We'd like to thank the faculty and staff of LBSS and especially the LBSS PTSA for support of our All Night Graduation Celebration.

A huge thank you to our volunteers: the parents, friends and relatives of the Classes of 2016, 2017, 2018 and 2019.

We would also like to extend a special thank you to the Burke Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department and the Fairfax County Police for their vital presence at our party. Finally, we'd like to thank the staff of the Audrey Moore RECenter for all their help in making the night run smoothly.

Make plans now to support our 2017 party on June 19th, 2017.

'Some Measure of Justice'

Former Police Officer Torres sentenced to 12 months for killing John Geer.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

For the first time in its three-quarters of a century in existence, a Fairfax County Police officer has been convicted and sentenced after an officer-involved shooting death.

After pleading guilty to felony involuntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Springfield resident John Geer, former Fairfax County Police Officer Adam Torres could be a free man within a matter of weeks.

Torres was set to go to trial April 18 for murdering Geer, shooting him in the chest with his service weapon in August 2013, when the defense and prosecution announced the surprise agreement.

Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Robert J. Smith announced Friday June 24 he was ruling in concert with the sentence length set forth in the plea agreement: 12 months jail time.

Smith spoke to a crowded courtroom that he had "reached a solution that may not please everyone." But he said he hopes it brings "some measure of justice" to Geer's family, Harrington and their two daughters.

Following his release, Torres will serve a three-year probation period. Since his time already served counts toward the sentence, Commonwealth's Attorney Raymond F. Morrogh said Torres could be released within days or weeks. Typically in year-long sentences, Morrogh explained, inmates exhibiting good behavior can be released in as few as 10 months.

Torres' attorney John F. Carroll said that Torres has been a "model inmate" in his time in the prison. After the Geer shooting, he was placed on administrative leave before being fired many months later. Torres ran the intern program successfully, Carroll said, and exhibited "no indications of a continuing problem."

ANNE GEER, John's mother, spoke at Torres' sentencing hearing, the final witness in the case. Clad in a black suit, she walked past Torres and his attorneys, keeping her eyes fixed in front of her.

Anne Geer had already heard of the potential punishment for Torres at the plea hearing, and the confirmation of the 12-month jail sentence was upsetting to her.

Anne Geer cited the great length of time she and her family didn't know any details of her son's death, including the name of the officer who shot him. She said her John "was executed by a police officer" and that Judge Smith's sentence "completely negates

Adam Torres' attorney John F. Carroll speaks to reporters outside the Fairfax County Courthouse following his client's sentencing of 12 months in jail for felony involuntary manslaughter.

Having already heard and been opposed to the potential punishment for Adam Torres at the plea hearing, confirmation of the 12-month jail sentence was upsetting to John Geer's mother Anne.

Commonwealth's Attorney Raymond Morrogh said he felt the 12 months was "appropriate," though not the ideal outcome in the shooting death of John Geer.

the intent to kill."

"If I went out and shot and killed somebody," she said in interviews following the hearing, "I'd never see the light of day again."

The police and county released virtually no information about the case for 17 months. After the Geer family filed a $12 million wrongful death lawsuit that also called for the release of incident information, a court order forced release of details and the name of the officer who fired the fatal shot.

"It's Insulting to suggest for the crime of murder someone would only spend one year in jail," Anne Geer said. "John will spend forever in his grave. I ask: Where is the justice for John?"

Torres was among several officers who responded to Geer's residence after his long-time girlfriend and mother of his children Maura Harrington called the police.

Geer was upset over hearing that she was planning to move out. He was throwing her belongings out on to the lawn.

A 40-minute conversation took place between Torres, another officer and Geer, while Geer stood in the doorway of his home with hands resting above his head on the doorframe.

Torres claimed to have seen Geer drop his hands suddenly and reacted quickly and shot Geer. His version wasn't corroborated by the other officers with him on the scene.

Torres gave an apology at the plea hearing in April, but had no response or statement at sentencing.

In a brief interview following the proceedings on June 24, Torres' attorney Carroll was asked whether his client truly thought he had done anything wrong.

"He absolutely has remorse," Carroll said, adding Torres expressed that as part of the plea.

Carroll repeated that "many of the facts" of the case "are not in dispute" and that the agreed upon sentence was "a good resolution for everyone."

Commonwealth's Attorney Morrogh, also speaking after the sentencing, said he felt the 12 months was "appropriate," though not the ideal outcome. "It's a fact of life you

Statement of Thanks from the Geers

In addition to her remarks in court, Anne Geer released a statement thanking the media for their coverage of her family's saga, and the progressive policy work of the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission:

"The media have made important contributions not only in keeping the public informed of the progress herein but keeping us apprized of the bureaucratic lack of transparency and cooperation, of the stonewalling, politics and secrecy, which have undermined the character of our justice system as it applies to this action. We thank you all for your dedication and especially for your accuracy in this particular case.

"And last but not least, we would like to thank the members of the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission for the hundreds of hours and hard work they contributed to making important guidelines for use of force, accountability and transparency within the Police Department. Full implementation should make drastic improvements in the way the police community interacts with its citizens, thus providing a valuable model for other jurisdictions in our nation. We look forward to that."

can't please everyone."

Morrogh said he would've preferred to try the case, but acknowledged it's "very difficult to convict a police officer ... you can't second guess them."

By avoiding trial, the family also avoided the possibility of one of Geer's daughters being forced to testify.

THE FAMILY just wanted to see Torres punished, Morrogh said. "It's not a perfect punishment."

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova and Police Chief Edwin Roessler released individual statements in response to the ruling, mailed together.

"The death of John Geer was a tragic event and a painful chapter in Fairfax County history," Bulova's statement reads. "With today's sentencing, the justice system has done its part. Although Adam Torres' act cannot be undone, there are many things Fairfax County can do to ensure future tragedies such as this never happen again. The Board of Supervisors and the Fairfax County Police Department have worked together to implement policy changes recommended by the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission. These changes are reengineering the way officers are trained to respond to critical incidents and the way the Police Department and the County communicate information to the public. We are committed to promoting community trust and making our Police Department a national model moving forward."

In his statement, Roessler said, "My thoughts and prayers remain with the Geer family, the friends and loved ones of Mr. John Geer, the community we proudly serve and the men and women of the Fairfax County Police Department. We support the judicial process and the Office of the Commonwealth's Attorney. The action of one former employee is not reflective of the honorable work performed by the members of our Department, sworn, civilian and volunteer."

Hope in the Fight Against Drug Dependency

Meeting highlights battles in every neighborhood.

BY ASHLEY SIMPSON
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax County experiences heroin overdoses every day, according to county officials. To help raise awareness, a second county-wide Heroin and Prescription Drug Abuse Town Hall was held June 14 at Centreville High School.

"I first got involved in this issue when there were a couple heroin-related deaths in my district two years ago," Springfield District Supervisor Pat Herry said. "It was an underreported problem so the board approved a motion to set up a task force. This is a battle that, frankly, everyone in this country — across our very county, in our neighborhoods, is facing. We are seeing evidence of this epidemic daily in Fairfax County."

Herry, along with Sully District Supervisor Kathy Smith and At-Large School Board member Jeanette Hough, hosted the informational forum which attracted an audience of 50 residents.

"The board gets alerted every time there is an incident, and let me tell you: it's a daily occurrence," Herry said. "We are getting several emails a week, and a large percentage of users are between the ages of 18 and 35. Among the high school students affected, there are plenty of kids you wouldn't suspect."

THE VICTIMS of heroin and other opioids don't fit a profile,

Herry added that a 4.0 GPA and a college application filled with lists of extracurricular activities and award-winning sports performances do not rule out the possibility of drug use.

The town hall meeting featured speakers from the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Fairfax County Police Department, from the school system and from professional drug counselors who presented facts about the use of heroin in Fairfax County.

In his talk, Fairfax County Police Lieutenant James Cox said that during the previous weekend, there were more than four overdoses. Cox added he received a call about an overdose during the two-hour town hall meeting.

Herry said that those who went to the town hall meeting came away with a message of hope. Among words of encouragement, the presenters let their audience know how to get help in Northern Virginia.

"This was a meeting to make sure people know there is a problem across all populations of Fairfax County, and on top of that, the depth and breadth of the problem," Herry said. "We also let everyone know where to get help, that there is hope, and to let people know what we in the county are doing about it. The town hall structure also gave us the opportunity to hear what members of the community think we should do about it."

Aside from specialists and county officials, there were also people at the town hall sharing their personal stories.

Rona Powell, mother of a Centreville High School student who lost her life this past March to a prescription drug overdose, was also in attendance and addressed both the audience and the cameras from local Channels 5 and 7.

Despite her daughter's tragic death, Powell said she came away from the event — in the same place where her beloved daughter went to school every day just months before — with hope.

"I think this shows that there's hope for this community, for people throughout the country to be able to take hold of these additions and these drugs and to give these kids education and support. Tonight, it felt like I wasn't alone," she said.

Powell added that since her daughter's loss, she is dedicated to preventing such lethal addictions from affecting other families. She wants to be an advocate for other parents in her position.

Herry, who has served on the Board of Supervisors since 2009, said that, from what he's seen, the opioid abuse has been on a steep rise for the last five years. These strong prescription painkillers are highly addictive. On the flip side, Herry explained, they are commonly prescribed for minor surgeries and when the patient's pain subsides, the pills remain in medicine cabinets for other household members to find and try one — or more.

"It starts in the medicine cabinet," he said.

"Someone in the family gets a prescription for pain pills like oxycodone. Then, another member tries a tablet. Then, their life quickly becomes 'chasing the dragon.' The street value of an oxycodone pill, for example, can be $80."

This is where the addiction can morph into a heroin dependency. A much cheaper drug, heroin can be snorted or injected, and produces similar side effects and sensations of the prescription drugs that began the addiction in the first place. A heroin addict in recovery for eight years also addressed the crowd, showing firsthand that recovery from such a potent substance is possible.

HERRY said that while awareness is step one, he has already put motions before the board that will result in war on what seems to be such easy access to these lethal substances.

"At the town hall, we discussed a motion before the board to get licensed drug counselors back in schools," Herry said, explaining that such professionals were removed from the public school system roughly three years ago. "Of course seeing this initiative come to fruition will take time, but the motion to work on the idea was passed. The Community Services Board is seriously looking into making this happen right now."

Herry has other ideas too, but he emphasized that it all comes down to first and foremost spreading the word. He said he wished that there had been more attendants at the Centreville High School meeting.

"The biggest public feedback from parents that had children in recovery was that we need to get the word out," he said. "So many of these parents had no idea what their kids were going through. We are committed to ensure that we have the most educated possible community in order to prevent further tragedy. In addition to getting these counselors back in schools, we need to get these prescriptions out of medicine cabinets."

Hayfield Graduation 2016: An Inspiring Story

Ali Alsayed wins faculty award.

BY ELAINA TAYLOR

“Birds fly, while hawks soar,” said Hayfield Secondary School Principal Martin Grimm at 2016 graduation.

For the Hayfield Secondary School Hawks, the graduating class of 2016 knows how to soar, but they also know how to overcome adversity. Thanks to them, Hayfield Secondary School became a blue ribbon school.

“Failure is inevitable; it’s not the climax of any solution,” said senior class speaker Gilberto ‘Gil’ Rosa. “It’s about what we do when the dust settles, how we pick ourselves back up and stay humble once we’re on our feet.”

No one exemplifies this better than faculty award winner Ali Alsayed, whose family fled to the United States seeking political asylum despite not knowing any English and having been told America was a terrible place. He had to repeat most high school, but is now fluent in English and serves as a translator for the rest of his family and has had a tremendous impact on and been an inspiration to Hayfield. Ed Christ concluded his praise of Alsayed to hand him the award and in turn received a hug as the Hayfield community thundered their applause.

The graduation was held in the gym of Hayfield Secondary School, and every seat was filled. For the unlucky family members who couldn’t get a seat in the gym, the auditorium across the hall was open for seating with a live broadcast of the graduation so they wouldn’t miss out. Yet, when their child’s name got called to cross the stage and receive the diploma, family members in the auditorium screamed as loudly as they could, almost as if they hoped their graduate could hear them.

“But we wouldn’t have gotten here without our supporting cast, whoever that may be, so be sure to thank them,” said class president Nisan Shrestha.

These 460 graduates will be representing Hayfield at 85 different colleges, have a combined 4.2 million in scholarships and 68 honor scholars in their midst. Congratulations Hayfield class of 2016, you did it.

Getting Home Safely on Independence Day

Independence Day is a national celebration, and for many, that celebration includes alcohol. The summer overall and July 4 in particular are times of greater risk for drinking and driving.

This is true for the young adults over 21 living with you, and unfortunately also for many teens who are under 21. More on that below.

For all revelers: Make a plan. Plan to celebrate with access to public transportation. Plan to have a designated driver. Plan to celebrate in a place safe and comfortable to spend the night.

But in case those plans go awry, here is an alternative safety net.

EDITORIAL On the night of Monday, July 4, the Washington Regional Alcohol Program will offer free taxi rides home (up to $30), beginning at 10 p.m. for six hours until 4 a.m. the morning of Tuesday, July 5. Participants must be at least 21. Call 1-800-200-TAXI.

On July 4, 2015, more than 230 people used WRAP's SoberRide service rather than possibly driving home impaired.

In summer, 44 percent of all U.S. traffic deaths are caused by alcohol-impaired drivers, according to statistics provided by WRAP. SoberRide is a way to help keep local roads safe from impaired drivers during this traditionally high-risk holiday.

On July 4, historically, more than 40 percent of traffic deaths in the U.S. are caused by drunk drivers; more than 20 percent of the drunk drivers involved in those deaths had blood alcohol concentrations of nearly twice the legal limit, said Kurt Erickson of WRAP.

SoberRide is only available for those over 21. For parents of young adults who may be living at home and parents of those under 21, this is time to talk. Ask about plans, ask specifically about getting home. Let your younger family members know that you would much rather pay for a cab or come get them yourself than run the risk of losing them.

This is a message important for the tail end of graduation season and good for the whole summer, which is the time of the highest risk for teen drivers.

Visit www.soberride.com for more.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Gross Misreading of the Second Amendment

To the Editor:

This is in response to U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly's opinion piece titled "Stem Gun Violence Epidemic" (The Connection, June 22-28).

It frustrates me that so many anti-gun people, including U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine and, most recently, Representative Connolly in his editorial in the Connection, simply do not understand history. Specifically, they either ignore, are ignorant of, or simply don't grasp the truth behind the Founders' intent when they wrote the Second Amendment (2A). Mr. Connolly's observation that "certainly our Founding Fathers did not envision AR-15 semi-automatic rifles when they drafted the Second Amendment" demonstrates a profound lack of understanding of the intent of the 2A. That the Founders didn't have the AR-15 in mind when they wrote the 2A may be true, but it's also totally not relevant to what they did have in mind.

What Democrats and anti-rights [advocates] want is to ban all effective weapons in American hands. Without realizing it (maybe), they pursue and promote Marxist goals of making the public subservient to the government boot. That is the exact opposite of why the 2A is in the Constitution in the first place: it is there to balance federal power.

Ever since the so-called Gun Control Act of 1968, when officials could get all the machine guns they wanted, but you and I could only get single-shot rifles like the AR-15, we have been sub-armed. The balance of power flipped decisively to government. Ours fire only one shot at a time, and are all we have left. Antisthink they're assault weapon machine guns, but they took those from us back in 1968.

Then they yell at the NRA for blocking "reasonable common sense bills." They are nothing of the sort. Banning the AR-15 — the finest defensive rifle made in America, the choice of police who are otherwise outgunned against exactly the same criminals common civilians face — would have no effect against jihadis.

If Americans are sub-armed, limited to bolt-action wood guns, or some other total infringement that leaves America in a completely unbalanced state, the shining light of freedom will have been extinguished. The jihadis will have won. With asymmetrical warfare underway, we should be teaching Americans how to shoot, and arming them better, not passing laws to infringe their gun rights.

The founders were not thinking of muskets and blunderbusses when they crafted the 2A. They said the right to bear "arms" shall not be infringed. "Arms" is a very broad term, deliberately used because they felt the citizenry necessarily must be on equal footing with the government when the need to resist tyranny arises. ... Stated simplistically, if the government has howitzers, so, too, should the citizenry have howitzers. ...

Additionally, the founders and framers idea of "well-regulated" had nothing to do with government restrictions on gun ownership (hence the very clear declaration, "Shall Not Be Infringed," at the end of the 2A) or the government's ability to monitor gun owners, but instead had to do with a militia of civilians being well-trained and self-sufficient. (Recall that George Mason stated, "I ask, sir, what is the militia? It is the whole people except for a few public officials.") The 2A's purpose is to protect a free State from government tyranny. The gross misreading that government is supposed to regulate the Second Amendment is like suggesting a burglar ought to have the security code to one's home alarm system. It's ridiculous. ...

Aside from the government, if a violent armed criminal threatens me, my family, and my home, it stands to reason that I should have at my disposal the same level of defensive means that he/she/they has/have at their disposal for offensive means. (Don't think of flintlock muskets!) Targets of violent criminals are entitled to be on equal arms footing if they are to survive. Now that's "common sense!"

Reading Begins At Home

To the Editor:

As a current teacher, I observe children who develop literacy skills at home achieve in school. Studies show home environment has an impact on children's beginning reading skills. One way to develop literacy skills is to ask questions while reading (e.g., what will happen next?; how did the story end?) One study found 92 percent of first graders were stronger readers because of literacy skills fostered at home.

"You may be thinking, what skills should we work on?"

Your child's teacher is a resource for suggesting beginning reading skills. Many children need letter/sound recognition, and rhyming skills. Letter/sound recognition can be reinforced by writing letters on cards, mixing them, and practicing 6-8 cards daily.

Also, sing nursery rhymes to stress the rhyming pattern. If your child doesn't enjoy reading independently, ask him/her to read aloud, or take turns reading.

Having access to books helps children practice, and research shows when students read at home their reading achievement and motivation increases. Visiting the local library and/or having a book swap (i.e., where children trade/share books) can provide children multitude of books at little/no cost.

As parents, it is important to understand that children need to be motivated to read. A study revealed reading engagement is directly linked with reading achieve-

There are activities to motivate your child to read. Visiting the library; choosing daily time to read; having a bookshelf for your child's books; choosing magazines to be delivered. Reading is a skill beginning in early childhood and developing throughout schooling. Research shows if children are exposed to a variety of literature early, they are more motivated to read difficult material in adolescence.

When children are exposed to literacy skills early, they are more likely to be successful. As a parent, remember that supporting literacy skills begins at home.

CONNECTION FAMILIES

Planning Memorable, Meaningful Family Vacations

Tips for turning summer trips into a lifetime of memories.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

As summer gets underway, vacation-bound families are packing their bags and heading out of town. Vacations often fly by — months of planning and anticipating can be over in the blink of an eye. With a little advanced planning and forethought, however, even a quick weekend trip or a visit to relatives can become meaningful and memorable.

To begin with, give all family members an opportunity to be part of the travel planning. “Let kids have some input into what the plan is,” said Linda Gulyn, professor of psychology at Marymount University in Arlington. “For instance, if you want to take them to the beach, let them choose something that they want to do at the beach, something that’s important to them. That creates a balance between each kid’s interests and the family’s interest.”

Allowing children to have a say in the plan sets the stage for a memorable vacation. “You can show them pictures in a guide book of age-appropriate activities that you would be willing to do as well,” said Karen Prince, LCSW, a Bethesda, Maryland-based psychotherapist. “It’s important to give kids a voice because it’s their vacation, too.”

Indulging in some screen time on a family vacation is fine, said Gulyn, as long as there is a balance between screen time and family time, and screen limits are set before the vacation begins.

“Try to be positive about it instead of punitive,” she said. “Negotiate screen time and make it reasonable. Always get the kids’ input to reduce family stress. You don’t want the family vacation to be dominated by these issues if you can negotiate them ahead of time.”

Don’t rule out allowing a child’s friends to join the family vacation. “I think what happens as kids get into adolescence they want to form an identity outside the immediate family,” said Gulyn. “Including a friend is a nice balance because the family unit gets respected and the family gets to know and spend time with the friend.”

Allowing children to choose age-appropriate activities from a travel guidebook is one way to include them in the vacation planning process.

From family group shots to picturesque scenery of mountaintops and oceans, documenting a trip with photographs will help preserve your favorite memories. This is made easier by the ubiquity of smart phones and tablets, and the entire family can participate.

“Encourage kids to take pictures of the event on their phone as opposed to just messing around with it,” said Gulyn. “Social media is very picture oriented. If kids have the job of taking the family pictures, that’s cool.”

“You can give [children] an inexpensive camera that you get for $10 at CVS,” said Prince. “That way they can capture memories as they go.”

Discuss expectations and hopes for the vacation so each family member can clarify his or her own interests and hear other family members’ ideas, and the family can set realistic plans that keep everyone’s needs in mind. “I’d recommend a wish list and perhaps agree everyone gets to have at least one wish fulfilled,” said Amy L. Best, Ph.D., professor and chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University.

Make a plan for mediating conflicts that are likely to arise in even the most easygoing families. “It’s easy to get bogged down in small conflicts that can cast a dark shadow,” said Best. “Doing some anticipatory work is a good idea.”

At the end of each day, take stock of how the vacation is going and make adjustments along the way as necessary, said Prince. “That way you don’t have the whole vacation go by and find out that the kids didn’t enjoy it,” she said. “There is often the expectation that a vacation is going to be nirvana the entire time and it doesn’t happen that way. Things come up unexpectedly and you adjust.”

“Family vacations are an opportunity to teach kids how to be part of a team and how to cooperate,” said Prince. “Be prepared for activities that you enjoy but they don’t,” said child psychologist Stacie Isenberg, Psy.D., “If you love viewing art but your kids don’t, bring drawing pads and books to keep them occupied while you admire the artwork for just a little longer. Create challenges and games for them during less exciting outings, such as ‘I spy’ or scavenger hunts.”

It’s a good idea to create some family vacation rituals, advises Best. “If it’s a place you return to frequently, try some new things, but do the round of traditions,” she said. “This will strengthen kids’ attachments to the place and create lasting positive memories.”

Remember to schedule time for rest and food breaks. “Even the best travelers need some time to replenish themselves,” said Isenberg.

Continuing Education

Online classes offer flexible options for earning credentials outside the classroom

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Interested in learning to landscape your yard using sustainable practices? Want to practice Spanish before traveling to South America? Didn’t take philosophy seriously in college, and want to take a refresher course? Looking to get an advanced degree or certification to secure a job promotion?

Opportunities for continuing and professional education abound for the intellectually curious.

One trend in continuing education that local educators say is on the rise is online learning. A study by the Babson Survey Research Group shows the number of students enrolled in distance learning courses increased each year for the past 13 years.

Driven by advancements in technology, the explosion of online learning is making education — once available only to those with extra time and funds — accessible to anyone with a tablet or laptop computer.

“Our online courses have increased at about 20 percent a year for about three years,” said Stephen Nodine, Ph.D., associate vice president for E-Learning and director of Distance Education at George Mason University.

One of the reasons for the rapid growth of online courses is the flexibility that they offer working adults. “Students are able to schedule a course that they couldn’t work into their daily schedule,” said Nodine. “People who are looking to advance in their career or change careers can earn a graduate certificate and have a new credential without having to come to campus.”

The demand for courses that enhance professional marketability is another factor behind the popularity of online continuing education. “One example of how this works is in the [information technology] field,” said Jennifer Lerner, associate vice president for e-Learning at Northern Virginia Community College. “One program that is in demand is cyber security if someone needs an additional certificate to prepare them for the new kinds of IT roles, like Cyber Security.”

The flexibility that online courses offer does not mean that they are less challenging than courses taught at a university, said Lerner. In fact, the standards of academic rigor are comparable to those offered in a traditional campus setting.

“Students need to be really organized and really self-motivated,” said Lerner. “Online courses aren’t for those who take an out-of-sight-out-of-mind approach to learning. Students need to just be committed with online courses as they would for an on campus class. They shouldn’t be the last thing on your priority list that you expect to fit it in without a time commitment.”

Jennifer Webb, senior associate director of Graduate Enrollment for New Student Graduate Admissions at Marymount University, said that while traditional online programs are best suited for students who have strong time management skills and adequate technology literacy, “many programs now have support and format opportunities which offer additional structure and engagement, and are, therefore, well suited for all types of learners.”

The reasons that some students choose online courses vary, said Nodine. “There are some students who might be in Iowa and want to take a class that we offer and they can’t get to a university near them,” he said. “There are also students who live in Bethesda, for example, and work full-time and get to classes in Virginia.”

Universities tailor their offerings to meet the needs of online and continuing education students by staying current with market research, said Nodine. “One thing we look at is employment trends in new professions, information that we get from the Bureau of Labor and Statistics,” he said.

“We constantly review our programs to ensure the curriculum is current and prepares students to assume appropriate positions in the job market,” said Cathy Anderson, Ph.D., interim associate dean for Academic Programs and Services, School of Continuing and Professional Studies at the University of Virginia. “We recently updated our Leadership and Project Management curriculum based on research, market and competitive analysis.”

Universities strive to make their online classes accessible and relevant. For example, The University of Virginia’s School of Continuing and Professional Studies has academic centers in Falls Church. The George Washington University offers courses on campuses in Arlington, Alexandria and Ashburn, as well as more than 100 degree and certificate programs online.

“Online education remains an extremely high priority for both faculty and administration at GW,” said Geneva Henry, George Washington University’s dean of libraries and academic innovation who oversees the university’s online learning programs. “Because of the success of our current online offerings, we will continue to grow our online courses, as the demand from faculty and students is currently very high.”

Anderson said the university reviews the mode of delivery for its classes and programs to assess whether students’ needs are being met. “For example, we recently converted our accounting program to the online ... to allow us to reach a larger audience and provide more flexibility to current students,” she said.

Advances in technology and a desire to meet student requests have altered the way online classes are offered. “In the past, a lot of online courses were set up where there wasn’t a lot interaction between students and teachers. We would put the content up and let students access it,” said Bodine. “We’ve moved away from that to let students engage with each other.”

Anderson said UVA’s School of Continuing and Professional Studies is launching a new graduate certificate in Health Sciences Management launches this fall. “We are also in the process of developing additional offerings in cyber security and data analytics,” she said.

“We are also exploring the option of adding Master’s degree options in the area of some of our graduate certificate programs.”

Springfield's Richard Byrd Library Promotes Reading and Exploration

BY ALEXANDRA TECCO
THE CONNECTION

Children of all ages and their parents visited Springfield's Richard Byrd Library Saturday, June 25 to join the Fairfax County Public Library's 2016 Summer Reading Challenge.

"The secret to a child's successes in school next year is reading," says Chris Peterson, a volunteer and former president of the Friends of Richard Byrd Library. "I don't think there's anything more important ..."

To encourage reading, children from birth through 12th grade can receive a prize from the library upon providing their completed reading log. The prize itself is a coupon booklet, redeemable for free and discounted items from local businesses, nonprofits and county agencies. Among the many prizes redeemable through the coupons are free ice cream cones, comics, miniature golf and admission to area water parks.

The library's Reading Challenge is a program tailored so children of all ages and abilities can participate. The Challenge's specific reading goal vary based on grade level, which determines the number of books required as well as the book suggestions the library makes. "For those with difficulty reading, it can be discussed with a librarian... we can talk about book choice and how to facilitate," says Beth Lee, Richard Byrd Youth Services Librarian. Working with the librarians is a particularly useful resource for readers that are English Language Learners or other readers with special needs and circumstances, said Lee.

Richard Byrd Library will also be hosting summer programs: events, performances and classes which span a broad array of interests. "The programs help kids get inspired and then they can check out a book on that topic," said Peterson, describing the link between the Summer Challenge and the library's programs that encourage children's exploration.

The performance schedule at Richard Byrd includes programs ranging from topics on science, puppet shows and steampunk jewelry crafting to West African drumming, song and dance. A particularly popular event is the Wildlife Ambassadors' visit to Richard Byrd, "they bring live animals," Lee said. Event registration opens two weeks prior to the event with Beth Lee, Richard Byrd Youth Services librarian with the 2016 Summer Reading Challenge Coupon Book and "Badger Knight" by Kathryn Erskine, a book Lee highly recommends.

Scarlett Ambrose, 6, mother Julie Ambrose and Skylar Ambrose, 7, are joining the program for the first time this year. Skylar likes the "Young Cam Jensen" series and Scarlett was excited to find one of her continuing favorites in spite of her reading level having progressed beyond it, "Go, Dog. Go!"

Simal Buttar, 10-years-old, found out about the Summer Reading Challenge when Richard Byrd librarians visited her school.

popular events booking quickly.

A new program Richard Byrd is piloting this summer is Coder Dojo, a free class based on the Coder Dojo model that started in Ireland 5 years ago and has spread globally since then. Children from 7-17 have "different coding projects to pick from like making websites, apps, games and if they're really new they can make sprites, a character, do different things," says Peterson. The only other Coder Dojo program currently in the area is at Northern Esther Li, 6, father Joseph Li and Aaron Li, 10. Esther's favorite books include any book featuring Scooby Doo or Pokemon while Aaron's favorite is "The Hunger Games" series.

Virginia's Community College.

The summer program and Challenge at Richard Byrd Library attracts a variety of members in the community. "There's been a lot of people we've never seen before," said Ivelisse Figueiroa, assistant branch manager at Richard Byrd,

The Kingstowne Towne Center redevelopment would comprise 52 percent residential space, 29 percent retail space and 19 percent office space.

Supervisors Approve Plan for Transforming Kingstowne

Developer Halle Cos. has decided to change its plans for Kingstowne Towne center.

Rather than updating the retail center with 1.2 million square feet of office space, as was the objective approved in 2008, instead they aim to develop 886,000 square feet in four buildings for up to 800 new apartments and condos.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors approved the updated plan Tuesday, June 21.

As part of the mixed-use community-building, the Kingstowne Towne Center redevelopment would comprise 52 percent residential space, 29 percent retail space and 19 percent office space.

Halle would add 68,000 square feet of new shops and restaurants to the existing retail at Kingstowne.

Enhancing the pedestrian-friendly quality of the town center, Halle plans to update the public plaza as well with a seasonal ice skating rink, water feature and new landscaping and seating.

Ten percent of the new residential space would be reserved for senior adults ages 55 and older.

Marcus Wadsworth who handles land use for Supervisor Jeff McKay (D-Lee District) said Halle has yet to submit a site plan for the project, but expects they will soon.

"but I've seen a lot of the usual people too." Some were regulars of the library, but their children had never participated in the program before, or just learned about it. Other parents recalled being part of the Challenge themselves.

Tabitha Temple recalled her experience with the Reading Challenge, "My mother encouraged my siblings and I to participate, we earned medals back then, and so I wanted to pass this on to my children."

This summer's Reading Challenge, as well as the Summer Program at Richard Byrd, are available through Sept. 3.

Lake Braddock Graduates Reunited in Futures League

Alex Lewis and Jack Owens are members of the Martha's Vineyard Sharks of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League.

BY THOMAS JOYCE
FOR THE CONNECTION

After high school, they went to different schools and it appeared as though they would never be teammates again. But baseball has brought Lake Braddock alumni Alex Lewis and Jack Owens back together this summer in a vacation haven.

Both Lewis, a rising senior at Longwood University, and Owens, a rising redshirt sophomore at Virginia Tech, are members of the Martha's Vineyard Sharks of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League. And simply put, they are thrilled to be teammates once again.

"It feels awesome," said Owens. "He's one of my best friends. We've played a lot of years together. And, I want to play more. It's been fun."

"It's pretty cool," Lewis added. "We've been playing since we were in Little League. After high school, I never thought I would be able to play with Jack again. So it's been cool to play with him right now."

Originally, they both went to the same elementary school. And as Lewis mentioned, they were Little League teammates before playing together again at Lake Braddock High School. And surprisingly, it was a local connection who gave them the opportunity with the Sharks.

First year Sharks head coach Mike Cassidy was an instructor at NOVA South Baseball Academy in Woodbridge, which is how he came in contact with Owens. He coached Lewis on a summer ball team and spent more time with the two in 2013, when he was an assistant coach at Lake Braddock.

Not only did Cassidy's offer entice them because it was an opportunity to play ball competitively in the summer, but the location also sold them on it.

"I love it. It's paradise," said Owens of Martha's Vineyard. "You get to play on an island on a place where people go on vacation — celebrities and all that. And we get to play baseball there. It's two birds with one stone. It's the best place ever."

"It's pretty cool," Lewis added. "It's a vacation spot, so it's pretty cool to spend our summer playing ball and enjoy the island."

Lewis swung a hot bat at Longwood University this past spring, hitting .369 with a .409 on-base percentage and five home runs in 57 games this past season. He only has one more year of school left so right now, he is focused on enjoying the time he has on the diamond.

"I'm just trying to stay consistent and trying to have fun every time I'm out here," he said. "I'm trying to just cherish every moment I step onto the field."

Owens, listed at 5-foot-10, 165 pounds on both the Sharks and Hokies' rosters, said his main focus this summer is putting on weight. He wants to weigh 185 pounds in order to improve his power at the plate.

Originally going to Eastern Carolina University as a freshman, Owens sat out this past spring as a transfer at Virginia Tech. But he is looking forward to contributing next spring.

"I'm loving it," he said. "Coach (Patrick) Mason is a great guy. I've got some great teammates and I think we're going to have a really successful year next year."
