McLean High Holds Celebrate McLean

Community festival includes food trucks, fair games.

By Melanie Pincus The Connection

On the cloudy after noon of Thursday, Sept. 1, McLean High School’s football field and an adjacent parking lot filled with food trucks and tables, some offering concessions and others information about school activities.

Celebrate McLean, a community festival open to all residents of the greater McLean area, included small performances from the high school marching band, face painting and a variety of refreshments.

Senior Noah Huffman came to Celebrate McLean after volunteering at McLean’s freshman and transfer student orientation with the school’s McLeadership program, which helps freshmen adjust to high school.

“I think [Celebrate McLean] is really cool. I think it’s a really nice way for everyone to know what clubs we have at McLean and kind of what’s going on, so I think it’s a really good idea and there are lots of games and things like that people are doing,” Huffman said.

Senior Tina Hashemi, who staffed the McLean High School Book Club’s table, said the event was not as successful securing freshmen interest in joining clubs as previous events. Prior to this year, McLean hosted Highlander Kickoff, just before the start of school to distribute class schedules and give students and parents an opportunity to turn in forms and explore clubs and activities.

“[Celebrate McLean] is a great idea, but frankly I think it would be a better idea if we had Highlander Kickoff because it was really nice to have the freshmen come to one spot in the lecture hall for them to see all the clubs,” Hashemi said. “It’s the only time in the year when they can see all those clubs and sign up, but I do think [Celebrate McLean] is really great for the community.”

Outgoing PTSA President and current Vice President of PTSA Membership Alison Senold said the event had a good atmosphere.

“It’s been really nice. In spite of the fact that the weather wasn’t ideal, we’ve had a really good turnout. People seem to be having a lot of fun,” Senold said. “Kids are reconnecting after having not seen each other for the summer [and] they’re seeing teachers and administrators.”

Senold said the PTSA booth received many visitors.

“It’s been doing a brisk business. We’re getting memberships, we’re getting sign-ups for help with All Night Grad Party, people are stopping by to chat,” Senold said.

Mclean Chamber to Co-host 10th District Debate

All eyes will be on Northern Virginia’s crucial electoral battleground, as the two major party contenders in this year’s 10th Congressional District contest square off in a live debate on Oct. 6 in Lansdowne, Va. Republican Barbara Comstock and Democrat LuzAnn Bennett will appear before an audience of regional business, government and community leaders in a special installment of the Loudoun County Chamber’s 2016 “PolicyMaker Series.” The Greater McLean Chamber of Commerce is partnering with the Loudoun County Chamber, the Northern Virginia Technology Council, the Greater Reston Chamber, the Dulles Regional Chamber and the Prince William County Chamber.

Facing a panel of Loudoun business leaders, the congressional candidates will answer questions about their positions on critical business, economic, and quality of life issues. “We are delighted to join with other leading Northern Virginia business associations to present this potentially pivotal debate,” said Paul Kohlenberger, President of the Greater McLean Chamber of Commerce. “Insofar as McLean has long been the home of both candidates, interest in the race is especially high in the Greater McLean area and its business community,” he said.

The debate will be held at The National Conference Center (18980 Upper Belmont Place, Lansdowne) on Thursday, Oct. 6, 8—10 a.m.

Comstock Announces Congressional App Challenge

“Once again we would like to announce The Congressional App Challenge which encourages students to engage their innovation and coding skills at a higher level in a team environment. Our District is home to many successful technology companies and it is my hope that the skills our students learn in this year’s Congressional App Challenge push them to greater success as leaders in our local high-technology economy. I look forward to the exciting new apps the students will create this year as Virginia’s 10th Congressional District enhances its reputation as the Silicon Valley of the East,” U.S. Rep. Barbara Comstock (R-10) said, announcing the Challenge.

The Congressional App Challenge runs through Nov. 2, challenging high school students to design and create an original app for submission. Eligible high school students in Virginia’s 10th Congressional District may enter this challenge as individuals or groups of not more than four students and will be judged by a panel chosen by the Comstock’s office. The submitted app can be on any topic, provided it is original, appropriate, and has been made within the last year. Harvest Happenings Return to McLean Community Center

Harvest Happenings, McLean Community Center’s annual fall festival for children ages 3-8, will be held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 24. General admission is $5 at the door; however, infants to 36-month-old children can attend for free. The center is located at 1234 Ingleside Ave.

Activities include field games, as well as a variety of fall-related arts and crafts projects. In addition, small pumpkins can be purchased and decorated. Squeals on Wheels Traveling Petting Zoo will have a variety of farm animals on display giving children a hands-on educational experience. Children’s entertainers, The Amazing Kevin and Kidsinger Jim, will keep young minds enthralled with magic and music on the outdoor stage. Food service will be provided by Lokl Gourmet, which serves locally-sourced, organic, gluten-free and vegan food.

For more information, call the Center at 703-790-0123, TTY: 711, or visit the website, www.mcleancenter.org. For Old Firehouse activities, call 703-448-8336. For the Alden Theatre Box Office, call 703-790-9223.
CONGRESSWOMAN

Barbara Comstock
Welcome Back to School!

As Our Congresswoman, Barbara is Putting Children First:

Barbara understands the sacrifices and commitments made by educators in Virginia’s 10th District and across the nation. She supports policies which empower parents and give states and localities more control over their local schools to ensure the best education for our children.

The House passed Congresswoman Comstock’s Inspiring the Next Space Pioneers, Innovators, Researchers, and Explorers (INSPIRE) Women Act, which will help young women in the STEM fields through programs at NASA.

Congresswoman Comstock has authored the Student Loan Relief Act, which would offer students the ability to refinance their education loans to take advantage of lower interest rates. It would also allow employers to use pre-tax dollars to assist qualified employees in paying off student loan debt.

Congresswoman Comstock is the Co-Chair of the STARBASE Caucus, which offers hands-on STEM education to students in elementary school. She has worked in a bipartisan manner to increase resources for this important program.

Congresswoman Comstock voted for the bipartisan Every Student Succeeds Act. This bill, signed into law, represented a significant step toward improving our education system and empowers educators and parents to do what is best for each individual student.

“I come from a family of educators—my mom was a school teacher and librarian and my husband Chip is a retired Fairfax County assistant principal and teacher. My sister is a guidance counselor at a Fairfax County Public School. The education of our children and grandchildren has always been a top priority of mine. It’s a privilege to represent you in Virginia’s 10th Congressional District. Together, we can make sure our children receive a world class education.”

Back to School

Don’t be afraid. Asking questions with respect and listening to the answers is one of the most important things we can all do as we head back to school.

Parents, go ahead and ask your students what they think about what’s happening at school, and what their plans are. Listen to the answers. Parents, go ahead and ask teachers about expectations, motivations and their philosophies and approaches on teaching. Attend back-to-school night if you can. Figure out how you will communicate with teachers. Students, indulge your parents for five minutes a day. Answer a question or two. Share something interesting that happened during the day. Try to tell them why some things make a difference to you.

Gratitude: An excellent way to help wrestle back-to-school concerns into perspective is to count blessings and consider how to help someone wrestling harder things.

Hundreds, possibly thousands, of students headed back to school this week in Northern Virginia are experiencing homelessness. In Fairfax County, you can find ways to volunteer to help homeless students by contacting the Office to Prevent and End Homelessness, 703-324-9492.

Safety: We do know to slow down in school zones, watch for darting pedestrians, stop for school buses with flashing lights. Buckle seatbelts. But probably the most important conscious step you can take for safety on the roads around schools and everywhere else is to resolve not to engage in distracted driving. Put your phone down. Students, talk to your parents about this; they could be at risk.

Favorite Back-to-School Headline (from Fairfax County): “Learn About School Lunches and Deer Management in the Latest News.” Turns out deer management is not being incorporated into venison burgers in school lunches.

Why Do Some Want Virginia To Be One of the Most Repressive States?

Two states allow absentee voting from prison. Clearly that is not where we are headed in Virginia. But the restoration of voting rights moves Virginia towards the mainstream. Virginia is one of four most restrictive states with lifetime bans on voting for those convicted of felonies.

Fourteen states automatically restore voting rights once the individual’s term of incarceration is over, and two states allow absentee voting from prison.

Gov. Terry McAuliffe deserves praise for his efforts to restore voting rights for former felons who have served their sentences. He has been thwarted at every turn by Republican members of the General Assembly, who don’t appear to be done with their efforts to prevent people who have paid their “debt to society” from returning to normal, engaged lives in the community.

“IF we are going to build a stronger and more equal Virginia, we must break down barriers to participation in civic life for people who return to society seeking a second chance,” McAuliffe said. “We must welcome them back and offer the opportunity to build a better life by taking an active role in our democracy.”

Earlier this year, the Maryland General Assembly restored the vote to all convicted felons immediately upon their release from prison. Previously, people convicted of felonies in Maryland had to complete all parole and probation before they were able to vote.

MEANWHILE, for all Virginia voters, the deadline to register to vote for the Nov. 8 general election is Oct. 17. You can verify your voter status at https://vote.elections.virginia.gov/VoterInformation. This is especially important to do if you have moved or have not voted recently.

In person absentee voting begins Sept. 23.

Experience That Matters

To the Editor:
We are fortunate in our Congressional District to have a Congresswoman who comes from a family of educators and knows our pre-K, K,12 and university system very well. Barbara Comstock’s Mom was a lifelong teacher and librarian. Her husband, Chip, served in Fairfax County schools for 30 years and her sister also serves as a high school guidance counselor in Fairfax County. With my three kids attending Langley High School, these roots matter to me. She knows our schools.

Langley was where her husband started his service to our public schools.

Barbara’s children attended our local pre-schools, public and parochial schools and public universities (UVa, Tech, and George Mason). As our daughter worked to get all-day kindergarten into our public schools and to get more in-state college spots for our children at Virginia colleges and universities. She has worked extensively with the public schools throughout the 10th District as well as our universities from George Mason to the Shenandoah University and the George Washington Campus in Loudoun. I would also like to thank Barbara for hosting the Young Women’s Leadership Program that my daughters were honored to participate in.

In her first term in Congress, Barbara worked on a bipartisan basis to get The Every Student Succeeds Act passed. The Every Student Succeeds Act reduces the federal role in our schools and restores local control to empower local school districts and parents. When I talk with our local teachers and parents involved in our public school system, they are very appreciative of this new legislation.

The bill had a broad range of support from the National Education Association to the National Alliance for Public Charter Schools and the National Governors’ Association and it also removed any requirements to force Common Core on schools – something Virginia never adopted.

Barbara’s opponent has no such depth in Virginia public schools or universities. She was not involved in any of our public schools or Virginia universities. She was appointed by her District of Columbia friends (where she was living until last December when she moved from the D.C. Ritz Carlton) to the Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia where she voted to raise tuition costs by as much as 20 percent. We don’t need that kind of backward D.C. policy experience for Virginia. Let’s send Barbara’s opponent back to the D.C. Ritz Carlton and let’s re-elect Barbara Comstock to Congress to continue working for all of us.

Inquiring about Vaccines

Strategies for asking another parent if their children are vaccinated.

By Marilyn Campbell

As a new parent, Joy Baatin admits to being protective of her young son. In addition to guarding her son from household hazards such as electrical outlets and chemicals, she wants to protect him from catching a contagious disease from an unvaccinated playmate. But it’s not easy to talk to other parents about vaccination, since it has become a controversial topic.

“I won’t be so bold as to ask another [parent],” said Baatin, of Bethesda. “I respect that it’s a matter of choice. But I wouldn’t knowingly let my son play with a child who hasn’t been vaccinated.”

Like Baatin, many parents of young children feel uncomfortable bringing up this question. However, researchers point to outbreaks of measles in recent years. The Centers of Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reports that there were 189 cases of measles in 2015 and 52 in 2016 as of Aug. 15.

For that reason, it is a good idea for parents to become informed about which of their children’s friends have been vaccinated, particularly for children with weakened immune systems or infants who are too young to be vaccinated. The importance outweighs the awkwardness of raising this question, and it need not be a difficult conversation to begin.

“I think it’s important to recognize that, particularly when it comes to decisions about how to raise our children, certain issues are going to be sensitive,” said Carolyn Lorente, Ph.D., professor of psychology at Northern Virginia Community College in Alexandria. “It’s also important to recognize that we all have different perspectives and opinions.”

Approaching this topic with genuine interest in learning another parent’s point of view can help quell any discomfort about engaging in this conversation. “Asking what they think about vaccines to get their opinion is a nice way to start the conversation,” said Lorente. “It allows you to begin from a point of curiosity rather than judgment.”

In addition to withholding judgment, maintaining an open mind and keeping conversations light-hearted and straightforward is key. “If you are able to actually avoid passing judgment and respect another parent’s perspective and point of view, that will come across in a conversation,” said Karen Bronco, LCSW, a psychotherapist in Arlington.

Lorente’s personal experience in discussing vaccines with one of her friends reinforced her belief that parents should educate themselves about vaccinations before having a discussion on the topic.

“My friend said that she wasn’t going to vaccinate her kids,” said Lorente. “I asked her what she’d read about vaccines so that I could understand her point of view. As a professional, I like to look at authoritative sources when it comes to making decisions for my children. With social media it’s getting harder and harder to determine what those sources are, but I start with well respected organizations such as the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention).”

Informed decisions can be made after educating oneself about the scientific research and debunking myths about vaccines, Lorente said. One reason that parents might choose to forgo vaccinations is the now discredited belief that there is a link between vaccines and Autism spectrum disorder. The CDC highlights multiple studies which show that there is no link. Researchers say that it is helpful for parents of vaccinated children to know if their child’s playmates have received their vaccinations. “There is still some slight risk even...

Vaccines

If your child is vaccinated, as no vaccine is 100 percent effective,” said Tony Yang, Sc.D., associate professor of Health Administration and Policy at George Mason University in Fairfax. “Research shows vaccination reduces the probability of infection substantially, but not perfectly.”

As with other difficult conversations, such as asking the parents of one’s child’s playmates whether they own a gun, the approach and attitude parents take can make the difference between a stressful or productive conversation.

“These are all important questions and I think if we address them with an ‘it takes a village’ mindset and think that we’re all in this together, the conversations go a lot better,” said Lorente.

The Community Foundation for Northern Virginia Publication Shows Philanthropy is ‘Good Business’

The Community Foundation for Northern Virginia has released its fourth issue of GOOD BUSINESS, a bi-annual publication that features stories of local businesses, big and small, that play a key role in the community through philanthropy and volunteerism.

This issue of GOOD BUSINESS highlights some of the most successful, innovative, and engaged companies in all of Northern Virginia. The feature article highlights Inova Health System, our region’s leading not-for-profit healthcare system that serves more than 2 million people annually. The article “Employee Driven Community Service” highlights Dovel Technologies’ particular brand of external engagement that advances their culture and supports their mission driven values. Also featured in this edition is Kiddar Capital, a local real estate and technology investment firm that invests strategically in the region.

“The strategic use of corporate philanthropy has and will continue to give companies a powerful tool that fosters a competitive edge, creates synergy, and boosts employee productivity,” said Eileen Ellsworth, President of the Community Foundation for Northern Virginia. “At the Community Foundation for Northern Virginia, we will continue to cheer and applaud all corporate investors in local community.”

GOOD BUSINESS is designed to inform, inspire, and help spark a community dialogue on the future of corporate philanthropy in Northern Virginia. The full publication can be downloaded from http://www.cnova.org/publications/good-business.

The Community Foundation for Northern Virginia grows philanthropy to help meet the most critical needs of the region. Comprising giving circles, donor advised funds, and other charitable endowments, it helps connect donors to community, meet community needs with community resources, and strengthens Northern Virginia.

During 2016, the Community Foundation awarded more than $4.6 million in grants and scholarships and reported $36.6 million in managed assets.

Winners of the scholarships to Trinity, Marymount, and George Mason universities will be introduced, as well as the high school science fair female awardee. The scholarships are funded through part of the proceeds of the annual AAUW Used Book Fair Sept. 16-18. All the activities and projects of the branch will be featured as well.

To have community events listed in the Connection, send to connectionnewspapers.com/Calendar/. The deadline for submissions is noon on Friday.
“Small stage, big talent,” McLean’s Alden Theatre new 2016-2017 professional performances season takes off with the world renowned Martha Graham Dance Company.

“Martha Graham is perhaps the most important figure in the modern dance world. She created a distinctly American classical dance form,” said Sarah N. Schallern, performing arts director, the Alden at the McLean Community Center. It’s an honor to be able to bring back her iconic company to the local community. It is a too rare opportunity for the public to experience Graham’s art in such an intimate venue” as the Alden.

Martha Graham Dance Company has been innovating the world of contemporary dance since 1924. Graham produced some of the greatest masterpieces of American dance known for evoking powerful emotions. One example is her work with Aaron Copeland’s “Appalachian Spring” with conflicts and desires apparent through choreographed movements.

Even twenty-five years after she passed away, the Martha Graham Dance Company remains a national presence and is on regular tours. “The Alden program will combine original Graham works with a newly commissioned piece,” noted Schellern. The Alden program will include Graham’s “Diversion of Angels,” “Errand into the Maze” and “Dark Meadow Suite” paired with Pontus Lidberg’s “Woodland.” The full evening of dance is also expected to include a newer work titled “Lamentation Variations.” It was commissioned and created by four current choreographers to commemorate the national tragedy of 9/11.

“Alden audiences absolutely adored Martha Graham Dance Company the last time they were here,” said Schallern. “The brilliance of Graham’s work” is something to behold in person. A talkback with the Martha Graham Dance Company artists will occur after the performance. It will provide patrons the opportunity to ask about the legendary Graham, her long career and the dance works just performed.

In the next few weeks, the Alden’s new season will also include professional performances for children and families such as the “Grey Seal Puppets” with world folk tales to share as well as the “Tap Kids” bringing the sounds of young tap dancers to the McLean Community Center. A wonderful season “of comfort food” is how Schallern described the Alden programming.

Hardly Where
By KENNETH B. LOURIE

If there’s one place where I don’t belong, one place where I have limited knowledge, one place where I have minimal interest, it’s a hardware store. I suppose those incommensurable facts are the size and scope of the modern-day, box-store-type monstrously familiar environment. I realize I have been told that size doesn’t matter, apparently, that message hasn’t translated to the hardware store. The height of the ceilings, the width of the aisles, the depth of the shelves, the numbers of registers, the miscellaneous service counters, the automated sliding entry doors, the pick-up areas, the shopping carts, the ‘vested’ staff, the interactive displays and the sheer variety of everything are totally overwhelming to me (I’m being kind to myself; now I’ll be honest: intimidating to me).

The chance of me walking out with the item needed to solve the problem I came in to address is almost impossible to calculate. However, if I were to try, I’d guess, somewhere between zero and none. And what chance I might have would likely require talking with “an associate” and being able to accurately describe the problem and the presumptive solution. That sounds simple and reasonable enough unless you’re me. I likely wouldn’t know the right answer if I heard it because either I had asked the wrong question or characterized the wrong set of circumstances which precipitated my visit in the first place. Moreover, knowing the eventual outcome will entail yours truly returning to the store and exchanging the item or spending hours at home on a repair that a “room” capable of the homemaker would spend minutes on, makes the entire process as unpleasant as any I’ve undertaken. Yesterday was a fine example.

I wouldn’t say I’m still recovering from the effort, but neither am I basking in the glow of a job well done. Now I’m not going to humiliate myself and tell you what the attempted repair was, you can be sure it wasn’t plumbing or electrical and certainly didn’t involve a toilet or a trap of any kind. Nevertheless, when you’re a person of extremely limited ability, instincts and experience as I am, any home repair in which I wasn’t involved would spend minutes on, makes the entire process as unpleasant as any I’ve undertaken. Yesterday was a fine example.
