Ending Veteran Homelessness in 2015?

Chairman Bulova, Fairfax County take on national Mayors’ Challenge.

The Gazette

The transition from serving in the armed forces to civilian life is often not simple. While in Fairfax County there are more than 12,000 veteran-owned businesses, indicating a significant measure of success, for others the path is far more difficult.

For a small number of veterans, unemployment, alcoholism, drug abuse or mental or physical disability causes them to wind up on rock-bottom: homeless.

In Fairfax County’s 2014 “Point-in-Time” count of homeless individuals living in the Fairfax-Falls Church community, veterans made up 8 percent of the total number of 1,225 people. The next Point-in-Time snapshot study will take place on Wednesday, Jan. 28, in coordination with the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments.

Dean Klein, director of the county’s Office to Prevent and End Homelessness, said it’s difficult to maintain an exact head count because of the transient nature of the group and, he believes, many veterans who are homeless choose to not identify themselves as veterans. He estimates that there are about 150 homeless veterans in Fairfax County.

That population is the focus of First Lady Michelle Obama’s Mayors Challenge to End Veterans Homelessness in 2015. Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova announced recently that Fairfax County is joining the over 200 mayors and elected officials nationwide to take on that challenge.

“COULD WE HAVE ALL VETERANS IN A HOUSE by end of 2015? Yes,” said Mary Keener, a governance board member for the Office to Prevent and End Homelessness, and founder of volunteer organization America’s Adopt A Soldier.

“Would that prevent them from becoming homeless again? No. We didn’t solve the root problems. They need to go back and get training, jobs. Can we work on our preventative measures? Absolutely.”

For any case of homelessness, there’s no magic bullet.

“That’s sort of the end of the spiral,” said Bulova, “when someone has had difficulty during their daily life, trying to cope with things that they’ve experienced when they were serving their country. It may be marital differences, drinking, drug abuse, financial difficulties. And trying to look at some of those root causes, where this all began, is important to ending homelessness.”

For “Jones,” a mid-30s veteran of the war in Iraq, the downward spiral was a result of his Post-traumatic stress disorder. “He could not sleep, could not live with what he saw,” said Keener.

Jones ended up walking out on his wife and children, his life, to live in the woods south of Fort Belvoir. One day he was approached by a community member who also happened to be a veteran. That person earned Jones’ trust and convinced him to seek help from a Veterans Affairs caseworker.

Over the next six months, Jones received counseling services through the VA and a HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) rental voucher.

Colleagues Praise Puller

State senator to retire at end of current session.

By Gerald A. Fill
The Gazette

Calling State Senator Linda T. (“Toddy”) Puller’s announcement to retire “bittersweet,” Del. Mark Sickles explained that it is “bitter because her absence will leave a gaping void here in Richmond; sweet because nobody has done more in one life to deserve less hectic years at home with friends and family.”

On the opening day of the Virginia General Assembly, Puller said she will retire from the Virginia Senate after the 2015 legislative session.

Puller was elected to four consecutive terms representing the 44th District, House of Delegates (1992-2000), and four consecutive terms representing the 36th Senate District (2000 to the present).

“Twenty-three years ago I began one of the great adventures of my life,” she said. “With the encouragement and support of my family and friends I ran for and won a seat in the House of Delegates. She served in the House of Delegates for 8 years. She then ran for the State Senate. “In 1999, with the encouragement and support of the late Senator Joe Gartlan and family and friends I ran for the 36th Senate District and won. My colleagues in the Senate entrusted me with the chairman’s gavel of the Joint Commission on Health Care, and the Senate Committee on Rehabilitation and Social Services, and a place on the Board of Veterans Services … where I hope along the way I have been able to improve opportunities for all Virginians. Now, with the encouragement, love, and support of my family I have made the decision to step down and to not run in 2015.”

Her district includes portions of Fairfax county, Prince William County, and Stafford County.

Political Jockeying

With Puller’s retirement, the race is on.

By Gerald A. Fill
The Gazette

Soon after state Sen. Todd Puller’s retirement announcement, candidates for the vacated seat are already emerging.

Del. Scott Surovell (D-44) said he will seek the Democratic nomination for the 36th Senate District seat; Mayor of Dumfries Jerry Foreman had already declared in December 2014 that he is seeking the Republican nomination for the seat. So far the only other declared candidate for the anticipated open seat is Paul Krizek who announced...

Puller To Retire at End of Current Session

Born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, she graduated from Mary Washington college and is a member of the Episcopal Church. She taught fourth grade in Woodbridge.

Puller was married to Lewis B. Puller, Jr., a decorated U.S. Marine, who was severely wounded in Vietnam. He lost both his legs and six fingers to a booby trap explosion and was nearly killed. They had two children and she now has two grandchildren. On the eve of her first election in 1991 to the House of Delegates her husband wrote a novel about his experiences, "Fortunate Son," which won a Pulitizer Prize. Not long after that, Lewis Puller Jr. took his life. Several years later Senator Puller suffered a stroke that affected her physically but not her ability as a legislator. Senate Minority leader Dick Saslaw commented on her retirement announcement: "In all the years I have known Toddie despite the personal tragedies she suffered and her physical limitations she never once complained. Never once. She was a very fine legislator who did her homework, was well prepared, and could always be relied on to provide the legislative leadership to carry out her many Senate responsibilities in an exemplary fashion. She earned the admiration and respect of everyone who came to know her. We will all miss her presence."

Her personal experience married to a wounded Vietnam Veteran confined to a wheelchair who battled depression contributed to her effectiveness in championing veterans services and benefits. U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine said "her primary legacy will be the incredible work she has done to support Virginia veterans. Her tireless advocacy for initiatives such as property tax exemptions for disabled veterans and Virginia's wounded warrior program will aid veterans for generations to come." She has received numerous awards for her work in the General Assembly, including the 2011 Legislator of the Year Award by the Virginia Council of State Chapters of the Military Order of America. Highlights of her legislative accomplishments include:

- Virginia Wounded Warrior Program
- All Payor Claims Database to bring transparency in health records
- Newborn Health Screening to expand testing to identify and treat genetic disorders causing death or serious mental disorders.
- A Constitutional Amendment to provide a tax exemption for disabled veterans
- A leading sponsor of funding legislation that secured $2 million for the U.S. Multimodal Transit Alternatives Study which recommended extending the yellow line to Hybla Valley and bus rapid transit to Woodbridge.

She recently introduced legislation in this session of the General Assembly to assure that the $300 million Virginia Public Building Authority Bonds that were approved will not be used for any other purpose until an appropriate state share of the funds will be allocated for the Northern Virginia Veterans Care Center project and the Hampton Roads Veterans Center project. In addition, she has been credited for being a consistent advocate for the disadvantaged in Virginia who need assistance for health care, shelter, and educational assistance.

Mount Vernon District Supervisor Gerald Hyland said, "She has been a tireless advocate for Mount Vernon residents. Her focus on veterans, education, families, and transportation has made a difference for the better. Todd's pragmatic, bi-partisan, grassroots approach to lawmaking made her a success not only with her constituents but also with her fellow legislators in Richmond. I wish her all the best in her retirement and look forward to her continued community service and consultation for local matters."

Sue Langley, chair of the Fairfax County Democratic Committee, said, "Her retirement is a great loss to those she represented in Fairfax County, Prince William, and Stafford County. She has been a strong supporter for critical needs in transportation, veterans benefits, and social justice issues."

In addition, "she sponsored legislation to simplify absentee ballots for overseas military voters, improve benefits for the disabled, and sponsored a Virginia constitutional amendment to provide a property tax exemption for disabled veterans."

State Sen. Adam Ebbin called her "a tireless fighter for veterans and all the citizens of the Commonwealth. Her work will be a lasting legacy for the people of Mount Vernon and Prince William. She will be greatly missed in Richmond."

Del. Scott Surovell said, "Senator Puller's retirement is a significant loss for the Mount Vernon and Lee areas of Fairfax county, the Occoquan, Woodbridge, and Montclair areas of Prince William County, and North Stafford County. Her efforts on behalf of seniority, and policy experience are an irreplaceable asset for her 200,000 constituents. There is not a member of the Virginia legislature who is more focused on moving our state government to address the concerns of our veterans and their families — whether it is government services, tax exemptions or helping Virginians recognize the long-term consequences that combat injuries have on military families. Senator Puller's decision not to seek re-election is a huge loss. She was a relentless advocate for improving U.S. route one, education, veterans benefits, and looking after the less fortunate."

With Puller's Retirement, the Race Is On

that he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 44th House of Delegates seat to be vacated by Surovell.

In December, Foreman said, "The time is right and the place is right for a new leader in the 36th District Senate Seat. I will work hard every day to honestly and ethically represent the 36th District Senate seat. I believe in servant leadership and I have never forgotten for one minute who I work for and where I come from. … until we move beyond the status quo, until we eliminate the crippling partisanship of a political party; no policy breakthroughs will occur.

Foreman was elected in 2010 as town councilman; then elected in a special mayoral election in 2012, and reelected to a full four-year term in 2014.

Foreman received a bachelor's and master's degrees in aviation science and management. He received his undergraduate degree at Southern Illinois University where he has served as a professor. As a Marine Corps veteran he climbed up through the ranks achieving the rank of major in a 25-year career (1980-2005). He currently owns a small business, Foreman Aviation Services and Technologies, and serves as an aviation consultant to the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. His local appointments include membership on the Northern Virginia Regional Council, and the Northern Virginia Regional Transportation Authority. Since announcing in December he has established a campaign headquarters, filed campaign paperwork as required with the Republican headquarters in Richmond, and established a website: http://www.gmforemansenate36va.com/

On Jan. 18, Surovell announced in Richmond that he is seeking the Democratic nomination to run for the 44th District Senate Seat.

In his announcement he listed his accomplishments since taking office in 2009, including:

- Repealed the $100 tax on hybrid vehicles
- Expanded mental health services at Virginia’s community colleges
- Brought back over $300 million in new funding for Fairfax, Prince William and Stafford county schools since 2009
- Worked with Senator Puller to secure $2 million for the U.S. One Transit Analysis that recommended extending the yellow line to Hybla Valley, and bus rapid transit to Woodbridge.

His announcement listed the following campaign initiatives that he will work to accomplish if elected as state senator:

- Extend the yellow line to Hybla Valley; and install bus rapid transit to Woodbridge
- Provide every public school student a computer.
- Expand Medicaid
- Fight predatory lending on Route One
- Promote solar power and energy efficient technology
- Focus on jobs, infrastructure, and support for veterans

Surovell ended his announcement by asking for volunteers and for supporters to sign his petition. He pointed out that he is forbidden from fundraising while the General Assembly is in session. Email: scott@scottwsurovell.org

On Jan. 19, Krizek, who described himself as a community activist, announced that he will campaign for the Democratic nomination to run for the 44th District House of Delegates seat. Krizek, like Surovell, is a native son of the Mount Vernon area who graduated from Groveton High School, now West Potomac High School, and earned a law degree from Catholic University. A former legislative aide to former U.S. Rep. Jim Moran, Krizek has worked for Christian Relief Services Charities as chief counsel for the past 16 years.

"Scott Surovell has been an outstanding delegate for this area and I plan to support exactly the same issues in Richmond," Krizek said. "We need to elect progressive Democrats that will fight for education, Medicaid expansion and ensure Fairfax gets its fair share in Richmond."

Chris Braunlich said, “The redistricting has left me in the Adam Ebbin State Senatorial district even though I live in the Hayfield area. The predominant part of Senator Ebbin’s district is in Alexandria city and Arlington. Instead of organizing political districts to enable our political representatives to help support, unite, and strengthen communities, gerrymandering has served to divide communities of interest and discourage public participation in the political process. No one benefits over the long term when our political representatives fail to continue.”

Helped secure him an apartment. He found a job through Adopt A Soldier’s placement network and is working.

The Mayors Challenge will propel work already in progress.

“It’s intended to renew our commitment to ending homelessness for veterans,” said Klein, “to raise awareness and bring on new partners.”

Fairfax County has a goal on the books of ending all homelessness by 2018.

“We already have a very strong effort in place,” said Bulova. “When I was invited to join the Mayors Challenge, I felt pretty confident in doing that.”

The county attributes its decrease in homelessness to various assisted housing initiatives and support services, collaborative efforts across faith-based communities, state, federal and local governments, and partnerships with businesses and nonprofits.

Klein cited three major areas where progress can and is being made:

❖ Having the right range of programs available, whether for short-term or chronically homeless individuals. “One extreme is high-needs people who need housing with very extensive services. At the other end is rapid re-housing programs,” or the infrastructure capacity to quickly re-house someone who has just become homeless.

❖ Housing resources: Two major funding streams for helping get people into housing are the HUD-VASH voucher program from the federal government and the VHDA Supportive Services for Veteran Families program. “We’re already putting funding towards acquiring or renovating, and subsidizing housing for people who are homeless or about to be,” said Bulova.

❖ Putting the effort together at the community level. “In other communities where we’ve seen the mayor, or chairman, along with local leaders in public and private sectors, coming together to set the goals,” Klein said, “their homelessness is ended.”

But subsidizing housing for an individual in one of Fairfax County’s 24,000 one-bedroom units ($1,408 per month average rent, based on the 2013 Rental Housing Complex Summary) alone won’t win the war.

“If it was just about finding a roof, that could be easily done,” said John MacPherson, executive director of The Lamb Center, a Fairfax- and faith-based nonprofit drop-in service facility for the homeless.

“It’s not that simple. You have to find the folks and in some cases coax them into that situation.”

For many homeless veterans, the pride they once felt as leaders serving their country switches to shame, leading to an aversion to asking for help when they were once the strong ones providing assistance.

Mental illness and PTSD can compound or heighten that experience, making it more difficult for a veteran to accept help.

“What you’d think just seems normal, getting into housing of any kind would be a good thing,” said MacPherson, “is not normal to them.”

The Lamb Center has a representative from the VA visit regularly to advise guests on what services are available to them through the VA. Other community organizations come back to the center for years. MacPherson explained, before revealing they are a veteran.

“They just feel like they don’t qualify,” he said.

At 21, Jacob Flores was at an APEX: He was married, owned a house and was in charge of 12 other Marines. He currently commands the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post 8649 in Fairfax Station.

“I got a high in the military,” said the Alexandria city resident. “I was at my prime in life; I felt like I was in my 30s.”

But a number of issues, not the least of which a divorce, brought Flores back to ground level. He left the Marine Corps and leaned on his friends, family and community for support as he changed gears.

“For a lot of us, our high was that brotherhood, all those men and women that we fought with,” said Flores. “It’s an elite group. You get this pride.”

Flores is studying management and construction engineering at George Mason University, financed by the G.I. Bill. He also works two jobs — one at the Dewberry architecture firm and weekends bunging at a sports bar — to make ends meet.

But, he said, many veterans have more difficulty making the transition. One bad break turns into another, and especially for those with mental or physical disabilities as a result of their service, they can lose their support system.

“Some people miss those sections of the next step of what they should do,” Flores said.

“Financial matters can become a problem, they get bogged down and don’t have enough money to pay bills or rent. It becomes an avalanche.”

One of the projects Keesser and others have been working on is establishing a centralized veterans’ resource and care center.

“Building a military family is bringing them to new opportunities in that community. Depending on the facility they end up using, it could be residential or not, and would offer “social grounding” services including nutrition, child life experts and job-oriented educational materials.

“It’s the whole-person concept,” said Keesser. “Financial management, mental-emotionalDrug issues — people would leave there in a year and walk out of the classroom environment to an actual job.”

Keesser said such a center would help provide guests links to VA benefits, but for funding they would need to rely on grants and partnerships from the business community.

“We need to stop the bleeding,” she said. “Putting individuals in housing really turns someone around. And part of that moving forward is the job, the pride and the key that opens the door.”

Delegates, senators, community leaders reflect on issues.

With the sentencing of former Virginia governor Bob McDonnell fresh on their minds, many northern Virginia members of the delegation to the state General Assembly say ethics reform is a focal point at the session which began Jan. 14.

McDonnell was found guilty on corruption charges, of receiving gifts in return for political favors, and sentenced to serving two years in prison.

The General Assembly addressed ethics last year, including a bill more tightly regulating legislators' travel, according to Del. Mark Sickles (D-43). “When we tackled that last year, a significant number in the General Assembly really felt that however ill-advised, the governor wouldn’t be convicted,” said Del. Vivian Watts (D-39). “The conviction made everyone realize it doesn’t matter how Virginia laws have been on the books more on gentleman’s honor than letter of the law. You can be convicted under federal standards of behavior and we need to take a very strong look at what we’re doing.”

CONTINUED FUNDING for transportation and social services are hopes from some of northern Virginia’s civic and business leaders.

“We’re blessed, as recipients of some top of the line road projects in the greater Springfield area over past 10 years,” said Nancy-Jo Manney, executive director of the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce. “Maintenance of those nice roads is key. If we don’t have the infrastructure maintained, equitable to future growth, businesses won’t come, and won’t stay.”

Holly Dougherty, executive director of the Mount Vernon-Lee Chamber of Commerce echoed the sentiment that past transportation improvements have been well-received, but continued work such as road width consistency along U.S. Route 1 from the Beltway to the Prince William County line, as well as re-synchronizing the highway’s traffic lights, is imperative. “Congestion relief will help economic development, things that give the best return to Virginia taxpayers. That will help our businesses so they’re more competitive in this part of Fairfax County.” Whether or not they already receive much funding from the state or county, non-profit executive directors like Meg Brantley at ECHO in Springfield will be watching the budget cuts carefully. “If they did something, cut away Medicaid, that would would mean community-based organizations would need to pick up the tab for more medical programs than they do now.”

Robert Petitti, executive director at Koinonia in Franconia, said another angle to watch is whether the state can earmark money for social services agencies and sidestep the county, where he believes money gets lost.

“The money that’s given out typically isn’t geared towards non-government organizations,” he said. “It helps their confidence, keeps them involved in school,” said Barker. “And it’s a more accurate assessment of how schools are doing.”

Bill that requires every school that wants to use electronic textbooks to provide every child with a computer.

Resolution to ratify the equal rights amendment. “My mother testified in favor of it when I was in her stomach,” said Surovell. “The reality is a lot of people in the GOP have concerns about giving women equal standing on everything that men have, consequences of birth control, reproductive policy, equal pay.”

Surovell will be part of a town hall meeting Feb. 14 at the Mount Vernon Government Center, along with state senators Adam Ebin (D-30) and Toddy Puller (D-36).

Del. Mark Sickles (D-43)

Bills/Causes

“Making sure we don’t cut K-12 education spending. And if possible, not cut higher education spending any more,” said Sickles. “I hope we don’t.”

Making the current pre-kindergarten program more “user-friendly,” Sickles said. “Fairfax County didn’t use all the slots, money allocated to us under that program. The school board had good reasons, but we need to make it more flexible and inviting for them to take the money.”

Bill that allows terminally ill patients to consent to use pharmaceuticals that haven’t been fully tested.

Sen. Linda Todd “Toddy” Puller (D-36)

Bills/Causes

Working on bills to help veterans, including a problem docket to help veterans and people with mental health problems with specific issues.

Supporting expanding Medicaid. “I don’t know how hard that’s going to be or if it will go anywhere,” said Puller. “It’s just ridiculous to not get more people covered by health insurance.”

Working on congressional redistricting, hoping to facilitate more diversity in the governing body.

Puller will be part of a town hall meeting Feb. 14 at the Mount Vernon Government Center, along with state Sen. Adam Ebin (D-30) and Del. Scott Surovell (D-44).

Sen. George Barker (D-39)

Bills/Causes

Bill that would allow students in all grades to retake their SOL shortly after the first exam if they don’t pass. Currently this is an option for high school students only. “It helps their confidence, keeps them involved in school,” said Barker. “And it’s a more accurate assessment of how schools are doing.”

Bill trying to get more money directed to secondary roads, especially roads that operate as primary roads but are classified as “secondary.”

Renovations need to meet zoning constraints.

By Gerald A. Fill
The Gazette

The Cedar Knoll Inn restaurant, located on the banks of the Potomac river, and a few minutes drive on the Mount Vernon Parkway from George Washington’s estate, closed this past November. However, according to Gant Redmon, attorney/advisor for the owners, it will reopen sometime this spring after a new restaurant lease is signed and renovations are completed.

According to Redmon, the most recent lease-holders — since 1993 — and the Cedar Knoll property owners terminated their relationship “by mutual agreement.” Redmon outlined some of the complexities that have to be dealt with before the restaurant reopens. First, a new restaurant lease has to be signed and that hasn’t happened as of now although discussions are underway with several candidates. Secondly, the specifics of the renovation have to be negotiated with the county, based on the zoning constraints that the property must conform to. Namely, the zoning agreement that the Cedar Knoll property now operates under is one of a “nonconforming use,” in a residential zoned area. According to Redmon the owners are not allowed to enlarge the building, add rooms or add “wings.”

Also, the second floor can only be used for office space, and not to serve food to guests. Redmon said the community may not be aware that historically at one time it was used as a “Tea Room” which, at the time, presented a dilemma for the county planners. The closest the county could come to zoning in conformance with the modern day master plan at the time was to designate it as a restaurant. But in order to gain approval, an occupancy permit and zoning had to be approved with the specific building restrictions that are still in force.

“Our current plan is that once a new restaurant operator is selected and renovation plans are agreed to, we will work closely with county officials to turn this into a beautiful facility that will serve quality food for individual diners as well as continue to offer it as a facility to host weddings, community, and business meetings, and everyone will be able to once again enjoy the unique Potomac river view,” Redmon said.

“History of Cedar Knoll Inn

In 1752, George Washington became the sole owner of Mount Vernon Plantation. He acquired five farms including River Farm which is where Cedar Knoll Inn is located. The original farm house which is Cedar Knoll today was constructed in the early 1800s as a tenant farm house for the 115.34 acre plantation called Markland on the Potomac. Later, Pauline Walsh became the first owner to use the building for commercial purposes. She extensively remodeled the building into an antique shop called Mount Vernon View Antique Shop.

Clifford Visits Mount Vernon Woods

Clifford the Big Red Dog visited Mount Vernon Woods Elementary School bringing holiday cheer and leaving a large sack of books so each child could select one to read over the winter break.

Reading is FUNdamental of Northern Virginia, Inc. and the Macy's Be Book Smart program collaborated to make this book party possible.

A former Mount Vernon Woods student, Joshua Richards, donned the Clifford costume, knowing just the right moves to make the beloved dog real as his father had played this role when he was a child. He visited each classroom, stirring up excitement for reading and responding to hugs and high fives.

Later, classes visited the library which was festooned with holiday decorations. RIF books, funded by the Macy's Be Book Smart program, covered the tables. Each child selected a book, not to borrow but to "keep forever," as librarian Brooke Williams explained to the students. She also read the "Grinch Who Stole Christmas" by Dr. Seuss and provided gingerbread scented bookmarks and candy canes to add to the party spirit.

Students who have learning and financial challenges often also face challenges getting into and attending college. However, educators say these challenges are not insurmountable, and some have developed techniques to help these students compete with their more advantaged counterparts.

Commonwealth Academy in Alexandria meets the needs of students who benefit from individual attention and small class sizes, as well as students who have been diagnosed with learning disabilities. Students are taught to understand their learning styles and develop strategies to succeed in the classroom and on standardized tests.

Children with certain challenges are often misunderstood, said Cathy Feehan, director of marketing. “We take kids with an average-to superior-IQ who have been called stupid in other learning environments. Some of our children are not linear thinkers,” she said. “For example, students want to write a story, but they want to start in the middle. We have [computer] software that will help them graphically organize their thoughts.”

The school mimics the college experience to prepare students, said Feehan. “We build in time to teach executive functioning skills. By the time they leave us, they have the organizational skills to succeed in college.”

Students change classes without the sounding of bells. The school halls are carpeted and the atmosphere is quiet and serene. This atmosphere combines with organizational and other help to give students a learning environment that works for them.

“It’s really hard for me to stay organized,” said Gabby, a student at Commonwealth. “I could never find anything. My notes would be all over the place. More than just organization, I could never get my thoughts together.”

The school provides a nontraditional way of preparing for college. “Our kids take college–prep classes like physics and chemistry,” said Feehan. “We help them write their essays. We separate English literature from writing. When they leave, they not only know about different genres, but also different types of writing and how to do research.”

Our kids have to understand character development, plot, and setting. The difference is that many school ask students to read five books in an English class. Do you need to read five books to understand character development in literature? Not as long as they understand the concept.”

The school also focuses on SAT and ACT preparation, something many students can find challenging. There are other options to get ready for these tests as well. “We had 80 colleges visit our little school last year and 100 percent of our kids have gone to college for three years in a row,” said Feehan.

Students master their learning style to beat challenges.
Baby Steps, Not Enough

Supervisors should take action, not defer to “outside expert,” on absurd and outrageous behavior of police department.

EDITORIAL

By Adam Ebbin
State Senator (D-30)

Finally, now that the Fairfax County Police Department has taken stone-wall ing into the arena of the absurd, the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors has at least said it is time for change. It is a step, but a step that continues the appearance of obfuscation if not outright obstruction.

John Geer of Springfield was shot dead inside the doorway of his own home in Springfield on Aug. 29, 2013. Following an argument with his longtime partner, police arrived at Geer’s home and spoke with him for more than half an hour while he stood in his doorway unarmed, with his hands raised and resting on the frame. As he began to lower his hands, by all accounts still at shoulder level, he was shot in the chest and died in his house without receiving medical attention.

It took more than 16 months, a $12 million civil suit by Geer’s family and a court order to get the first tiny bit of information on the shooting, which came earlier this month. Police named the police officer who fired the shot that killed John Geer.

The short written statement by Police Chief Edwin C. Roessler Jr. included some very troubling references that appear to blame the shooting on the fact that Geer was a known gun owner. At least 35 percent of Virginia residents are gun owners; are they all more vulnerable if for some reason police are called to their homes?

Now Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova has asked the County Executive to locate “independent expertise in the field of police department operations and, specifically, in the area of policies and procedures with respect to information disclosures in the case of police-involved shootings.”

We agree with Supervisor Pat Herrity, who says: “As elected officials it is our job to make policy, not hire an ‘outside expert’ to do our job for us. ... We currently have the resources of a professional staff at our disposal.” Herrity also notes that the proposal does not contain a provision for public input, and that many county residents have researched this topic and qualify as experts.

A few minutes of research shows, for example, that the National Association of Police Chiefs, for example, has extensive documentation about best practices in a variety of police shooting incidents. (Naming the officer involved after 48 hours is among the recommendations.)

The problem goes beyond Fairfax County, and beyond police shootings.

The first paragraph of Virginia Freedom of Information Act, passed by the General Assembly in 1968, states that all public records “shall be presumed open.” But the legislation includes an exemption that allows police to withhold “complaints, memoranda, correspondence, case files or reports, witness statements and evidence.”

Police officials in Fairfax, Arlington and Alexandria have adopted what they call a “blanket” approach to using their exemption.

That means they have decided to withhold any document they can without any analysis of whether they should, whether the case is open or closed, whether they are about a “police-involved shooting” or information requested by a family about a homicide victim, or even about routine police activity in a neighborhood. Not even defense attorneys or victims of crimes can gain access to actual police reports.

This is about lack of accountability and denying the public the access to information that must be made public.

Leaders of police departments here are engaged in serious and significant abuse of power. It’s time for elected officials to represent the public and impose change on those who would hide behind a culture of secrecy. — MARY KIMM

LETTERS

Opt Out of Spraying Program

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the Jan. 8 commentary by Paul Phelps in the Mount Vernon Gazette about Fairfax County’s Fall Cankerworm Insecticide Program.

Mr. Phelps alleges that Fall Cankerworm defoliation leads to tree mortality, without providing any evidence. The research he references appears to be on the non-native Gypsy Moth, a very different species from the native Fall Cankerworm. Mr. Phelps’ comment that “birds can safely eat the dead catapillars” is also highly misleading, because in spring (when the spraying actually takes place), many birds need to find enough live caterpillars to feed their nesting or fuel their northward migration. Our local wildlife is already under great pressure for many reasons; the removal of this important food source adds to the stresses that many species face in their struggle for survival.

We know well many of the things that are killing trees in Fairfax County — land clearing and new roads, non-native forest pests, invasive plant species, and unnaturally high deer populations, among others. But we have no evidence that Fall Cankerworms are actually killing our local trees. Fairfax County staff have not provided any evidence that Fall Cankerworm defoliation leads to tree mortality in the Commonwealth address that focused on building a new Virginia economy and creating a more stronger business climate by funding workforce programs, increasing veterans training programs and making Virginia a welcoming environment.

In the interest of good governance, I have introduced a constitutional amendment to allow a Governor to serve for two consecutive terms. This commonsense solution would empower Virginians to hold our Chief Executive accountable during any reelection effort as well as allow them to retain the Governor should they so choose. Virginia is the only state in the country that prohibits consecutive terms. As a point of comparison, the Commonwealth’s government employs more people than Microsoft. Yet we would never expect a Fortune 500 company to fire their CEO every 4 years without regard to his or her performance. This is also an important way that we can ensure stability and continuity for efficiencies in government.

It’s time for elected officials to represent the public and impose change on those who would hide behind a culture of secrecy.

Options to avoid spraying include: Opting out of the spraying program, buying the houses and businesses.

Furthering Good Governance

On Wednesday, Jan. 14, the Virginia General Assembly’s 2015-16 legislative session began and Gov. A Tribute to Toddy

By Scott A. Surovell
State Delegate (D-44)

Norfolk, when the General Assembly is in session, I write about the bills we are considering and my legislative projects, but the big news in Northern Virginia and in Richmond last week was the announced retirement of one of our lions—State Sen. Linda T. Puller, whom we all fondly know as Toddy.

Back in 1991, at the beginning of my junior year at James Madison University, my mother called me to make sure I had mailed in my absentee ballot application and that I had voted for Toddy Puller who was running for state delegate. My first thought was, “Isn’t that Maggie’s mom?” Toddy’s daughter, Maggie, was in my class at West Potomac High School and it turned out that, in fact, Toddy was Maggie’s mother. What an amazing political career she’s had since then.

Toddy has now represented me as a delegate or senator for more than half of my life—23 years. She was the first modern Democrat to win the 44th delegate district and I have had a “front seat” to her dedicated public service all of my adult life. Her public career has been dedicated to improving the quality of life for the U.S. 1 Corridor in Fairfax and Prince William counties. Because of her legislation, the first U.S. 1 Centerline Study was begun in 1998 and the $2 million U.S. 1 Multimodal Study would not have been funded or concluded in 2014 without the seniority and wisdom she brought to the process. Tens of millions of dollars are currently being directed to enhancing transportation in Fairfax and Prince William counties due to her three generations of leadership.

Growing up as a “military brat,” as the incredibly dedicated wife of a disabled Vietnam veteran and as the daughter-in-law of the most-decorated Marine in the history of the U.S. Marine Corps, Lt. Gen. “Chesty” Puller, Toddy has been by far the most focused member of the Virginia legislature to move our state government to address the concerns of our nation’s veterans and their families. Whether it is government services, tax exemptions or helping Virginians address the long-term consequences that combat injuries have on military families, Senator Puller has lived her public life on the frontlines fighting for resources for our community and the larger community.

Like her predecessor in the 36th Senate district, Joe Gartlan, Toddy stood up for the voiceless as the chairwoman of the Senate Health and Rehabilitation Committee, led the way to find innovation and efficiency in our healthcare system and helped lay the groundwork for decades of savings.

Senator Puller’s retirement is a significant loss for the Mount Vernon and Lee areas of Fairfax County, the Occoquan, Woodbridge and Montclair areas of Prince William County and Northern Stafford County. Her three decades of seniority and policy experience are an irreplaceable asset for the 200,000 Fairfax, Stafford and Prince William County people that she has worked for so hard.

I look forward to continuing to work with Senator Puller as she continues to focus on developing the Lewis B. Puller, Jr. Veterans Benefits Clinic at the William and Mary Law School and know she will enjoy time with Lewis, Jr., Maggie and her grandchildren. Senator Puller has changed the lives of and been an inspiration to thousands of Virginians. It has been an honor to serve with her and she will be difficult to replace.

Church Members Lobby for Stronger Gun Laws

To the Editor:

In November 2013, Supervisor Hyland decided to reappoint an incumbent to their seat on the county’s Wetlands Board, a board that takes decisions concerning whether to permit development, by taxpayers, of their environmentally sensitive lands adjacent county streams, creeks and rivers. A number of people wrote Supervisor Hyland to express their opposition to this reappointment, including some writing him months earlier. Over the ensuing months, the documentary evidence opposing reappointment became a taller and taller pile, and month after month, Supervisor Hyland deferred the Board of Supervisors decision on this important issue, while refraining from addressing the serious concerns of opponents of reappointment.

In December, after 13 deferrals of the decision, perhaps an all-time record, Brett Kenney, the supervisor’s chief aide, stated that the supervisor intends to finally decide, for the board’s Jan. 27, 2015 meeting, whether or not he will reappoint the incumbent. Supervisor Hyland indicated that he is seriously considering the incumbent’s activism in the local Democratic Party as an important criterion in the decision-making process. It has been suggested to him that the political views of the incumbent, regardless of those views, should have no bearing on a decision concerning appointment to a board taking decisions directly affecting the private property rights of taxpayers. A Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of the supervisor’s office revealed not a single letter in support of reappointment of the incumbent. Not one.

On several occasions over the past year, I have been asked by Supervisor Hyland’s office to attend a meeting with only Supervisor Hyland and the incumbent in attendance to discuss the issues involved. I have repeatedly declined this invitation, explaining that (1) excluding other opponents from the meeting is inappropriate, and (2) it is unseemly to require me to “litigate” the issues in Supervisor Hyland’s office, to debate the incumbent where the facts are so clear and documented. I consulted with another supervisor, a Democrat, and they concurred with me that the suggestion of such a meeting is unseemly.

Refraining from reappointing the incumbent would not leave the position vacant. The incumbent could be replaced by a current alternate to the board. The alternate is a skilled environmentalist by education and by work experience as a senior official of the EPA. She would instantly become the most qualified person on that board.

The self-proclaimed “Leader Who Listens” isn’t listening, and inexplicably isn’t communicating. Opponents of reappointment have consistently sought to convince Supervisor Hyland to withdraw the incumbent’s name from consideration in private communications to his office, only resorting to public pronouncements and communications to the Board of Supervisors as a whole, as a last resort when Supervisor Hyland did not respond to communications. He has never responded in writing to any opponent to address their concerns. Not once.

Given the lengthy delay in decision making, the overwhelming evidence opposing reappointment and Supervisor Hyland’s refusal to communicate with opponents, the opponents of reappointment have created a website where all the evidence can be reviewed at one location. The website is at www.NoGerry.com. I suggest interested community members visit the website and educate themselves on the issues. Supervisor Hyland has the right to reappoint the incumbent. His constituents should question his judgment if he does so. On Jan. 15, 2015, I wrote Supervisor Hyland’s office to inform him of the website and asked him to reveal his decision concerning this appointment. As of Jan. 20, I have received no reply.

County Treats Mount Vernon Differently

To the Editor:

It is odd that Mr. H. Jay Spiegel (“Squandered Opportunity,” Mount Vernon Gazette, Jan. 15) refers to a community trying to seek proffers from a developer as a shake down given that many Mount Vernon communities have benefited by obtaining community infrastructure needs through proffers. We sought traffic-taming controls, adequate screening and some sidewalk extensions into the community as we considered and discussed proffers. Why shouldn’t Spring Bank negotiate for such proffers like everyone else?

Asking the developer to comply with the language of the comprehensive plan calling for a mixed use development with a ratio of 60 percent residential and 40 percent retail/office combined was not treating the developer as a candy store. That sticking point was the focus of the Southeast Fairfax Development Corporation (SFDC) then under the leadership of President Rick Neel and Executive Director Becky Witsman and the Fairfax County planning staff. When Spring Bank voted not to oppose the development, the ratio agreed to was 67 percent residential and 33 percent retail/office. SFDC was still advising Spring Bank to hold out for the comprehensive plan ratios of 60/40. Spring Bank compromised with the developer and voted not to oppose. Mr. Spiegel lists what he says were significant concessions made by the developer after two years of negotiations. The first three are not concessions. State law provides that revisions to the Comprehensive Plan and rezoning applications need not be made/granted when the public facilities are inadequate. Also, when such is the case, local government has the authority to insist the developer address such inadequacies. Fairfax County required the combination of road, utility and storm water upgrades if they were to get their rezoning application approved.

Items four and five are one in the same and not concessions. The comprehensive plan called for the consolidation of the Fairchild property into the project for the purpose of transferring the development rights from that land parcel to the land fronting Richmond Highway in order to increase the floor to area ratio (FAR) permitting greater density on the project site. The full cast of The Little Theatre of Alexandria’s production of “The Game’s Afoot.” Front row (L to R): Aggie Wheeler (Maureen R. A hybrid of an Agatha Christie murder mystery and a Ken Ludwig modern farce.

By Steve Hibbard
The Gazette

The Little Theatre of Alexandria is presenting the witty and fast-paced “The Game’s Afoot or Holmes for the Holidays,” Jan. 17-27 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 7 at 2 p.m.

Directed by Frank Pasqualino and produced by Rachel Alberts and Bobbie Herbst, this whodunit play takes you back to 1936 and the Connecticut mansion of William Gillette, the actor known for his portrayal of Sherlock Holmes. Add in a blizzard and a house full of guests and murder can’t be far behind.

Director Pasqualino said the play is a cross between Agatha Christie, the queen of the mystery murder, and Ken Ludwig, the crown prince of modern farce. “Put them together and you have “The Game’s Afoot,”’’ he said.

“It’s always a good sign, when I’m presented with a comedy to direct, that I laugh out loud on the first reading,’’ he said. “‘The Game’s Afoot’ offered me that pleasure. It’s a fun piece of whodunit nonsense, peopled by a collection of red herrings, and … well, I’m not going to ruin it for you.”

John Henderson plays the role of William Gillette, who was a famous actor and playwright in the late 19th and early 20th century. The playwright Ken Ludwig created a fictional story using as background some facts about Gillette — that he wrote a Sherlock Holmes play with the blessing of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and starred in it for several decades, and that he became wealthy and designed a castle for himself in Connecticut reflecting many of his eccentricities.

He said Ludwig has altered a few of the details from Gillette’s life for his suspenseful, comic and farcical play. He added the short Sherlock Holmes play-within-a-play that we see in Ludwige’s play is a broad take-off from Gillette’s play, rather than an actual scene from it.

He said the characters are forced to respond quickly to a series of rapid unexpected developments in the plot, sometimes continuing to perform themantically, and sometimes behaving very differently from their theatrical personae.

“So one of the major challenges for all of us in the cast is to keep our very theatrical characters through all of these onstage and offstage transitions,” he said. “Also, given the fast pace of the story, and the sometimes strenuous physical actions that the characters must perform during the play, this piece challenges all of us in the cast to maintain a very high level of energy and focus throughout the show.”

Patricia Spencer Smith plays Martha Gillette, William’s mother who is sometimes impatient with her son’s behavior and fiercely protective of him. “She delights in the theatrical, and might not always be what she seems to be,” she said.

Chuck Leonard plays Felix Geisel, the character he was most drawn to when he saw “The Game’s Afoot” at The Kennedy Center a few years ago. “Felix offers a great range to an actor — at different times times, cere, shallow, jealous, loving, witty, foolish, and highly stressed,” he said. “Throughout, Felix reacts largely, perhaps letting his ‘Ham actor qualities overshadow wisdom.”

Maureen R. Goldman plays Aggie Wheeler, a woman who is excited about life and has an exuberance that is infectious, but at the same time she really wants to be loved. “Finding the qualities that make her real and flawed are the most fun to play because they make her relatable to the audience and make her story that much more compelling,” she said.

The Little Theatre of Alexandria presents “The Game’s Afoot” through Feb. 7. Tickets $19-$22. Wednesdays-Saturdays, 8 p.m.; Sundays, 3 p.m. The theater is located at 600 Wolfe St. Call 703-683-0496 or visit www.thelittletheatre.com.

Senior Guard Hill, Rebounding Propel Titans in Second Half

TC beats West Potomac to improve to 5-1 in Conference 7.

By Jon Roetman
The Gazette

During the first half of Tuesday’s game against West Potomac, members of the T.C. Williams cheerleading team periodically implored the Titans to crash the boards, shouting “rebound!” from her position near the baseline.

At halftime, T.C. Williams head coach Bryan Hill talked to his team about “effort and doing the right things,” including the Titans’ need to hit the glass.

Whether members of the T.C. Williams boys’ basketball team listened to their coach or a fellow student on the cheer squad, the Titans played the second half as if they heard the message loud and clear.

The Titans out-rebounded the Wolverines in the second half and turned a three-point halftime lead into a 64-52 victory at T.C. Williams High School. The Titans held a 20-17 second-half rebounding advantage, including nine offensive boards.

“The first half, [Coach Hill] told us our guards we have to help the bigs rebound more,” T.C. Williams senior guard Andrew Hill said. “Once that happened, once we started to rebound, that’s when we started getting more breaks and more opportunities at the basket.”

The victory improved T.C. Williams’ record to 8-4, including 5-1 in Conference 7 standings. The Titans won the first conference loss of the season.

“It was just a matter of us playing with a certain level of confidence without [Hill]. He knows our success doesn’t hinge on his effort, and that takes basketball IQ and intelligence to do it. We’re a work in progress and we’re attempting to improve in every game and myself and my coaching staff are trying to make every aspect of the game a teaching moment to raise their basketball IQs in order to play basketball efficiently.”

The Titans led 39-33 late in the third quarter when Andrew Hill started to take over. After being held to just four points through 21 minutes, No. 1 knocked down a 3-pointer with 2:42 left in the period, and then converted a pair of three-point plays to extend the Titans’ lead to 48-33.

“I thought the looks [Cheng] got in the first half weren’t open, I thought he just made them,” West Potomac head coach David Houston III said. “They did a good job playing him. Most teams are sticking on him.”

West Potomac didn’t make things easy, however. The Wolverines out-rebounded the Titans 17-12 in the first half and limited Andrew Hill, one of T.C. Williams’ top scoring threats, to four points during the first 21 minutes of the contest. Sophomore guard Khalil Williams Diggins’ transition bucket gave the Wolverines a 17-16 lead with 6:20 left in the second quarter and West Potomac entered halftime trailing 30-27.

The second half was a different story as T.C. Williams led by as many as 15 points, aided by a nine-point outburst by Hill near the end of the third quarter.

“It was just a matter of us playing with a bit more energy and intelligence,” Coach Hill said of the Titans’ second-half performance. “We have a stretch ahead of us, with this being the initial game, that is very important to us. We’re trying to win as efficiently as possible, with the least amount of effort, and that takes basketball IQ and intelligence to do it. We’re a work in progress and we’re attempting to improve in every game and myself and my coaching staff are trying to make every aspect of the game a teaching moment to raise their basketball IQs in order to play basketball efficiently.”

T.C. Williams will travel to face Woodson on Friday, Jan. 23. The Cavaliers are the two-time defending “big school” region champion and each team is 5-1 in the Conference 7 standings. The Titans lost the first meeting, 63-53, on Jan. 9 in Alexandria.

The following night, the Titans will travel to face Hayfield at 6:30 p.m. On Jan. 27, T.C. Williams will host West Springfield, which on Dec. 12 handed the Titans their only conference loss of the season.

“[Coach Hill] told our guards we have to help the bigs rebound more. Once that happened, once we started to rebound, that’s when we started getting more breaks and more opportunities at the basket.”

— T.C. Williams senior Andrew Hill

West Potomac head coach David Houston III and the Wolverines fell short against T.C. Williams on Tuesday.
