Raising awareness, advocating for more services in schools

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

When Fairfax resident Calvin Rizek was in first grade, he remembers not being able to read along with the class, but “just flipping pages, like everyone else.” Rizek’s older brother Jack had already been diagnosed with dyslexia, a common learning disability affecting a person’s ability to read and spell effectively. Their parents sought help outside the school system for Jack, turning to a private tutor. At one point when Calvin was hanging around during his brother’s lesson, the tutor observed that Calvin might be dyslexic as well. After he was tested and identified as having dyslexia, Calvin used remediation and tutoring, both in his Title I elementary school and with the tutor, to help him better understand how to link sounds and words. Now a high school senior, Calvin hopes to attend Virginia Tech and one day become a pediatrician so he can help other young students with dyslexia and attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder.

As Jack and Calvin’s mother Joan fought for services in their schools, she became involved with Decoding Dyslexia Virginia, the local branch of a national advocacy organization with the aim of raising awareness of the disorder and providing people with more information about the resources available. That group recently hosted its first Decoding Dyslexia 5K Run for Dyslexia at Burke Lake Park on Oct. 11.

“Parents are stumbling through it,” Joan said. “We want to bring other parents to resources faster than we found them.”

Craig Wong of Herndon grew suspicious

when his daughter in third grade was having some problems with spelling. Some Internet research led him to believe she might have dyslexia. He had her tested with a professional psychologist through an online resource, who confirmed she had the disorder.

“I talked to my daughter’s school,” Wong said, “and I could tell they weren’t really familiar. They didn’t seem to be very proactive about what tasks, what action steps to take.”

Wong heard about Decoding Dyslexia Virginia and attended a meeting.

“All these parents had the same issues I did,” he said, “people in the school system who didn’t speak the vocabulary, not in special education, principals of schools, it was very odd.”

“I asked something,” Wong continued, “what should I expect from my school system? Other parents started nodding, murmuring behind me, and said that was a great question. There were lot of parents in the same situation.”

FRUSTRATED with what he saw as a lack of remediation opportunities through Fairfax County at his daughter’s school, Wong enlisted private tutoring, then worked one-on-one with his daughter and helped her improve her language skills by designing a computer game for her that functions much like using flash cards.

Wong’s daughter is now in seventh grade and on or above grade level for all topics, but not all parents have the time or resources to pay for such extracurricular activity.

Shannon Duncan of Falls Church had a similar experience with her youngest child, whose headaches in second grade became “struggling like crazy” in third grade with spelling and reading. Duncan and her friend and neighbor Lisa D’Ambrosio-Irons co-organized the Decoding Dyslexia 5K, which drew over 150 participants from around Fairfax County and Alexandria.

Duncan said they worked with her daughter’s school and couldn’t get any helpful services so they had her privately screened. In four months, she had gained half a reading level. Improving identification and remediation capacities within the school system is one of the goals of Decoding Dyslexia.

“That’s our hope,” she said. “We’ve been talking to Fairfax County administration: My kid is fine, she’s going to be OK, but based on the fact that I was educated, spoke the language of the system, had the time and wasn’t at work 24-seven.”

Fairfax County School Board chairman Pat Hynes acknowledges putting more focus on dyslexia in the schools is “long overdue.”

In accordance with a proclamation from Gov. Terry McAuliffe (D), the board is recognizing October as “Dyslexia Awareness Month.”

Hynes, who was previously a teacher in Fairfax County, said she found there to be a “great buffet” of curriculum development materials available, but maybe not enough direction.

“What can happen,” she said, “is we don’t always provide professional development that’s focused in the way that it needs to be. You’ll see in our Strategic Plan we’re getting tighter with our early literacy.”

SUPERINTENDENT Dr. Karen Garza has also required all elementary school administrators and instructional staff be trained to recognize dyslexia symptoms and warning signs.

“Early on, she recognized FCPS was not where it needed to be in terms of services for students with dyslexia,” said Braddock District school board representative Megan McLaughlin.

Springfield District representative Elizabeth Schultz said the disorder was the first topic she brought up when meeting with Garza after she arrived from Texas.

“A small hurdle can turn into an enormous obstacle,” Schultz said. “I’ve struggled, as a Workshop on Dyslexia

There will be a workshop hosted by the Office of Special Education Instruction for parents of middle and high school students with dyslexia on Oct. 20 from 7-9 p.m. at the Dunn Loring Center, 2334 Gallows Road, as well as a workshop for parents of elementary school students with dyslexia on Nov. 13 from 10 a.m.-12:30 p.m. also at the Dunn Loring Center.

parent of students with learning disability and dyslexia — what does any other parent face?”

Garza has also met with parents from Decoding Dyslexia on several occasions over the last three years. “She really welcomed the advocacy,” said McLaughlin, “and invested a lot of time trying to work with DDVA to understand the granular level of their children’s experience and the collective information they have.”

McLaughlin added that a new staff position is being “repurposed” from elsewhere in the system, who will be dedicated to overseeing dyslexia services.

“Decoding Dyslexia is a perfect example of an advocacy group holding a school system accountable,” McLaughlin said. “We have better education research, better understanding, now it’s time to step forward and provide the necessary services.”

“I appreciate what they’re doing now,” Duncan said. “There are so many parents who want the change to occur immediately. I have hope, though understand it physically is an impossibility, in a system this large. Teacher training needs to be pretty extensive, it needs to be multisensory, cumulative and simultaneously delivered. Teachers currently are coming from zero.”

“Six years ago, dyslexia was not uttered,” Duncan continued. “Those words were not shared. Fairfax County is definitely trying to change, right the ship. But it’s going to take a long time for it to turn around and head in another direction.”

Wossen Assaye escaped from custody while being treated at Inova Fairfax Hospital and was later apprehended in Washington, D.C.

March Escapee from Inova Hospital Sentenced

Arlington man Wossen Assaye, 43, led law enforcement officials from several jurisdictions on a man hunt for hours on March 31, 2015, after escaping from custody at Inova Fairfax Hospital.

On Friday, Oct. 9, the U.S. Department of Justice announced Assaye was sentenced to 32 years in prison — 384 months and then five years of supervised release. His charges included two counts of “using, carrying and brandishing a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence.”

In his escape from Inova, Assaye reportedly overpowered the female, one of his two guards, and used her gun to aim at the second guard, before fleeing down the hallway from the room where he was receiving treatment.

Assaye had been arrested for robbing a series of a banks in Northern Virginia on a dozen occasions between Oct. 2013 and March 2015. He pleaded guilty to all his charges on July 23, 2015.

As part of his sentence, Assaye must pay the banks he robbed a restitution of $34,870, as well as undergo drug testing and mental health evaluation. The FBI Washington Field Office, Fairfax County Police Department, Alexandria City Police Department, Loudoun County Sheriff's Office and Falls Church City Police Department were all involved with investigating Assaye.

— REAL STORIES FROM THE EXPRESS LANES —

"I've shaved an hour off my daily commute. It's made me a better dad and a better husband."

- Donald B.
Stafford, VA

Public school teacher Donald lives in Stafford and works in Falls Church. Before the Express Lanes, he says his commute was stressful and unpredictable. When Donald would slug on the HOV lanes, sometimes it took him an hour to get work. He was always rushing and often resorted to fast food. Since the Lanes opened on 95, he still slugs or carpools to work, but now he can eat breakfast and dinner with his family and is able to spend more time with those he loves. He no longer misses important events and says his personal relationships have significantly improved.

Police Commission Calls for Auditor, Civilian Review Board

Unanimous recommendations head to supervisors in wake of John Geer shooting, transparency missteps.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

After six months of meetings, the Ad Hoc commission created by Board of Supervisors chairman Sharon Bulova to review police practices has concluded its primary work. Chair of the commission's Independent Oversight and Investigations subcommittee Jack Johnson presented that group's final recommendations to the full commission on Oct. 8.

The subcommittee unanimously favored creating an Independent Police Auditor position that would "report directly to the Board of Supervisors and would provide oversight in cases of police use of force that lead to serious injury or death, including officer involved shootings," Johnson's letter to commission chairman Michael Hershman said.

The report also calls for establishing a seven-member Civilian Review Panel for cases of alleged police misconduct. The panelists are meant to work with the new auditor "as to serious use of force cases so that the panel can provide its views to the Board of Supervisors and the Chief of Police as to policy and practices changes that may be warranted," Johnson said in the letter.

"Oversight provides a meaningful voice or forum for the public and forms a crucial bridge between the public and the police," Johnson continued. "Increased transparency, trust, and communication between the police and the public can lead to greater community cooperation in achieving the ultimate goal of decreased crime and increased public safety."

Michael Hershman, chairman of the police commission, with Sharon Bulova at the final meeting of the full commission before recommendations go to the Board of Supervisors on Oct. 20.

It was the last full meeting of the ad hoc commission, and in addition to hearing from the independent oversight committee, the commission voted unanimously to support the recommendations of all five subcommittees and to forward the recommendations to the Board of Supervisors. Recommendations from the Mental Health Subcommittee call for an overhaul of how the criminal justice system responds to people in mental health crisis.

Commission chairman Hershman is scheduled to present the group's recommendations to the Board of Supervisors at its Oct. 20 regular meeting.

"It is Chairman Bulova's intention to move to accept the report and refer it to staff for discussion at the Public Safety Committee scheduled for Oct. 27 at 3 p.m.," said Bulova's chief of staff Clayton Medford.

The Board of Supervisors launched the Fairfax County Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission in response to public concern over the shooting death of John Geer by a Fairfax County police officer. On Aug. 17, 2015, former Fairfax County Police officer Adam Torres was charged with the second-degree murder of Geer, who was shot dead in the doorway to his own home on Aug. 29, 2013 after police were called in a domestic dispute. Torres was fired in July 2015, almost two years later.

The commission has been meeting since March as a full commission and five subcommittees. Areas of focus by committee include Use of Force; Communications; Mental Health; Recruitment, Diversity and Vetting; and Independent Investigations and Oversight.

The final report from the Ad Hoc commission is available online at www.fairfaxcounty.gov/chairman/pdf/adhoc-final-10.8.15.pdf.

School Board To Discuss Delay for Presidential Primary

To alleviate congestion and chaos at 165 of the 196 Fairfax County schools and centers that double as polling places, the Fairfax County Board of Elections requested the School Board look at delaying school two hours on March 1, 2016 for the presidential primary.

Though every year is an election year in Virginia, voter turnout typically spikes during a presidential election cycle.

The item came up during new business at the board's Oct. 8 meeting and is scheduled to be voted on at the Oct. 22 business meeting. To implement the delay would require a revision to the 2015-2016 standard calendar, a release from Fairfax County Public Schools said.

A positive vote for the delay would reduce the total inclement weather days already incorporated in the calendar from 13 to 12.7.

In the only action item at the Oct. 8 meeting, the board members present voted unanimously in favor of an "expedited boundary adjustment" to balance enrollment between Freedom Hill Elementary School in Vienna and Vienna Elementary School, to take effect in Sept. 2016.

The adjustment involves reassigning a number of students from Freedom Hill to Vienna and thus entering the Madison High School pyramid. The change is meant to help with overcrowding and school efficiency, according to Virginia Code Section 22.1-79(4), and Policy 8130.7, Local School Boundaries, Program Assignments, and School Closings.

Closer Look at School Spending

Report: Local schools spend less to educate more challenging students.

Since Fiscal Year 2009, Alexandria Public Schools has reduced per pupil spending by 13.3 percent, adjusted for inflation. Arlington County Public Schools has reduced per pupil spending by 15.7 percent, but still spends the most per student of any school district in the state.

Fairfax County Public Schools has reduced per pupil spending by 6.5 percent over the same period, adjusted for inflation, but FCPS spends significantly less per student than either Alexandria or Arlington.

These numbers are from a draft report released last month by the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Commission in a report on Efficiency and Effectiveness of K-12 Spending 2015. In FY 2014, the average Virginia school division spent 7 percent less to educate each student than it did in FY 2005.

These numbers are critical to understand as local schools, Fairfax County in particular, face a looming budget gap in the coming budget cycle. It's easy to skip the specifics, look at a large overall budget number and conclude that surely there is plenty of room to cut the budget. These numbers show the problem with that approach.

Fairfax County was among the Virginia school divisions with a reduction in resources and numbers of teachers per student which also had a growing percentage of "resource-intensive" students.

More than 27 percent of Fairfax County Public Schools students were living in poverty in 2014; that's 49,895 students, up from about 18 percent or 28,527 poor students in 2005. Number and percent of students with limited English have also grown over the time period. In 2014, 49,442 students, or 27 percent, in FCPS are limited English proficient, up from 35,091 or 22 percent in 2005. The report calls these students "resource intensive," and what that means is that it costs more to effectively teach them.

The larger chart comes from a different source, the 2015 Washington Area Boards of Education Guide, and shows Fairfax County with far lower per pupil costs and teacher salaries than surrounding school districts.

Arlington and Alexandria school districts also have large percentages of poor students.

Alexandria had 6,160, or 58.8 percent of its students living in poverty in 2005, and in 2014, 7,443 poor students, 55 percent. Alexandria has also had an increase in limited English proficient students, 33.3 percent of 4,510 students in 2014, up from 22.7 percent in 2005.

As the saying goes, if you think education is expensive, try ignorance. And if you think it's too expensive to effectively educate the population we have, consider the costs of services to people who don't have the education they need to live successfully later in life.

Effective leaders in Northern Virginia will have to lead the way to funding effective school systems in a challenging economic environment. But if you hear a candidate claim that schools can get by on less by being more efficient, ask if they have read this report.

According to the JLARC report: School districts reduced per-student spending on instruction through a combination of employing fewer teachers per student, limiting teacher salary growth, and requiring teachers to pay a higher percentage of health insurance and retirement benefit costs. Divisions report that these spending reductions are hindering instructional effectiveness.

School divisions reduced instructional spending by less than one percent, and non-instructional spending by 10 percent, at the statewide level during the time period.

Medical Education Campus in Springfield to Host Open House

Northern Virginia Community College's Medical Education Campus will host an informational open house on Saturday, Oct. 17, from 9 a.m.-noon at 6699 Springfield Center Drive in Springfield.

Those interested in exploring a career in health sciences will have the opportunity to meet NOVA students, staff and faculty, tour the high-tech campus, participate in hands-on demonstrations, receive materials from NOVA's Workforce Development and Adult Career Pathways (ACP) programs and learn about the various student organizations/clubs offered.

The Clinical Simulation Center (CSC), which provides students in the nursing and allied health programs with hands-on experience, along with the campus's new anatomy virtual lab will also be highlighted and made available for viewing.

"We have something for everyone, whether you are a recent high school graduate, or someone who is changing careers," said NOVA-MEC Provost Anne Loochtan.

"We want to help potential students explore many of the lesser known, but very important and exciting health careers."

NOVA's Medical Education Campus is the first specialized community college campus in the Commonwealth of Virginia. It offers its students state-of-the-art facilities with a 32-chair dental clinic, a cadaver lab and a technologically-advanced patient simulators lab.

The MEC offers ten Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.) degrees in Nursing, Dental Hygiene, Health Information Management, Emergency Medical Services, Diagnostic Medical Sonography, Radiography, Respiratory Therapy, Physical Therapy, Medical Laboratory Technology and Occupational Therapy. Certificates in many medical disciplines, including Licensed Practical Nursing, Health Information Technology, Radiation Oncology, Clinical Coding, Phlebotomy and Emergency Medical Technology as well as continuing education for local healthcare workers and first responders are also available.

Light refreshments will be served throughout the day along with a chance to win prizes and receive giveaways. Parking is free at any level within the parking garage the day of the event. To register, visit <https://MECopenhous2015.eventbrite.com>.

A Place To Cook

Local designers transform outdated kitchens into timeless, elegant spaces.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE GAZETTE

Local designers recently took three Virginia kitchens in need of an overhaul and reimagined them to create spaces that are both spacious and elegant. Keeping with the open concept trend, the kitchens flow into the rest of their homes and allow cooks to prepare meals while mingling with friends and family.

When a Springfield couple decided that it was time to bring their 1960s kitchen into the 21st century, they enlisted the help of Stephanie Brick of Nicely Done Kitchens and Baths also in Springfield.

"The original space was confined to a small kitchen box in the back of their house," said Brick, who relocated the kitchen to another part of the house in order to make the room larger, free-flowing and better suited for entertaining. It includes an island with bar-height seating, allowing the couple to prepare meals while enjoying the company of their guests.

The bold, contrasting colors of red, white and black cabinetry, accented by stainless steel appliances and fixtures, create a modern, European design.

Brick also transformed a cramped Burke kitchen with a U-shaped design that separated the food-prep room from the rest of the home into a warm and open space.

The kitchen includes dark cabinetry made from alder wood, which is contrasted against light granite countertops. "We eliminated the peninsula and the low-hanging cabinets above it and were able to open up the kitchen to the rest of the home," said Brick.

White cabinetry and white marble counter tops give this kitchen a clean, airy feel.

Dark cabinetry and contrasting light granite add warmth to this kitchen.

Instead of including a separate kitchen table, the Nicely design team modified the height of the end of the island for standard chair-height seating. "This family can now work, eat, and enjoy company without the restrictive barriers of their past kitchen," said Brick.

Together with Evelyn Nicely, Brick co-designed a free-flowing, bright white kitchen with clean lines in Arlington. White Carrera marble counters and white cabinetry, along with recessed and natural lighting from an over-the-sink window combine to create an airy space. Guests and family members can mingle with the cook while gathered around a walnut butcher block-topped island. "[It] invites them to join in the kitchen preparations without being underfoot," said Nicely.

Renovated Home Included in Great Falls Studio Tour

12th annual event scheduled for this weekend.

BY JOHN BYRD

A renovated, circa-1970s Georgian Colonial will be featured in the 12th annual Great Falls Studios tour Oct. 16-18. A comprehensive first floor makeover to the home of Joseph and Alison Lopez, the project by Sun Design Remodeling Specialists demonstrates new interior design modalities now being applied to traditional floorplans in older homes.

"There's a design revolution underway in northern Virginia," said Sun Design founder and chairman Craig Durosko. "We find there's a lot of interest in what's being done. An open house is one way locals see what ideas may apply to their own homes."

Sun Design Remodeling Specialists, a 30-year-old design/build remodeling firm, has sponsored the Great Falls Studios tour since 2012. This year, the event will feature the work of more than 40 local artists in 26 locations around Great Falls. Work by fine arts painters Alicia Sommers and Karen Bateman will be on display in the Lopez home.

The Lopez renovation draws attention to space planning and design concepts that "open up" a traditional floorplan by selectively reconfiguring existing interior walls.

The original 2,700-square-foot house, which the family purchased eight years ago, was built around a standard center hall template with a front-facing foyer and living room that segued to a rear dining room, kitchen, and family room configuration. To gain more living space, Lopez converted a 280-square-foot screen porch to a sunroom three years ago, but the changes didn't resolve other inherent problems.

"The rear rooms were too dark and cramped," Joseph Lopez said. "Yet there was a lot of wasted space everywhere."

Other shortcomings:

- ❖ With 8-year-old twins about the house, circulation in the kitchen was problematic. The traditional U-shaped counter space in the kitchen was as much a barrier as an asset. Storage capacity was limited. There was no place to display the children's drawings which hung from cabinets and appliances.

- ❖ The living room and formal dining room were mostly unused — consuming a lot of first level square footage without much family benefit.

- ❖ The interior to the family room — which included a working fireplace — was notably dated.

- ❖ View and access to the lower-level playroom from the kitchen was obstructed by a landing two steps down that required a 90-degree turn.

- ❖ Despite a setting that backs up to a 50-acre, tree-filled easement, there were no clear sight lines from the kitchen to the backyard where the boys were usually at play when not in school.

"WE HAD STARTED thinking about making changes before we moved in," Joseph Lopez said. "We had many ideas for improvements — but didn't know what would work."

Enter Sun Design's lead designer Jon Benson and specialty designer Katie Coram.

"The first consideration was how to create a space plan that was consistent with how the family actually uses the house," Benson said.

"Everyone acknowledged that the dining room was too small and that the sizable living room didn't have much of a role in the family's everyday life — so there was some useful square footage we could re-deploy."

These observations in mind, Benson drafted a plan that deleted the wall between kitchen and dining room to form a 30-foot-by-14-foot family kitchen. The larger footprint created the space needed for a four-seat food prep island and dining counter, a breakfast area and a substantially enlarged pantry.

It also allowed for direct access to the staircase leading to the lower level. With the kitchen extended, Benson cut a new door to the downstairs and installed a straight staircase, making it easy for Alison to keep an eye on the boys from upstairs.

To improve natural light and sight lines, the designer eliminated the partial wall and sliders leading to the sun room, then designed a 12-foot opening utilizing "by-pass" sliders on a double track that telescope into the wall.

The result: Alison can easily keep an eye on the backyard from anywhere in the kitchen. Equally appealing: an indoor-outdoor door continuum that brings the wooded setting into visual range from every part of the renovated kitchen.

"The beautiful view is one of the main reasons we bought the house," said Joseph Lopez. "Having it available in the rooms where we spend a lot of time is wonderfully fulfilling."

CONVERTING THE UNUSED unused living room into a spacious formal dining room with fireplace, likewise, satisfied the family's holiday entertainment requirements. As a bonus, the children now use the dining room to start their homework just steps from their mom in the kitchen.

With space planning issues under control, Alison Lopez huddled on finish work details with Coram.

"It was great bouncing ideas off of someone with her interior design skills," Alison Lopez said. "There were so many details — cabinet styles, colors and finishes; best granite options for the island counter top. Katie recommended a houndstooth pattern for the backsplash — which really improved on the white brick-style design I had been considering."

The stand-out inspiration, though, was Coram's suggestion that the family's "kitchen art" could be better presented in a 9-foot-by-5.5-foot message board mounted on the

Chairman Candidates Offer Stark Differences

Anti-taxer Arthur Purves challenging incumbent Chairman Sharon Bulova.

BY KEN MOORE
THE CONNECTION

Sharon Bulova is exactly where she wants to be. “I believe in local government. It’s where the rubber hits the road, and where you’re closest to your constituents,” said Bulova, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, the top elected official in Fairfax County.

“My priorities, the number one priority, is to strike a balance between keeping taxes affordable to our residents while also making sure that we are investing in the services and the programs that people in Fairfax County appreciate, rely upon and live here for.”

Bulova, formerly the Braddock District Supervisor, took the helm of the county’s board in a special election in 2009 after U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly was elected to Congress in 2008.

Arthur Purves (R) is Bulova’s challenger in this November’s general election.

“You have to understand that the economic situation in this county is not good,” said Purves. “I already mentioned that we had close to the smallest job growth of any large county in the United States in the past year.

“We lost 14,000 jobs due to sequestration, we lost a lot of middle-income jobs after the housing bubble burst, the number of food stamps applications has doubled since 2008 and staffing for parks and libraries was cut by 100 staff members since 2008,” he said.

“To me, it’s crucial to cut taxes, not to prevent a tax increase, but to cut taxes.”

That was the beginning of the difference between the two candidates’ views about taxes at the Great Falls Citizens Association Candidates Debate held at The Great Falls Grange on Sept. 29.

Bulova said she works to “ensure that we continue to have an excellent school system and balancing that with public safety, human services, and great libraries,” said Bulova. “Also parks, fire and rescue, all the services including public works making sure that we can have clean air, clean water. Those are priorities of local government.”

About 200 people attended.

“LET ME POINT out that Virginia is one of seven states that still has the BPOL tax, the tax where business has to pay a tax even if it loses money,” said Purves. “Virginia used to be first, number one, in terms of being business friendly, in the nation and now we’re number four.”

“In Tysons Corner, all those new commercial office buildings going up, they aren’t attracting new businesses, they are just drawing businesses away from other office buildings in the county. So we need to attract businesses and the way to do that is to be more competitive than our neighboring jurisdictions.”

Sharon Bulova (D) and Arthur Purves (R) listen to Ralph Appleton’s question at a debate at the Great Falls Citizens Association. The Chairman of the Board of Supervisors is the only position on the Board elected at-large.

Bulova conceded that “these have not been easy times.”

“I was elected chairman just exactly as the great recession happened,” she said.

“I am a pro-business Democrat and one of my priorities is to stimulate our economy,” she said. “Diversifying our industry sector is something that our Board has been focusing on.”

She pointed at the growing hospitality business with Cvent, an event planning company that moved its headquarters to Fairfax County, and the World Police and Fire Games held this year, an economic and cultural success.

The county needs to ensure that “we are not so reliant on the federal government and defense related programs and that we are diversifying our economy into different industry sectors such as medical research and translational medicine,” Bulova said.

Revitalizing the older commercial and industrial sections of the county, including Tysons and Merrifield have been another priority, said Bulova.

“Transforming Tysons from what has been a highly successful commercial area into a mixed use walkable community that includes amenities and exciting programs for all of us to enjoy, and to make sure that is a walkable community that has the kind of bus service, transit as well as the Silver Line.”

GREAT FALLS Citizens Association’s Ralph Appleton asked the two candidates about transportation projects, including the toll roads.

“Are there inconsistencies between the Board plan for I-66 and/or other toll roads inside the beltway and VDOT plans? If so, briefly highlight any differences and your positions on the differences and then, if you want, your position on toll roads — Good, bad, or what?” said Appleton.

“Bad,” said Purves.

He said Gov. Terry McAuliffe wants to toll I-66 inside the beltway for an extended period of time and then have HOT (High Occupancy Travel) lanes.

“These are tax hike lanes. That’s a better name than HOT lanes,” said Purves. “We really ought to understand why there is no money for transportation and infrastructure and it’s not an easy thing to solve. At the federal level, all money is being taken up by Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. We need to fix our entitlement programs if we are to ever fix our transportation problem,” he said.

Bulova is proud that she cut the opening ribbon for the Silver Line.

“There’s something I agree with Mr. Purves on and that is there was a time when the federal government was the level of government that paid for large transportation projects,” she said.

“Regarding tolls, we’ve had, at least from my point of view, a relative positive experience with managed lanes, HOT lanes on the Beltway,” Bulova said.

Bulova said one approach to transportation problems could include creating a network of choices, including carpool lanes and toll lanes. “So this may be a viable transportation project but there are things we care about and want to see dealt with, especially the impacts of the toll lanes on the surrounding communities. Once you get inside the Beltway on I-66 you can’t get on it during peak hours, and this project would allow everybody to use it during peak

Second Round of Debates

The Great Falls Citizens Association will hold a second round of debates with candidates for public office in Fairfax County on Monday, Oct. 19 at 6:30 p.m. at the Grange, 9818 Georgetown Pike.

hours.”

CONTROVERSY around the Fairfax County Police Department caused scrutiny and criticism of the Board, especially since the shooting of John Geer.

“My boss has a great saying. The saying is, ‘Bad news does not improve with age,’” said Purves.

“John Geer was a civilian and he was unarmed and he was shot by a Fairfax County policeman, and for 17 months the [Board of Supervisors] stood silent while the police department refused to give the details of that shooting to the Commonwealth’s Attorney who is responsible for conducting that investigation,” Purves said. “And the trust between the community and the police is a fragile thing and it’s a very important thing and this 17-month delay, I think, endangered that trust.”

Bulova said the Geer case could offer a case study in “everything that could go wrong as far as transparency, sharing what happened with the public and providing the information that was requested and making sure that justice was timely served. And things did not go well in that case,” she said.

Bulova created the Ad Hoc Police Practices Commission, which will report its recommendations to the Board of Supervisors on Oct. 20.

See www.fairfaxcounty.gov/policecommission.

“You’ll see all the work we’re doing,” she said.

Purves brought up the in-custody death of Natasha McKenna, a woman with mental illness who died in the Fairfax County Adult Detention Center, after deputies used a taser on her four times while struggling to restrain her.

“It was a death that probably could have been avoided if the county had mental health court diversion program which it considered doing in 2004 and then abandoned,” said Purves. “Jails are the largest provider of care for mentally ill persons in the country.”

The county is working towards a “diversion first” program that could address some of those concerns. <http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/diversionfirst/>

Sophomore Joe Russell with the George Mason University Democrats said his organization has helped register around 950 additional voters on campus. They've brought all the Democrat candidates for local offices to visit their school, Russell said. "We want to make sure students are aware of elections." Russell and several members of the Democrats campus group attended the League of Women Voters meet the candidates event for Braddock District on Oct. 8.

"We've just seen the campaign literature," said George Mason junior Scott Loudin of Republican supervisor incumbent John Cook. "Seeing what he has to say is really interesting."

Junior Taylor Pigram said it is important for them to remember "us being part of Braddock District, of Fairfax County."

"We're educating students about what the local issues are," Pigram continued. "Our diverse population on campus mirrors Fairfax County."

CANDIDATES for supervisor — incumbent John Cook and challenger Janet Oleszek — answered a series of questions in the first part of the evening program, with queries ranging from a position on how the Northern Virginia Training Center land should be used once the facility closes to expansion of Braddock Road.

On Braddock Road, Cook referenced a study taking place with citizens associations and called for better pedestrian crossing and the possibility of a bus and carpool lane. Cook said that he was "not in favor of any toll on Braddock Road."

Oleszek called an expansion to eight lanes "a real possibility." "It's clear to me this is going to happen," she said. She was critical of the destructive impact widening the road would have on Lake Accotink and Accotink Creek.

"It would turn Braddock Road for two miles into a freeway," Oleszek said, "I'm wholly opposed to it."

When questioned about whether they support a meals tax or not, Oleszek said she would be in favor of it. "We know we need more resources," she said and referenced the projected budget deficit facing the Fairfax County School Board for the 2016-2017 school year. "We're one of few jurisdictions in our region that does not have one."

Cook said a meals tax would not solve the school budget problem, and that he did not want to see property tax go up either.

Another question asked the candidates about their views on reforming the Fairfax County Police Department.

"We have to, to make our police department better," Cook said. "It takes a change in philosophy, from warrior to guardian mentality."

Cook also said he has pushed for more Crisis Intervention Training for officers to be better prepared to handle situations with individuals with mental illness. "The Board of Supervisors needs to step up," he said.

"We've suffered from a lack of transparency for quite some time," Oleszek said. "Training is critical to safe policing and communities."

The Democrat challenger also said she would like to see the retirement systems and health insurance improve for the police department.

DURING THE SECOND PART of the program, School Board member Megan McLaughlin appeared at the meeting without Katherine Pettigrew, who is running against McLaughlin for the Braddock District representative seat.

McLaughlin answered a series of questions, including some about the online budget tool that allows citizens to submit proposals for decreasing the projected school system shortfall, later start times for middle school students in addition to high school and treatment of transgender students in schools.

When the school board voted to add gender identity to the county's nondiscrimination policy, "we fell short of educating families on what it means," McLaughlin said. "We looked at following the letter of the law. There was no operational impact."

Video from the Braddock District candidates meet and greet, as well as previous such events for other races, is available to stream on the League of Women Voters website at www.lwv-fairfax.org/2015MeetandGreet.html.

Springfield Resident Honored at U.S. Air Force and CIA Birthday Event

All Billy McLeod ever wanted to do was fly. The 93-year-old Springfield resident was born and grew up in Pensacola, Fla., a younger brother to two sisters who married U.S. Navy pilots.

The day after the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, McLeod attempted to enlist in the Army Air Corps. He was not initially cleared medically, but eventually joined what would become the U.S. Air Force, on April 2, 1942.

The Air Force was created through the National Security Act of 1947, as was the Central Intelligence Agency.

To celebrate the 68th birthday of those two organizations, the Associate Director for Military Affairs recently hosted a party at the Central Intelligence Agency headquarters. McLeod was invited as an honored guest, determined to be the oldest living original member of the Air Force.

In his 30-year career, McLeod flew in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, piloting tactical jets and nuclear-capable bombers. He was recognized with the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, among other awards. But McLeod remains humble about his time in the armed forces.

"It was very routine, very standard," McLeod said. "I'm no hero, I never shot down anybody and I was always lucky to make it back to base."

After leaving the military, McLeod worked as a banker for six years, then became director of the United Way in Lowndes County, Miss., a position he held for 17 years. "I'm the only guy I know who's gotten to do exactly what he wanted all his life," McLeod said.

Twelve years ago, McLeod chose to move closer to his son Larry in Alexandria. He took up residence in the Greenspring Village retirement community.

Col. Billy McLeod (retired) and his son Larry were guests at the 68th U.S. Air Force birthday party on Sept. 24.

Larry said having his dad close allowed them to have a relationship unlike anything they had while he was overseas flying.

"I've had more time with him here than I ever had in my life," Larry said.

Larry was there when his dad helped the youngest airman in the U.S. Air Force cut the birthday cake at the party at Langley. Vice Chief of Staff of the U.S. Air Force Gen. David Goldfein gave a keynote address and honored McLeod. "I'm very thankful they didn't just dismiss him, tried to honor him when the opportunity arose," Larry said. "There was a sense of pride, I thank God that he was able to use dad as he has."

Of the multiple aircraft McLeod has flown, his favorite is the iconic P-51 Mustang. Though he didn't see combat in it — it was more for administrative flights — he still remembers the plane fondly.

"It was beautiful," McLeod said.

"He loved the power, the speed, the aerobatics capability," Larry said.

Twin Brothers Sentenced for Wire Fraud, Conspiring To Hack into U.S. Department of State and Private Company

Twin brothers Muneeb and Sohaib Akhter, 23, of Springfield, were sentenced for conspiracy to commit wire fraud, conspiracy to access a protected computer without authorization, and conspiracy to access a government computer without authorization. Muneeb Akhter was also sentenced for accessing a protected computer without authorization, making a false statement, and obstructing justice. Muneeb Akhter was sentenced to 39 months in prison, and Sohaib Akhter was sentenced to 24 months in prison.

Each man was also sentenced to three years of supervised release. "The Akhter brothers' misuse of their computer skills harmed numerous individuals and companies, and their efforts to gain clandestine access to State Department systems represented a threat to national security," said Dana J. Boente, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia. "Electronic barriers are no less real, or legitimate, than physical ones. This prosecution sends a clear message to anyone else attempting to weaken the cybersecurity of institutions or use computers to commit crimes."

The Akhter brothers were indicted by a federal grand jury on April 30, 2015, and pleaded guilty on June 26, 2015. According to court documents, beginning in or about March 2014, Muneeb Akhter hacked into the website of a cosmetics company and stole thousands of its customers' credit card and personal information. The Akhter brothers and co-conspirators used the stolen information to purchase goods and services, including flights, hotel reservations, and attendance at professional conferences.

Muneeb Akhter also provided stolen information to an individual he met on the "dark net," who sold the information to other dark-net users and gave Akhter a share of the profits. In a separate scheme, the Akhter brothers and co-conspirators engaged in a series of computer intrusions and attempted computer intrusions against the U.S. Department of State to obtain sensitive passport and visa information and other related and valuable information about State Department computer systems.

In or around February 2015, Sohaib Akhter used his contract position at the State Department to access sensitive computer systems containing personally identifiable information belonging to dozens of co-workers, acquaintances, a former employer, and a federal law enforcement agent investigating his crimes. Sohaib Akhter later devised a scheme to ensure that he could maintain perpetual access to desired State Department systems. Sohaib Akhter, with the help of Muneeb Akhter and co-conspirators, attempted to secretly install an electronic collection device inside a State Department building. Once installed, the device could have enabled Sohaib Akhter and co-conspirators to remotely access and collect data from State Department computer systems. Sohaib Akhter was forced to abandon the plan during its execution when he broke the device while attempting to install it behind a wall at a State Department facility in Washington, D.C. Furthermore, beginning in or about November 2013, Muneeb Akhter was performing contract work for a private data aggregation company located in Rockville, Md.

He hacked into the company's database of federal contract information so that he and his brother could use the information to tailor successful bids to win contracts and clients for their own technology company. Muneeb Akhter also inserted codes onto the victim company's servers that caused them to vote for Akhter in an online contest and send more than 10,000 mass emails to students at George Mason University, also for the purpose of garnering contest votes. In or about October 2014, Muneeb Akhter lied about his hacking activities and employment history on a government background investigation form while successfully obtaining a position with a defense contractor. Furthermore, in or about March 2015, after his arrest and release pending trial, Muneeb Akhter obstructed justice by endeavoring to isolate a key co-conspirator from law enforcement officers investigating the conspirators' crimes. Among other acts, Muneeb Akhter drove the co-conspirator to the airport and purchased a boarding pass, which the co-conspirator used to travel out of the country to the Republic of Malta.

When the co-conspirator returned to the United States, Muneeb Akhter continued to encourage the co-conspirator to avoid law enforcement agents. Dana J. Boente, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia; Charles R. Taylor, Acting Chief Security Officer, Department of Homeland Security (DHS); Gregory B. Starr, Assistant Secretary for the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Diplomatic Security; and Paul M. Abbate, Assistant Director in Charge of the FBI's Washington Field Office, made the announcement after sentencing by U.S. District Judge T.S. Ellis, III.

This case was investigated by the Internal Security and Investigations Division of the Office of the Chief Security Officer, DHS Headquarters; the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Diplomatic Security, and FBI's Washington Field Office. Special Assistant U.S. Attorneys John Taddei and Jennifer Clarke prosecuted the case.

West Springfield QB Muskett Throws 3 TD Passes in Victory

Spartans DB Pickell intercepts 3 passes against West Potomac.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

Peter Muskett had to be helped off the field after aggravating an injury to his right ankle during the second half of Friday's game at West Potomac. After sitting out a few plays, the West Springfield quarterback returned to action, only to end up limping off the field near the end of the third quarter.

"He's a warrior," Spartans head coach Jason Eldredge said, "and I had to drag him off the field to shut him down."

Muskett's effectiveness as a runner has been limited since he suffered an ankle injury on Sept. 11 against Mount Vernon, West Springfield's second game of the season. On Oct. 9, Muskett's right arm and a stingy performance from the West Springfield defense were enough to earn the Spartans a pivotal Conference 7 victory.

Muskett threw three touchdown passes, senior defensive back Jeremiah Pickell snagged a trio of interceptions and West Springfield avoided a three-game losing streak with a 28-9 victory over West Potomac.

MUSKETT COMPLETED 17 of 25 passes for 220 yards and threw all three of his touchdown passes in the second quarter. He connected with senior Darean Robertson for an 8-yard score with 8:26 remaining in the first half, giving the Spartans a 10-0 lead. With 4:23 on the clock, Muskett found Robertson for a 27-yard touchdown.

Robertson caught four passes for 48 yards. "I love Darean like a brother," Muskett said. "It's not only on the football field, [it's] at school every day, we sit together at lunch, we're in the same classes. He's one of my best friends and I'd do anything for him, so just the fact that I get to come out here and throw touchdown passes to one of my best friends, it's awesome."

West Springfield quarterback Peter Muskett threw three touchdown passes against West Potomac on Oct. 9.

With 6 seconds left in the half, Muskett threw a 10-yard fade to Daniel Adu, and the 6-foot-2 junior made a leaping catch over a West Potomac defender in the back, right corner of the end zone, giving West Springfield a 22-0 halftime lead.

"We saw that Daniel caught the jump ball earlier down the sideline [and] we knew he could do it again," Muskett said. "We've been working on that all week in practice, actually, and honestly, he just made one of the best plays I've ever seen by a football player."

The win improved West Springfield's record to 4-2, including 2-1 in the conference, and stopped a two-game slide. The Spartans started the season 3-0, before suffering a 42-40 loss to still-unbeaten South County. The following week, West Springfield was blown out by Stone Bridge, 41-10.

Friday's win keeps the Spartans in the Conference 7 championship hunt. West Potomac dropped to 4-2, including 1-2 in the conference. The Wolverines' only blemish prior to Friday was a 24-21 loss to still-unbeaten Lake Braddock.

"[This win] means everything to us," Muskett said. "After South County, I think we were too confident—not confident, but cocky and complacent—so Stone Bridge really shocked us. ... Coming in here to win this and then going into TC [Williams] and [Lake] Braddock, I think our momentum's definitely going to change a little bit."

Adu had five receptions for 65 yards. Najee Green had four catches for 80 yards. EJ Strother scored on a 1-yard run with 8:31 left in the third quarter, extending the Spartans' advantage to 28-0.

While the offense put up points, the West Springfield defense held a potent West Potomac offense to its lowest output of the season. The Wolverines entered the game averaging 40 points per contest, but managed just a safety and a 4-yard third-quarter touchdown pass from backup quarterback Tanner Jones to CJ Burch.

Jones completed 15 of 22 passes for 144 yards and a touchdown, but was intercepted three times. Starting quarterback Mark Ellis, who "got a little dinged up" according to head coach Jeremiah Ross, completed 5 of 12 passes for 42 yards and was intercepted once.

Ellis entered Friday's action having passed for 1,383 yards and 14 touchdowns with just two interceptions in five games.

WEST SPRINGFIELD limited West Potomac to 50 rushing yards on 19 carries, for an average of 2.6 yards per attempt.

"We schemed them all week long," Eldredge said. "Here was my idea: I knew they were going to see [the] South County and Stone Bridge [results], and I knew at that point, they were going to think they could run the ball on us. They came out running the ball and [when] they couldn't do that ... then we bracketed their receivers when they had to go to pass. We just made them a one-dimensional offense at that point."

Pickell had a big night for the West Springfield defense. The 5-foot-6, 140-pound senior recorded nine tackles (two solo) and intercepted three passes.

"I think we played great," he said. "We played exactly how we prepared to play."

One week after many games were moved up a day due to potential inclement weather, Friday's kickoff was delayed more than two hours due to weather.

"I'm not into making excuses," Ross said when asked if the delay affected the Wolverines. "... Was it ideal? Probably not. We've had the same situation early in the year with Langley and we did fine. We had to move up the game last week because of weather and we did fine."

West Springfield will host T.C. Williams (2-4) for homecoming at 7 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 16. After Friday's game, West Potomac's Burch, who finished with seven receptions for 68 yards and a touchdown, left West Potomac High School in an ambulance with a possible concussion. On Tuesday, the senior said in a Twitter direct message that he will be cleared to play this week against Annandale.

The Wolverines will host the Atoms (4-2, 2-1) at 7 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 16.
