note the following statistics:

❖ U.S. Census Bureau statistics show an estimated 73,916 households in Fairfax County earning less than $50,000 annually, or about 47 percent of the area’s median income for a family ($107,910).

❖ Census data also shows an estimated 67,293 persons living below the poverty level in Fairfax County; According to the Center for Housing Policy at Virginia Tech, the total affordable housing gap in Fairfax County for low and moderate-income renters (earning no more than $85,000 for a family of four) is 28,405 units.

❖ The Blueprint for Housing shows a shortfall of 1.81 units for FY2015 in meeting the goals of the 10 Year Plan to Prevent and End Homelessness; Near 1,650 CSB clients need affordable housing.

Communities who are successful in addressing their unmet housing needs have adopted a dedicated, reliable source of funding to preserve or develop housing that is affordable.

The county’s greatest strides in affordable housing were made during the years when one penny of the real estate tax was dedicated to housing preservation. Whether it’s a dedicated revenue source or an annual, reliable commitment to a housing trust fund, we urge Fairfax County to once again consider this investment in housing that is affordable and needed for a significant and growing percentage of the County’s population.

Community Health Care Network (CHCN): In FY 2014, funding for CHCN was cut by $752,000. The $250,000 reduction in specialty care contracts that resulted has worsened an already insufficient supply of local specialists. CHCN has therefore increased its utilization and reliance on University of Virginia Medical Center specialists, requiring CHCN’s low income, unem-sured clients to travel to Charlottesville, opening scarce money and missing time at work. It is our understanding that a working group of public and private providers and leaders has recently initiated efforts to vary the medical home model with a system. Therefore, rather than recommend restoration of the funding at this time, we suggest that the county continue to support this effort and play an appropriate role in developing solutions to this problem. By the time of Carryover, we should all have a better understanding about the needed resources, if any.

This coalition appreciates the significant budget challenges you face for FY2015, and thanks you for our partnership as we work together in support of the most vulnerable in our community. However, we are deeply concerned that the housing and human services system has reached a “tipping point” where it will not be possible to decrease funding without sacrificing services and failing to meet the human services needs of everyone. We believe that there is very little margin for error, and that any further cuts will result in program reductions, eliminations, or waiting lists for services. Any reduction in Fairfax County is to remain a place of excellence, we must come together as community to discuss a long term strategy for funding and maintaining adequate, annual investments in housing and human services in future budgets.

ing motorized vehicles. Further, one letter writer fears the addition of dedicated turn lanes would be a mistake. He argues that the move is not necessarily related to safety but rather should be an opportunity to agree upon the best way to improve that road, one that takes into account the safety of all citizens in the community — whether on two wheels, four wheels or on their own two feet.

Multiple Needs

To the Editor:

Supporting the public schools is Fairfax County’s number one priority, this year and all years. I don’t believe that lies in the fact that over 50 percent of the county’s budget supports school programs. This large expense has generated considerable debate among county taxpayers over the years. However, this year the discussion has become toxic and personal.

I went to the Lee District budget hearing on Wednesday evening, March 26, to hear presenters from Fairfax County and Fairfax County Public Schools explain their respective proposed budgets. Although the financial picture has improved, the county is still not free of the impacts of the economic downturn at the end of the last decade. Two issues dominated the audience discussion: the possible increase in real estate taxes and the request by the school board for a funding increase over last year’s budget.

It was one of the very worst public meetings I’ve attended. Two older, retired persons in the audience worried about the impact of increased home assessments and tax rates; audience members representing the T he T.C. Williams lineup showed signs of life in the bottom of the seventh inning as the Titans brought the tying run to the plate against West Potomac.

But with two runners on and two outs, TC’s threat ended in an all-too-familiar fashion: with the bat resting near the shoulder as strike three settled in the catcher’s mitt.

West Potomac senior pitchers Michael Barnes and Billy Lescher combined for 12 strikeouts, eight of the looking variety, and the Wolverines defeated the Titans 4-1 on Tuesday night at Simpson Field in Alexandria. The TC’s Williams baseball team managed just three hits.

Barnes started on the mound and pitched five innings, earning the win. He allowed one run and two hits while hitting one batter, walking none and striking out seven. Lescher picked up a two-inning save, allowing one hit and walking two while striking out five.

“(Barnes and Lescher are) our No. 1 and 2, and you can pick [which] one [is No. 1],” West Potomac head coach Jim Sullivan said.

“We’re counting on them to do a lot this year. If they pitch like they did tonight, we’ll win a lot of games.”

Barnes, listed at 6 feet 3, 166 pounds, will pitch for the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

“It’s a really comfortable feeling,” Barnes said of having two quality starting pitchers. “You feel really confident going into games. It’s nice to have two different pitchers to throw two different games a week.”

Lescher, listed at 6 feet 3, 210 pounds, will pitch for the University of Pennsylvania.

“It’s a great advantage,” Lescher said. “It’s a great weapon for our team to have that 1-2 combo up there.”

Fellow Wolverine seniors A.J. Melvin and David Wagner will also play college baseball. Melvin will attend Washington & Jefferson College and Wagner will play for New York University.

West Potomac (2-2) jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Leadoff batter Brett Schaefer doubled on a 0-2 pitch and freshman second baseman Luke Belanger reached on an error, which allowed a run to score. Junior designated hitter Tom Nicholson followed with an RBI double and junior outfielder Rocky Ibolen later stroked a run-scoring single.

T.C. Williams responded with a run in the bottom of the inning. Leadoff batter Pat Devine doubled down the third-base line on a 0-2 pitch and, two batters later, senior first baseman Tyler Ratliff delivered an RBI double down the third-base line.

The Titans went scoreless for the remainder of the contest, however, and did not produce another hit until the seventh inning, when JP McLaughlin led off the frame with a single. TC batters struck out 12 times.

“I think more so than anything, [the strikeouts are due to] a lack of seeing live pitching due to the way the weather has been this early season. We’ve been extremely limited,” T.C. Williams head coach Jim Blair said. “...They need to have the discipline. We are a heavy junior, senior team this year, so they’ve been through this before. Early season, you have to make adjustments at the plate in order to be successful and I think that’s where we did not do a great job tonight.”

Devine, a junior infielder who had one of the three TC hits, said the Titans need to get more aggressive at the plate.

“You can change your approach,” he said. “I think we’ve always had that problem; we need to be more aggressive. I’ve been here for two or three years and we’ve always had the problem of we just take too many pitches or just aren’t aggressive enough early in counts, and that’s one thing we’ve been trying to change this year.”

The loss dropped TC’s record to 0-2. Last season, the Titans, led by then-senior pitcher Alec Grosser, qualified for regionals for the first time since 2009. The Atlanta Braves selected Grosser in the 11th round of the 2013 Major League Baseball draft and the Titans are trying to discover who they are as a team without him.

“Because we’re an older group, I think the bar had been set last year,” Blair said. “But in saying that, as well, we’re still a team trying to find our identity without Alec Grosser and those are some big shoes to fill, obviously. As we progress through the season, hopefully we’ll have the opportunity for some guys to really step up for this ball team.”

Junior right-hander Jacob Katz started on the mound for the Titans and suffered the loss. He allowed three runs and five hits while walking one and striking out two in four innings.

“Last year, we were afforded the luxury a little bit to put Alec up on the mound and kind of ride his coattails a little bit,” Blair said. “This year, the load has to be picked up evenly by all.”

Meanwhile, West Potomac, which finished second in last year’s Patriot District regular-season standings, has visions of winning the Conference 7 championship.

“Hate to write [our expectations] down, but we plan to beat Lake Braddock,” Sullivan said. “Our goal is to win the district.”

West Potomac will travel to face Lake Braddock, the defending region champion, at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, April 4. T.C. Williams faced West Springfield on Wednesday, after the Gazette’s deadline. The Titans will host Woodson at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, April 4.

Wolverine pitchers combine for 12 strikeouts during 4-1 victory.

WP’s Snigur To Play Soccer at La Salle

West Potomac senior Gregory Snigur has committed to play soccer for La Salle University, a NCAA Division I school in the Atlantic 10 Conference. Snigur was admitted to the La Salle Honors Program and plans to study psychology. In addition to receiving an athletic award of $40,000, Snigur was awarded the Christian Brothers’ Scholarship, which is the highest academic recognition offered by La Salle University awarding full tuition for four years.

In 2011, Gregory relocated from Warwick Valley High School, where he played varsity soccer as a freshman, to West Potomac. He has been a member of the varsity soccer team at West Potomac since and was named a captain this season. Gregory has played on various travel and elite academy soccer teams in New York, Maryland and Virginia, including the DC United MLS Pre-Academy team. Snigur is also a member of West Potomac’s National Honor Society.

Greetings! Ducks will play the Titans Tuesday night.

Barnes started on the mound and pitched five innings, earning the win. He allowed one run and two hits while hitting one batter, walking none and striking out seven. Lescher picked up a two-inning save, allowing one hit and walking two while striking out five.

“[Barnes and Lescher are] our No. 1 and 2, and you can pick which one [is No. 1],” West Potomac head coach Jim Sullivan said.

“We’re counting on them to do a lot this year. If they pitch like they did tonight, we’ll win a lot of games.”

Barnes, listed at 6 feet 3, 166 pounds, will pitch for the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

“It’s a really comfortable feeling,” Barnes said of having two quality starting pitchers. “You feel really confident going into games. It’s nice to have two different pitchers to throw two different games a week.”

Lescher, listed at 6 feet 3, 210 pounds, will pitch for the University of Pennsylvania.

“It’s a great advantage,” Lescher said. “It’s a great weapon for our team to have that 1-2 combo up there.”

Fellow Wolverine seniors A.J. Melvin and David Wagner will also play college baseball. Melvin will attend Washington & Jefferson College and Wagner will play for New York University.

Seniors Rush to Yoga

Yoga teachers, research point to health benefits for seniors.

Shortly after 10 a.m. on any given Tuesday or Thursday morning, 84-year-old Lola Wulchin can be found slowly stretching into a downward facing dog pose or lunging into a warrior one posture. The Vienna resident has been a yoga devotee at East Meets West Yoga Center in Vienna for slightly more than two years. In fact, she credits twice-weekly, gentle yoga practice with boosting her health and improving her quality of life.

“I had been bothered by a lot of neck pain from arthritis,” said Wulchin. “I had seen a pain management doctor who gave me shots, I had physical therapy, but I still had neck pain and very little range of motion.”

A turning point came after she was struck by a passing comment from one of her doctors. “My neurologist mentioned that his wife had been doing yoga for back pain and it had helped. So I decided to try it.”

Wulchin embarked on a twice-weekly ritual that she describes as life changing. “My gentle yoga classes have been a Godsend,” she said. “I have less pain now. I still have some stiffness, but I have a better range of motion.”

She isn’t the only senior to reap the benefits of yoga. Researchers at the American Congress of Rehabilitation Medicine and the American Academy of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation conducted an eight-week study of 23 adults aged 62 to 83 years old. They designed a yoga program for that age group with the goals of improving lower-body strength and flexibility. Participants attended two 90-minute yoga classes per week, and were asked to complete at least 20 minutes of directed home practice on alternate days.

The study found yoga programs tailored to elderly adults can be a cost-effective way to improve health outcomes for seniors. Researchers suggested that yoga may be a viable alternative to traditional exercise programs for older adults.

More Seniors Plan To Age in Place

Many local techniques and programs can help seniors stay in their homes longer.

The AARP reports that nearly 80 percent of adults age 65 and older want to remain in their current homes as long as possible. That population is growing. According to the Department of Health and Human Services’ Administration on Aging, the population 65 years or older numbered 39.6 million in 2009. By 2030, that number will grow to about 72.1 million.

While people are living longer and healthier lives, there are still barriers to aging in place, including medication management, self-care, socialization and transportation. But there are innovative strategies and initiatives to help combat these roadblocks.

“We’re showing people how to modify their home so that it is accessible,” said Robert C. Eiffert, the Long Term Care Program manager for the Fairfax County Health Department. Fairfax and other local counties are conducting workshops on how to make a home safe for a senior who wants to live alone. “We’re talking about things like adding a ramp to your front door, changing your door knobs and cabinet handles for people who have arthritis in their hands.”

“There are wonderful emerging technologies that allow adult children to monitor their parents who live alone,” he said. “It is not intrusive. There are not cameras involved, but there are motion sensors. For example, if there is no movement in the morning, an adult child might think, ‘Hmm, I need to check.’”

Andrew J. Carle, director of the Senior Housing Administration at George Mason University, recommends First Street for Boomers and Beyond (www.firststreetonline.com) which offers products for seniors and their caregivers. “Products like a nice walk in bathtub for seniors or an alarm that reminds you when to take your medicine are things you can do to change your home and make it safe.”

A LACK OF SOCIAL interaction and mental stimulation can contribute to depression and mental deterioration, Carle said. Or organizations like the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) at George Mason University, offer opportunities for intellectual stimulation and cultural experiences for retirees in Northern Virginia.

“OLLI, as we call it, is for people who don’t want to sit around and watch television all day,” said Carle. “Professors volunteer their time to give lectures on art, history, science and other topics. Listening to professors speak about stimulating topics helps keep their brains sharp.”

Jennifer Diano, OLLI’s executive director, says the group has 1,200 members, and is funded by an endowment from the Bernard Osher Foundation. The group’s main campus is in Fairfax, but other campuses are in Reston and Sterling. It serves the needs of those who might not feel comfortable in traditional college classrooms and don’t want the pressure of writing papers and taking tests, but are still interested in learning.

“We have people here who were economics and worked with finance, but in their retired life they want to explore areas ... like art classes or history classes,” she said.

One of those members is 76-year-old John Woods. He has attended three to four OLLI events a week for 10 years. “We have a wide variety of professionals and a wide variety of groups that meet,” he said. “We have a group that meets to talk about financial investments. Another group meets every Monday morning at 9 a.m. and looks at the past week’s headlines from the Washington Post, New York Times and Wall Street Journal. They have insights that are important. The stimulating thing is sharing ideas among ourselves.”

VILLAGES ARE community-based organizations designed to help members help each other remain independent and in the communities of their choice. “Back in 2000, villages started with a group in Boston, and organizations designed to help members help each other,” he said.

“Eiffert, of George Mason, says village members define the type and scope of services. “A good starting point when creating a village is to survey the community members to determine their needs,” he said. “We provide technical assistance to community groups that are interested in putting together a village and encourage on what models work best for their community. Fairfax County is working with Montgomery County to rewrite the manual on how to start a village.”

There are a few different models, including the “Concierge Village,” which is a non-profit model that coordinates access to an array of services through vetted providers, including transportation, home repairs, care coordination and computer technicians. Most also include social and educational activities. Members arrange for services by calling a central phone number, and pay annual dues that can range from $500 to $800 for an individual and $700 to $1,200 for a couple.

The “All Volunteer” model organizes community volunteers to provide services and support to others. There are no paid staff. In some cases, hours donated by volunteers are “banked” and can be used in the future if the volunteer needs services or assistance. The “Neighborhood Network” is also informal. Groups meet on a regular basis to hear speakers on topics of interest selected by members.

ANOTHER BIG GAP is medication management, Eiffert said. “If someone can’t manage their own medication and can’t afford to pay someone to come in to do it for them, that is a service gap that forces people into assisted living facilities.”

Carle agrees that the decision to age in place is complicated. “The first knee-jerk reaction is that when asked, seniors want to stay in their own homes,” he said, adding that those surveys can be misleading: “The surveys are not always credible if you’re surveying people who are 50-plus. I’m 54 and of course I want to stay in my house, but ask me again in 20 years. I think they should be surveying people who are 75-plus.”

In addition, “people don’t always understand the economic, social and safety aspects of it,” he added. “You can create all kinds of technology and universal designs to create a house for aging in place, but a senior might not be able to afford it. It could end up costing far more than the best assisted living facility in town.”

Granny Pods, small prefabricated homes that allow families to house their relatives in small backyard cottages, are another alternative. “These small living units allow you to put an elderly relative in your backyard and hook up to your electricity,” said Carle.

Northern Virginia Senior Olympics
Mission: Living Healthy Longer

“Living longer is the mission of the Northern Virginia Senior Olympics,” said Dave Jerome, of Burke, chairman of the Northern Virginia Senior Olympics. “It is our goal to promote healthy aging through both mental and physical activity, which is why NVSO offers such a wide range of events from sports to board games.”

The 2014 Northern Virginia Senior Olympics will take place Sept. 13-24 at 18 venues throughout Northern Virginia. Adults 50 years of age and over who live in one of the sponsoring jurisdictions are eligible to participate.

Events include swimming, diving, track, field, tennis, table tennis, racquetball, pickleball, duplicate bridge, chess, Scrabble, cribbage, men’s basketball, handball, ERG rowing, Wii bowling, ten pin bowling, eight ball pool, horse-shoes, softball hit and throw, yo-yo tricks, bocce, Frisbee throw, golf, miniature golf, bunco, men’s and women’s basketball free throw, team line dancing, volleyball, badminton, cycling and more. Gold, silver and bronze medals are awarded after each event. All events are open to the public.

Online registration will be available at www.nvso.com after July 1. Registration forms will be available at senior residences, community centers, seniors centers or by calling 703-228-4721. Registration deadline is Aug. 29 (mail) and Sept. 5 (online). The Northern Virginia Senior Olympics is sponsored by the counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Fauquier, Loudoun and Prince William and the cities of Alexandria, Fairfax and Falls Church.

Jennifer Collins, a countywide program specialist in the Office of Senior Adult Programs in Arlington, said that yoga classes that are specifically tailored for those 55 and older are among her office’s most popular.

“Some of our [yoga] classes fill up within minutes of opening,” said Collins. “We have people sitting at computers at our senior centers ready to register as soon registration opens because they know the classes are going to fill.”

Sean .FM (yes, that is his name) of OneAum in Potomac, works with seniors with a wide range of abilities. He said it’s important to find a class that is a good fit.

“There are many kinds of seniors,” he said. “There are seniors that are immobile and some who are really active. . . . We created Yoga Rx for those with mobility issues. We work them in the chairs.”

George Lynch, fitness director at Vinson Hall Retirement Community in McLean, is planning to incorporate yoga classes into the fitness programs. The instruction will be tailored to meet the needs of his clients. “We have residents who are in their 80s, 90s and some in their 100s. Everything we do is designed specifically for seniors.”

Andrew J. Carle director of the Senior Housing Administration at George Mason University said an increasing number of retirement communities are offer yoga classes as part of their fitness programs.

“Anything that gets us beyond senior activities such as birthdays, Bibles, bingo and bridge is a step up.”

A recent study showed yoga programs specifically designed for seniors can improve strength and flexibility.

to prevent or reduce age-related changes, specifically an increased risk for falls, dependency and other ailments.

Local yoga teachers agree, saying that while yoga classes designed for the 55 and older crowd are increasing in popularity, myths about the practice keep some seniors out of yoga studios.

“The main thing that I hear is that you have to already be flexible to do yoga,” said Sandy Pradas of Joyful Heart Yoga in Mount Vernon. “People look at pictures in magazines of people wrapping their legs around their necks or doing other advanced poses and they think, ‘If I can’t do that, then I can’t do yoga.’”

Pradas, whose students are mostly between 50 and 75 years old, said, “Everybody can do yoga, but there are a lot of types of yoga and not every type is good for everybody.”

Dawn Curtis, owner of East Meets West Yoga Center, recently completed a course at Duke Integrative Medicine and believes an increasing interest in yoga among seniors will be known as the Silver Tsunami.

“That is baby boomers going into yoga,” she said. “Yoga for seniors is going to be the biggest target audience that yoga teachers are going to have because of the number of baby boomers who are looking for alternative ways of exercise because they are not going to be able to keep up with impact exercises like running.”

In fact, she says gentle yoga classes are among the most popular at her studio. “I have students who are as old as 84. We deal with people who can’t get on the floor,” she said. “We use chairs. We work on balance because that is a main concern among seniors. We work on coordination because that is another thing that tends to diminish as we age.”
