First Celebration of Founder

By Ken Moore
The Connection

Bob Simon’s wife Cheryl Terio-Simon wrote a letter that was read aloud at the candlelight vigil held Friday, Sept. 26 at Lake Anne Plaza in honor of Reston’s founder who died earlier in week.

“Community is what it is all about,” wrote Cheryl. “Thank you for your many expressions of love and support for Bob.”

More than 500 people gathered to express love of Reston’s founder Robert E. Simon and to offer thanks for the impact he’s had on Reston and all of its people.

“He was always there to talk to you, he was so curious until the end,” said Karen Cleveland. “We’re here tonight to celebrate Bob, to thank him, because he’s given us the biggest thing he ever could, Reston.”

THE PLAZA was filled Friday, in front of the stage, by Simon’s statue, by the water and the restaurants.

“Bob loved Lake Anne Plaza,” wrote his wife. “I am a kid of Reston. My dad [Patrick Kane] was a city planner and he scoped it out; he knew he wanted to raise a family here,” said Leslie Kane. “I always knew how important he was, but until this week I never realized how many lives were changed by him.”

Kerrie Wilson, of Cornerstones, called Friday night’s vigil the first celebration of Bob Simon’s life.

“Thank you, Bob, for Reston,” she said. “Tim Ward, pastor of Restoration Church, said Simon would have enjoyed this time together. ‘Bob enjoyed people getting together on the plaza,’ he said. ‘So many people have been deeply, deeply impacted by his life.’

Casey Veatch called himself and Leslie Kane the original Kids of Reston.

Kane, who still lives in Reston, says she always saw Simon walking around Lake Anne Plaza. “It was fun to watch him pat himself on the head,” of the statue built in honor of Simon and his vision of the plazas. “Thank you, Bob Simon, for an amazing childhood,” she said.

“That guy never stopped and we loved him for sure,” said Veatch. “Two weeks ago, I sat up with him in his room and I can assure you that his mind was as sharp as it ever was.”

Veatch told the well known story of Simon confronting a mob boss who then called Simon, “one tough son of a ….”

Veatch and Kane gave voice to the social experiment of a planned community that welcomed all people of all backgrounds and all economic situations.

“I didn’t know racism or discrimination existed until I went to college,” said Kane. “None of us understood what racism was,” said Veatch.

Amanda Indri, also of Cornerstones, warmed the crowd.

“Don’t tell anyone, but I grew up in Herndon,” she said. “But that’s what Reston does to you. It invites you in.”

The Reston Museum is going to give additional chances for Restonians and others to share stories of Reston’s founder.

“I can not tell you what a gift this is that the community can come together,” said pastor Tim Ward.

Mosaic Harmony and Reston Chorale teamed together to sing, “This Little Light of Mine, We’re Going to Let it Shine.”

THE CROWD surrounded Lake Anne Plaza, candles shining along the water by Simon’s condo building. Hundreds filled the plaza with light and sounds of appreciation for Bob.

“We will light the candles to remind of Bob’s bright light, to remind us of the impact he had had on us,” said Ward.

Ward could be heard singing among the crowd, “This little light of mine, we’re going to let it shine.”

And with that in mind, Kerrie Wilson said there is still more work to do.

“Bob lay the perfect foundation,” she said, “but not everything was perfectly implemented the way he wanted.”

“He leaves it in our hands to make it happen,” she said.

About 500 people filled Lake Anne Plaza last Friday night for a candlelight vigil to remember and celebrate Simon’s gift to and of Reston.

Saharnaz Farivar, an architect and planner, takes a long look at the statue of Bob Simon. “He was definitely my mentor. He was completely available 110 percent all the time.”

Hundreds turn out to express gratitude for Robert E. Simon.
Dedicated to Bob Simon

Robert E. Simon was a founding member of The Reston Chorale in 1967. "Bob’s commitment to establishing Reston as an integrated community in the early 1960s — a time when segregation and racial deed restrictions were prevalent — was the inspiration behind the concert when we began planning it last season," said Ruth Overton, president of The Reston Chorale. "We wanted to honor Bob's vision and integrity, and Reston's pivotal role as Virginia's first integrated community."

More than 165 singers and musicians from The Reston Chorale, Mosaic Harmony and D.C.'s historic Shiloh Baptist Church will sing in a concert dedicated to Simon on Oct. 10. The concert is called, "Wade in the Water: Songs of Freedom, Faith and Friendship."

As plans for the concert progressed, tragic events in the news—from Ferguson, Baltimore and Charleston—also influenced its shape. "That's when it expanded to include songs of friendship," said Rev. David North, director of Mosaic Harmony, "because we wanted this concert to be an expression of unity in the midst of diversity, with each ensemble bringing something special to the mix."

Mosaic Harmony is a multi-faith, multicultural community choir based in Fairfax County that sings inspirational music based on the gospel tradition. David Lang leads The Reston Chorale, an auditioned, mixed-voice chorus known to perform a wide range of musical genres. Dr. Thomas Dixon Tyler leads The Senior Choir of historic Shiloh Baptist Church of Washington, D.C.

"When we began planning this concert a year ago, we were inspired by Bob Simon's commitment to creating Reston as an integrated community, so we reached out to several other groups to produce a concert of inspirational African American music," said Susan Meeks-Versteeg, managing director of The Chorale.

Rev. LaVerne M. Gill, host of Reston's African American Legacy series, will serve as the narrator for the concert. "The first half will open with the combined choirs — 165 voices strong — singing a piece based on the spiritual ‘Walk Together Children,’ followed by each choir performing several selections on their own," said David Lang, artistic director of The Reston Chorale. "In the second half, we'll mix it up—literally—with the choirs uniting and merging into one massive chorus. Then we'll get the audience involved, with Rev. North leading us all in a few old—and perhaps even new—songs."

Said Lang: "There's a movement in The Essential Life—a work by Donald McCullough that the Chorale commissioned and sang for Reston's 50th anniversary and Bob Simon's 100th birthday—based on Amy Lowell's poem Market Day. It describes the doors of a church opening wide and the sound of this magnificent music spilling out and filling the square with 'vibrant harmony.' "Bob would have loved this concert. He won't be in his usual place in the front row, but he'll be in our hearts," said Ruth Overton, president of the Reston Chorale.

Celebrating the life of a visionary leader, business pioneer, and friend.

Changing Perspective on Death Penalty

Evolving standards will eclipse the death penalty entirely at some point in the future.

It’s sad to see senseless death as a response to senseless death. Alfred R. Prieto is not a sympathetic figure, a serial killer who was on death row in California when DNA connected him to murders and rapes in Reston and Arlington that took place in 1988. He is scheduled for execution this week, at 9 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 1.

Evolving standards of decency have led to the understanding that it’s wrong and unconscionable to subject people whose crimes were institutional to subject people whose crimes were committed when they were juveniles or people with intellectual disabilities to the death penalty. The Arc of Northern Virginia, an advocacy group for people with intellectual disabilities, asked Gov. Terry McAuliffe to send Prieto back to California so that his intellectual disabilities, raised in the sentencing phase of his trial, could be analysed. McAuliffe has declined to intervene in Prieto’s case. It was a Virginia case, Atkins v. Virginia, that led the U.S. Supreme Court to rule that execution of people with mental retardation is unconstitutional.

Prieto was sent to Virginia to face trial even though he was already on death row in California because of the belief, clearly correct, that he would be more likely to be executed in Virginia.

Evolving standards of decency will end the death penalty in the United States. The number of death sentences has dropped dramatically since 2000, and executions have declined as well, from a high of 98 in 1999 to just 35 in 2014, the lowest in 20 years, according to Amnesty International.

Prieto committed heinous crimes, releasing him from prison should never be an option.

Warren Fulton and Rachel Raver were last seen around midnight in Washington, D.C. on Dec. 2, 1988. The two George Washington University students, both 22, were found dead Dec. 6, 1988 in a field off Hunter Mill Road in Reston. Both were shot in the head. Raver had been raped. Investigators believed they had been abducted and forced to drive to the remote location. DNA evidence linked Prieto to Raver’s death and to that of Veronica Jefferson, a 24-year-old CIA finance officer who was raped and shot to death in Arlington County in May 1988, although he was never tried in that case. A Fairfax County jury sentenced Prieto to death in 2006.

The murders and rapes were unsolved for 17 years until 2005 when California’s DNA database joined a national database.

One of the early rites of passage for me and those of my generation was to get a driver’s license. I was pleased to run errands for the family, and my parents were generous in allowing me to use the family car for school and social events. Now I understand that about a fourth of millennials are not even bothering to get a driver’s license. And when you consider how many communities are developing by transit oriented development (TOD) principles, there is less of a need to own or lease an automobile. These shifts in living patterns have significant public policy implications.

Already with the opening of the Silver Line to Reston East I have another alternative for my travels. Within a year residents in the new apartments under construction by Comstock at Reston East Station will be able to take the elevator down to the plaza to the bus to Dulles on the Silver Line to points east including Maryland. For weekend travel, a Zipcar or other hourly rentals are available, and a bicycle provides good healthy exercise. A new hourly car rental system allows you to leave the car at your destination without the need to return it to where you picked it up. Some suggest that the driver-less vehicle is not that far in the distant future, and with the rapid advances I have seen in recent times I believe them. The traditional taxi system got a jolt with the introduction of Uber and other companies that use drivers and their own automobiles to transport passengers. The Virginia General Assembly passed legislation this year to establish a legal framework under which the companies can provide service to consumers in a safe and legal way. I would guess that there is likely to be a melding of these two businesses in the future to provide a smooth transition.

Gone But Not Forgotten

To the Editor:

This week, two iconic people, who affected my entire life, passed away — Robert E. Simon, and Dr. Glynn Ford. To know why they impacted my life, I must tell my story.

The death of Martin Luther King Jr., sparked riots throughout the United States. A man sat in Baltimore, watching violence come up to his doorstep, and vowed not to allow his family to live amongst this rage. In 1968, my father came to my doorstep, and vowed not to more, watching violence come up to his doorstep, and vowed not to allow his family to live amongst this rage. In 1968, my father came to my doorstep, and vowed not to more, watching violence come up to his doorstep, and vowed not to allow his family to live amongst this rage.

A different time period, where does a black man move his young family to keep them safe, but not isolated and threatened in a white only community? At the burgeoning Tysons Corner, he was told, “We don’t rent to you people.”

Going west, the $150 rent at Cameron Crescent seemed exorbitant, but he stayed in this historic planned community developed by Robert E. Simon.

He also joined Washington Plaza Baptist Church, where Dr. Ford was the pastor, both landmarks at Lake Anne. Little did he know how forward thinking and life changing this decision was.

I lived in Reston until I graduated from South Lakes High School. Since 1985 I have lived in Hampton, Maryland, New Jersey, and now, Los Angeles. I have always had trouble finding places to live because I grew up in a place called Reston, I assumed, every town aspired to be a close diverse community, with trees, no power lines, great schools, and neighbors with beautiful lawns and no stripes painted on their homes.

Our closest friends were from WPBC, and I had a diverse group of friends throughout my high school education. We still communicate on Facebook, waxing poetically about what an impact Reston had on us. We post pictures of groups of kids of all ethnic backgrounds, bunched close together preparing for Homecoming. Meanwhile, today all over the country, we hear about white only proms, and hate speech. I was the first black, female Drum Major at SLHS, but I never felt my race would preclude me from that achievement. I was never called the “n” word, although my nephews have been called that today in neighboring counties. I was shocked that not one white or Asian person lives on my street in Los Angeles, and am disappointed with the overt segregation in Los Angeles. I am glad Reston in no way prepared me for that. Reston has inspired me to seek.

In the short run I understand the interests of persons dependent upon automobile travel that our roadway surfaces be repaired and that traffic congestion be reduced. We suffer from more than a decade of refusal on the part of the legislature to provide adequate funding for highway construction and repair. During that time I co-sponsored and voted for many bills only to see them defeated. Technological advances are helping to reduce congestion with better traffic light systems and with regulated traffic systems as has just been introduced on I-66. These improvements must take into account the bigger picture of transportation. Road improvements must include bicycle travel lanes. Mass transit will need subsidy just as our roads are subsidized. Public and private incentives need to be offered for carpooling, and the use of transit. TOD must be given priority. Our public policy on transportation must recognize that there are many different ways to go.

out the type of relationships that surrounded me in my youth. And I always find a swimming pool! So this writing is a celebration of the early influences in my life, brought to me by Mr. Simon and Dr. Ford. Reston was not a panacea, there were glitches here and there. But the overarching expectation was to live and create something wonderful together. Even today, when I drive down the dark Reston streets I know like the back of my hand, I marvel at its uniqueness. I smile remembering my brother and I singing out “R-E-S-T-O-N, N-O-T-S-E-R!” as we passed the big Reston sign on Route 7.

So I wish to say thank you to these two people who both left us this week. You are gone, but not forgotten. And for that reason, Reston will always be my home.

What is design for independent living or aging-in-place exactly? If you are like the majority of Americans you want to continue living at home in a familiar environment throughout your maturing years. Aging-in-place means living in your home safely, independently and comfortably, regardless of age or ability level. It addresses the need to remodel existing homes and design new homes, so that people can age in place and not have to move to assisted-living facilities. In addition to the economics that generally favor remodeling vs. moving into an assisted-living facility, there is also the psychological impact of being protected from your community, familiar rituals, independence and privacy.

Since the vast majority of homes we live in are not well designed for this, a movement in residential construction has sprung up to meet this new consumer demand. Too easy to think this applies to you? Consider how many folks struggle with bouts of arthritis at an early age. If you fall and break a leg, how easy would it be to get up and down stairs in your house? Perhaps you have an aging parent or relative who is facing these challenges who may need to move in with you.

The good news is that aging-in-place home renovations have become the norm and the possibilities are virtually endless. Not only are they functional, but they can be beautiful as well.

Russ Dickman, founder of Dickman Design Build, is a Master Certified Remodeler and Certified Aging in Place Specialist. The award-winning Dickman Design Build team has completed thousands of general remodeling and accessible design projects in the Metro DC area and is passionate about the work they do. Their work has been featured in a variety of publications. Visit DickmanDesignBuild.com or call 301.464.6413 to learn more.

Patrons line up at the concession stands during the Reston Multicultural Festival last Saturday.

The Reston Multicultural Festival had a large crowd of visitors of all nationalities last Saturday, Sept. 26, at Lake Anne Plaza in Reston. The signature Reston event honors the diversity of Reston and brings to life the vision that founder Robert E. Simon had for the community. The day featured a Naturalization Ceremony where citizens took the Oath of Allegiance and international performers entertained the crowd with singing, dancing and drumming from three stages. In addition, there was a Multicultural Book Fair and a “We Make Reston” exhibit, an INSIDE OUT Project created by the people of Reston to showcase their town. The event was presented by the Reston Community Center, hosted by Lake Anne Plaza, and co-sponsored by Reston Association, Lake Anne of Reston Condominium Association, and the Lake Anne Merchants Association with partners from a variety of Reston-based organizations and businesses.

Effervescent Witty Cabaret

The Marcy & Zina Show arriving at Reston’s CenterStage.

By David Siegel
The Connection

Get ready for a winning musical evening with songs ranging from humorous tales of an unforeseen crush at a local Starbucks, to whom not to date, along with numbers about profound pangs of caring and affecting love ballads. It is a performance all connected with lively patter from cabaret performers, Marcy Heisler and Zina Goldrich.

With a musical style that mixes timeless Broadway and unforgettable pop; the duo’s songs have been sung by stylists as diverse as Kristin Chenowith, Audry McDonald and Michael Feinstein. In an evening aptly called “The Marcy & Zina Show” they will cover lots of ground about their own real-life reflections toward life and love.

Heisler (lyrics) and Goldrich (music) have received a Drama Desk nomination for Outstanding Music and Lyrics and penned the score for the “Great American Musical” a recent musical love-letter to Broadway. They are recipients of the “Fred Ebb Award,” recognizing excellence in musical theatre songwriting.

They are no strangers to the D.C. area, having received a Helen Hayes Award nomination for their CenterStage excellence for “Snow White, Rose Red and Fred” when performed at the Kennedy Center. According to Goldrich, their “writing process is like a tennis game.

As the words person, Marcy serves first, generally, and we go back and forth exchanging ideas as we go. We like to write everyday things. Nothing is funnier than real life.” The duo writes about things “that everybody recognizes in their own lives that make a song unique and yet completely familiar,” added Goldrich.

Asked about their CenterStage show, “We like to treat the evening like we are singing in our living room with a bunch of friends. We’ll sing songs we’ve written, tell some stories, and give a sneak peek into new productions we’re working on,” said Heisler.

To whet audience appetite, Marcy and Zina can be expected to include “Taylor the Latte Boy” (a Starbucks cute meet), “Alto’s Lament” (why do sopranos get the good songs?) numbers from “Ever After” their musical version of the Drew Barrymore “Cinderella” film and many more.

Marcy and Zina are “great fans of the Reston area and look forward to sharing” their music with the CenterStage audience.

And into the breach (not to be confused with breach), I went earlier today. It wasn’t exactly the Charge of the Light Brigade when breach might have been the more appropriate characterization, it was simply my annual MRI, when the doctors check to see if the cancer in my lungs has spread to my brain, which in 30 percent of the patients—the highest percentage of spread in fact—it does. So today, I had my head examined: a checkup from the neck up. Though I’m mostly asymptomatic—as usual, other than a few random headaches reported by yours truly, nothing chronic or debilitating, no pain or suffering, no dizziness or disorientation—it made for a prudent course of diagnostic action, nonetheless. I’m not really worried about the results, more like wondering, if that distinction even makes sense. Still, I’d just as soon not complicate my life any further right now. It’s all fairly manageable. Involving my brain, “what there is of it,” (a Three Stooges quote) however, would likely force us to confront new demons: demons which at present are mostly confined in their box (compartmentalized in my head, actually).

Now whether our feelings are the result of a possible occurrence in the brain simply being new and different or whether its appearance there would indeed be worse, we certainly don’t know, but for some reason, it seems worse than a finding in the lung. Not that stage IV lung cancer is to be minimized in the least, hardly, it’s a “terminal” disease; and not that I understand any more about brain cancer and the blood-brain barrier or treatment complications it can cause or can reference any statistical outcomes that support or confirm our feelings more than I can about the non-small cell lung cancer with which I am more familiar, our perception is, a confirmation of tumor activity in the brain would likely upset the very delicate balance of our figurative apple cart. An apple cart I will readily admit we’ve gotten used to balancing.

But I’m getting ahead (no pun intended) of myself. My oncologist was not anticipating much new information from this MRI, nor was he reacting to my symptoms as much as he was mindful of the interval of time since my last MRI: one year or so. I didn’t take some comfort in his nonchalance. Although, reading a doctor’s expressions or body language or attempting to interpret and understand their reasons and explanations for making certain medical suggestions is akin to taking a Rorschach test: you might see or hear what you’re predisposed to—or not. There may be some fact and/or some fiction to consider, a “curiosity” is the last thing a “terminal” patient wants to hear or perceive from his oncologist. I want the truth—As I’ve always told him, and anything to do with the brain truthfully makes me feel unlocked, unloaded and in trouble. Maybe “breach” is the more appropriate word. I suppose I’ll know soon enough. I’ll just have to be patient. Something I’ve been very good at being for six years and seven months, exactly.
