Ilan started as a harmless carriage ride through a lush colonial estate. Suddenly the trip was interrupted by hostile soldiers in red coats emerging from the woods. No sooner did the troops engage the reeling wagon than a contingent wearing mostly blue jackets began advancing from the far end of the field.

For 30 minutes, the highly trained and numerous British redcoats skirmished with the under-trained and under-equipped upstart patriots under command of General George Washington. Mounted British officers strained to control their horses while artillery regiments from both sides fired and smoke and sulfurous odor filled the battlefield. All while hundreds of civilians — men, women and ear-covering children — looked on.

There were four such battle reenactments scheduled as part of the Revolutionary War weekend at George Washington’s Mount Vernon May 6 and 7. More than 600 men and women re-enactors resided on the estate for the occasion, formed into British and Continental army encampments.

Susan Warr of Richmond came to Washington’s home as part of the 64th Regiment of Foot re-enactors, representing British infantry. A native of colonial Williamsburg, Warr grew up with an interest in history and has been re-enacting since 1987.

Prior to the battle, an announcer from Mount Vernon reminded visitors that historically, no battles are known to have taken place on the grounds of Washington’s estate. Nor was the ensuing skirmish meant to recreate any actual engagement. But rather, it was meant as an informative depiction of what warfare may have looked like during the American Revolution.

Susan Warr of Richmond came to Washington’s home as part of the 64th Regiment of Foot re-enactors, representing British infantry. A native of colonial Williamsburg, Warr grew up with an interest in history and has been re-enacting since 1987.

“We like to portray the uniform as accurately as possible,” Warr said, referencing a belt plate from her uniform, modeled after one that was recently dug up in Charleston, S.C.

Charleston native Charles Rhoden pointed out that as a regiment surgeon, the scarlet of his jacket is a brighter shade of red than a typical soldier. Unlike modern war medics, he pointed out, surgeons during the Revolutionary War would not have been on the battlefield, but rather waiting back in a protected area to tend to the wounded.

In addition to the re-enactments, other activities included a troop inspection by Washington himself and military drill, an 18th-century military mapmaking and surveying demonstration, presentation on medicine of the Revolution and meeting with General Washington.

Mount Vernon Estate representative Kathryn Priebe said the weekend brought in more than 13,000 visitors, despite especially soggy conditions Saturday, which canceled the battle re-enactment that morning.

Talking about ‘Sobrietease’

Local author Martha Carucci talked about her new book, “Sobrietease,” at Sherwood Regional Library on April 26. Carucci, a Mount Vernon resident and working professional, is a recovering alcoholic. The book chronicles her struggles, successful efforts to stop drinking and continuing sobriety. “Sobrietease,” which was the #1 New Release on Amazon for Alcoholism and Recovery, offers her experiences and advice to others with alcohol problems, as well as to their families and friends.

Carucci and her husband, Mike, have three children and live in Waynewood. She spent many years as a lobbyist for the telecommunications industry and is currently the executive director of the National Breast Center Foundation. She studied at the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard and Georgetown.

She has a second book in the works for publication this fall and is starting to think about a novel. Carucci blogs about her recovery at https://sobrietease.wordpress.com/.

In 1989, Viju Dilley and Jessica Watson, just two years old, became instant friends as St. Aidan’s Day School classmates. Nearly 30 years later, they remain best friends, and on Sunday, they joined hundreds of other past and current St. Aidan’s students, teachers, directors, and families to celebrate the Fort Hunt preschool’s 50th birthday.

Dilley is not only an alumna of the school but is now a St. Aidan’s parent; her son Harrison, 2, now enjoys the same two-day program she did years ago. With fond memories of the school’s emphasis on joyful play, caring teachers, and St. Aidan’s playground sprawled amidst a wooded setting, she couldn’t imagine her son anywhere else.

The family roots at St. Aidan’s run as deep as those of the trees shading the outdoor play area. All but one of the 11 classes at the school includes at least one student whose parent attended St. Aidan’s or at least one teacher who sent her own children to the school.

Amanda Cagigas Espinola boasts three connections to St. Aidan’s: along with her two siblings, she attended the school as a child, sent her own four children to St. Aidan’s, and currently works as an assistant teacher. Espinola, her four children, and her sister Emilie Yoder (also a St. Aidan’s alumna) joined the family’s current St. Aidan’s pupil Chriss Yoder for Sunday’s celebration.

Because no birthday party would be complete without cake, St. Aidan’s director (and mother of two St. Aidan’s alumni) Suzanne Odom and three past directors — Kathy Hoke, Kathy Mott, and Judy Smith — cut into a ceremonial 50th birthday cake to kick off the festivities.

St. Aidan’s Day School in Fort Hunt celebrated its 50th birthday party on Sunday, April 30, in Fort Hunt. From left are Emilie Yoder, who attended St. Aidan’s Day School and is now a day school parent, with her niece Gabriela Espinola, 10; sister Amanda Espinola; nephew Javier Espinola, 15; and niece Giuliana Espinola, 7. Amanda Espinola attended the day school, sent all four of her children to the school, and works as an assistant teacher.

Bench Dedicated to Volunteers

The Audubon Society of Northern Virginia (ASNV) honored Jim Waggener and his group of volunteers who have been documenting wildlife presence in the Occoquan Bay area for almost 30 years by dedicating a bench at one of the survey sites in the Meadowood Special Recreation Area on Mason Neck.

Waggener and his volunteers have been conducting this citizen science survey since 1989. The survey covers a 15-mile diameter count circle centered at Occoquan Bay National Wildlife Refuge (OBNWR), and also includes regularly scheduled surveys at Meadowood Special Recreation Area, Occoquan Bay Regional Park, and Julie Metz Wetlands. Surveys are conducted on a year round basis, and document bird life, butterflies, dragonflies, and plants. Volunteers range in age from home-schooled teens to retirees. In addition to collecting and compiling the data, volunteers have also produced a butterfly field guide for the region, based on the survey data, as well as a butterfly checklist.

Virginia has a troubling history of disenfranchising voters based on criminal convictions and failing to restore those rights when disenfranchised citizens have completed their sentences. In the recently completed 2017 session of the General Assembly, Republican Sen. Tommy Norment introduced a constitutional amendment (SJ 223) that would have allowed for the restoration of voting rights for violent felons (which includes burglary and certain drug offenses) after release from prison, a five-year waiting period, and payment of all fines, fees, and restitution. Democratic opposition argued that these unpaid monies constituted a modern version of the poll tax.

Though poll tax laws are no longer on the books, Virginia has one of the nation’s most extreme policies restricting the voting rights of criminal offenders and one of the most racially disproportionate, with more than one in five black adults barred from voting due to a criminal conviction.

As Sen. Norment presented this amendment on the floor of the Senate, an interesting debate broke out in the chamber recalling the 1901-02 Virginia Constitution. GOP lawmakers argued that the 1901-02 Constitution had the same felony disenfranchisement provision that existed before the Civil War. What escaped Republican notice was that in 1876 petit larceny — minor property theft — was added to the constitution as a disenfranchising offense. The purpose was to entrap landless and impoverished African Americans who were caught stealing small items such as farm animals, including chickens. The 1876 amendment mirrored the notorious “pig laws” passed in Mississippi that same year. Virginia justified its new law under the generally held concept that “chicken stealers were so poor that they could not support their families, lacked moral character, and as they lacked economic citizenship they were underserving of political citizenship.” Though felony disenfranchisement had been the tradition, petit larceny was slipped into the constitution in 1876 as a means to specifically disenfranchise African Americans.

That some whites would be caught up in this disenfranchisement was an acceptable tradeoff, as African Americans were already in prison at five times the number of whites. Anyway, whites with criminal convictions could apply for gubernatorial restorations of voting rights; governors generally refused such restorations for African American applicants.

The Republican argument had been that felony disenfranchisement in the 1838 Constitution, which predated the Civil War, proved that it was a race-neutral concept because this constitutional provision was included when only whites were allowed to vote. However, the clear attempt at disenfranchisement by petit larceny made clear that their assertion was inadvertently disingenuous. In the 1889 gubernatorial race, lists of police records were sent to precinct polling officials to be used in excluding black voters.

The following is excerpted from the Washington Bee, a newspaper at the time (1889):

“It is enlightening that in the 3rd Precinct over 600 blacks waited in a “blacks only” voting line and 900 blacks waited in line in the 4th Precinct. Voter intimidation ensued as men who were self-identified Republicans and blacks were met with challenges such as “I believe you have been convicted of stealing.” Even when denied, the charge led to being taken out of line and arrested for “impudence” if an argument ensued. Black voters were queued on the constitution for 20-25 minutes to slow the lines. Lists of black voter police records were on hand to deny voting. They were mailed to registrars. Voters were delayed for hours as they inched forward in the lines and many could no longer wait and went home.

The “whites only” line, it was reported, moved smoothly.

Virginia has a long pattern of using criminal conviction as a means of disenfranchising African Americans. Petit larceny was in our constitution in 1876, continued in the 1902 constitution, until removed in the 1971 version. It was added to exclude African Americans from voting. There are undoubtedly Virginians alive today who had lost the right to vote because of a conviction for petit larceny. Our prison system still has five times as many African Americans incarcerated as whites. We do not need a constitutional amendment that complicates who can and cannot vote in our commonwealth. The rule should be simple: regardless of your offense, if you are in prison you cannot vote; if you are out of prison you are entitled to vote. This standard would be consistent with the majority of other states.

Virginia’s history with voting rights is simply too troubling to put forth a new constitutional amendment that will continue to disadvantage African Americans. Special thanks to Professor Pippa Holloway of Middle Tennessee State University, and Helen Gibson of the Weldon Cooper Center for Public Service whose source material was used for this article.

Mosquito Breeding Area

To the Editor:

I’m writing to follow up on my recent letters concerning the area of standing water within Stratford Landing Park adjacent Stratford Landing Elementary School. I pointed out the danger posed by leaving in place, next to a school, a mosquito breeding area. The accompanying photos show the standing water and its proximity to the school.

I spoke to a neighbor this week, a lifelong resident of the community. He informed me that about 50 years ago, the area in question was excavated to create an ice skating rink for neighborhood residents. When the rink was no longer in use, the land was left in that condition and eventually trees naturally sprouted there and grew. The time is long overdue for the land to be restored to its previous grade elevation and the mountain of dirt on the school grounds should accordingly be put to good use for that purpose.

This is a safety issue directly affecting the health and well-being of students attending the adjacent school (as well as teachers and administrators). It must not be ignored.

Walk-In Closet Design Ideas

From chandeliers to luxury seating, the option are plentiful.

By Marilyn Campbell

When an Old Town Alexandria couple decided to remodel their master bedroom suite, they wanted to pay particular attention to the room’s two walk-in closets. Designer Gene Delgado of Hopkins & Porter Construction, Inc., in Potomac, Md. was tasked with overhauling the spaces to give the couple the maximum amount of storage for their clothing and accessories.

“We ordered a storage system from Poliform, an Italian luxury modern furniture brand, that does exquisite closet systems,” said Delgado. “The closet spaces are very modern with lots of built-in lighting. Because of the angled ceilings … we are designing a cabinet for shoe storage and some shelving for purses and luggage. I’m doing a chandelier for the wife’s closet to make it warmer and more feminine.”

With available accessories ranging from elaborate lighting to luxury seating areas, there’s no need to settle for a closet that looks like a cross between a laundry room and a landfill. When it comes to walk-in closets, the options for creating a dream space are plentiful say designers.

“Closets are no longer utilitarian spaces for your clothes. People want their closets to be beautiful,” said Delgado. “The trend is that they are bigger, more beautiful and more luxurious. Those with large spaces can have everything from coffee makers to seating areas.”

When beginning the design of a closet space, Julia Walter, showroom manager at Italian design firm Boffi, advises clients to make an inventory list of items that will go inside such as long-hanging clothing foldable clothing and shoes.

“What plays into the inventory list is how the client prefers to use their closets,” she said. “For example, do they mostly hang or do they fold clothes. It’s helpful to see what the client’s closet looks like currently (and) works and what doesn’t.”

A combination of small and large drawers is important for the different items to store, says Walter. For example, small drawers can hold items like jewelry, underwear and socks while larger drawers can hold items like scarves or exercise clothes.

“I like to use the upper most shelves in closets for bulky storage like luggage, hat cases and for items that are either not used too much or are seasonal,” said Walter. “Open shelves are great for display of shoes and handbags.”

Invest in a full-length mirror and install it behind the door or on an open space that won’t take away from storage, advises Allie Mann, designer, senior interiors specialist with Case Design/Remodeling, Inc.

“Use every inch of a closet space for storage. There may be small niches that are perfect for scarves, handbags (and) belts,” she said. “Build in shoe shelving if possible. Keeping shoes off the floor gives a more organized look to the space. If you want to keep shoe boxes, be sure to label them with photos of the shoes inside so you don’t have to open every box to find the pair you’re looking for.”

For those with a generous budget, Interior Designer Todd Martz, co-owner of Home on Cameron in Old Town Alexandria advises investing in a lighting system for viewing clothing and distinguishing colors.

“Add pullout shelves and rods to organize outfits. [Add] drawers with glass inserts to see contents,” he said. “Group accessories [like] belts and purses by color for easy access.”

Accessories that Walter recommends adding to a walk-in closet include belt hangers, tie hangers, jewelry drawers and safes.

“If space allows, a center island is a great feature for getting dressed and showcasing certain items,” she said. “Before a night out, (for example) a gown and shoes can be displayed.”

Sweets Reign Supreme at Dolce and Bean

By Hope Nelson

Mount Vernon Avenue just got a whole lot sweeter: Dolce and Bean has come to town.

The high-end treat shop brings with it a plethora of options to tempt the sweet tooth, ranging from macarons to gelato to one of the store's anchoring goodies, Neuhaus chocolates.

Even before the confectionery's grand opening last weekend, neighbors had begun to find their way into the shop to join what co-owner Cookie Seifu calls Dolce and Bean's "Del Ray family circle."

"Del Ray's a very welcoming community. The residents and the businesses are very kind and very warm so far," she said.

The storefront was a long time coming — first a lengthy location hunt, then a year and two months of preparing the space. But what has emerged was just what Seifu and her co-owner, Peter Ge, were waiting for, she says.

"We've pretty much made it a one-stop European sweet shop. So we have our French pastries, we have our macarons, we have our gelato, which is Italian. We also have local suppliers of honey ... organic, pure, raw honey," said Seifu. "... Our flagship product is Neuhaus premium Belgian chocolate that gets flown in from Brussels weekly. We're the only ones in the Northern Virginia area that carry this brand."

Dolce and Bean will soon roll out other eats and sweets, such as crepes, Seifu said.

In the face of so many temptations, it can be difficult to maintain control; but Seifu enforces the individual portion sizes of her wares to keep waistlines trim while still giving in to a bag of sin from time to time.

"I'm not about health, I'm about happiness. From my personal experience, health is an important aspect, and when you're dealing with sweets, you've got to be careful," she said. "Our pastries are about an inch and a half in diameter; there are macarons on there that are 2 to 3 inches."

Dolce and Bean's pistachio gelato is a perfect sweet treat for any occasion.

“If you go to Dolce and Bean, we definitely have the perfect gelato for you— it’s made fresh every day. It’s a beautiful treat for any occasion.”

Personal favorite: “My personal favorite is my pastry. I love the cheesecake caramel, the carrot cake... I would love for someone to come and tell me they didn’t like the carrot cake,” said co-owner Cookie Seifu.

The store continues to settle in, Dolce and Bean wants to hear from neighbors, no matter the special request.

“So far, we’ve been happy; we’ve been asking for feedback, we really want to hear from the community — what they like, what they would like to see, what they don’t like, the good and the bad. Because at the end of the day we’re here to serve the community,” she said.

UCM Gala Honors Hyland, Raises $190,000

By Michael K. Bohn
The Gazette

Nearly 300 people filled the atrium of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in Alexandria on Saturday evening, May 6. They came to support the United Community Ministries’ annual “Give from the Heart” Gala, UCM’s largest fundraiser of the year.

The black-tie affair, hosted by The Friends of UCM, featured cocktails, a silent auction, dinner, live and reverse auctions, music and dancing. One of the highlights was raffling off a free trip to Cancun, Mexico.

The evening’s emcee was NBC TV News4 reporter and anchor David Culver. The two event chairs, both members of UCM Friends, were Donna Jarvis-Miller and Margaret Murphy.

UCM’s newly created Gerald W. Hyland Humanitarian Award was presented. The UCM board will annually “recognize outstanding individuals who have demonstrated a commitment to the welfare and overall economic prosperity of the community.”

UCM board chairman Ken Disselkoen, Mount Vernon District Supervisor Dan Storck, and Lee District Supervisor Jeff McKay presented the inaugural award to Hyland himself.

Hyland served as Mount Vernon supervisor for 28 years before his 2015 retirement. He was instrumental in many community improvements, including keeping INOVA Mount Vernon Hospital open, improving roads, coordinating closely with Fort Belvoir, and helping shape the revitalization of Route 1. Hyland also served on the UCM board 1981-87.

UCM’s recently appointed Executive Director Alison DeCourcey addresses Gala attendees during the evening’s dinner.

UCM focuses its efforts along the Route 1 corridor and holds as its vision: “No member of the United Community Ministries community will ever be hungry, homeless, helpless, or hopeless.”

The organization’s mission follows that vision: “United Community Ministries mobilizes the power of community to equip, educate, and empower people to measurably improve their lives.”

The UCM board recently appointed a new executive director, Alison DeCoursey. She came to UCM from Ernst & Young Global, an international professional services and accounting firm. A 20-year Alexandria resident, DeCoursey also has held several volunteer executive positions in other charitable and community organizations.

Preliminary accounting indicates the Gala raised about $190,000 in donations and auction proceeds, slightly more than last year’s event.

Rockwell, Warren Selected for WCAC All Conference Softball Honors

As they do annually, the head coaches of the nine Washington Catholic Athletic Conference (WCAC) teams got together to select players for the first and second All-WCAC Conference teams. This season, two Bishop Ireton Cardinals were selected for the WCAC honors.

Erin Rockwell was selected for All-WCAC First Team Honors.

Rockwell has been the workhorse pitcher for the Cardinals all season. She has amassed some 160 strikeouts and counting in a WCAC-leading 133 innings pitched over the season. Erin has a regular season batting average of .528, an on base percentage of .594 and a slugging percentage of .887.

Erin Rockwell will be in the top 10 in nine softball leaders categories on the Washington Post All-Met Leaders lists including: At Bats - 1st place with 80 AB’s; Runs scored - tied for 10th place with 27 runs scored; Hits - tied for 6th place with 36 hits; Doubles - tied for 5th place with 5 doubles; Triples - tied for 3rd place with 5 triples; Home Runs - tied for 9th place with two home runs; Stolen Bases - tied for 7th place with 14 stolen bases; Strikeouts - 9th place with 160 strikeouts; and Innings pitched - 1st place with 133 innings pitched.

Sawyer Warren was selected by the WCAC coaches for All-WCAC Second Team Honors. Sawyer likewise has been a “workhorse,” in her case, behind the plate for the Cardinals. Sawyer caught every game except one during the season. She has amassed over 100 innings behind the plate. Sawyer has been a wall behind the plate allowing only six passed balls all season. She has caught six baserunners stealing. On offense Sawyer has a regular season batting average of .456, and an on base percentage of .500. Her slugging percentage is in the mid 1.018.

Sawyer Warren is in the top 10 in five softball leaders categories on the Washington Post All-Met Leaders lists including: At Bats - 3rd place with 74 at bats; Doubles - tied for 5th place with 8 doubles; Triples - tied for 5th place with 3 triples; Home Runs - tied for 4th place with 7 home runs; and RBI’s - tied for 7th place in RBI’s with 30 RBI’s.

Both players were instrumental in leading the team to a win against Elizabeth Seton High School on May 2 to advance to the semi-finals of the WCAC playoffs.

from the semifinals of the WCAC Championship playoff Tournament.

Erin has committed to play softball in college at Eastern Mennonite University next year, which last year won the 2016 USSSA Virginia State Championship, and finished 3rd at the 2016 USSSA National Championship Tournament in Salisbury, Md.

The WCAC head coaches gave Honorable Mention Honors to four other Bishop Ireton players: Senior Dominique Gil, Junior Eva Gilbert, and Freshmen Sarah Milam and Ailiita Whalen.

The Bishop Ireton High School Cardinals varsity is coached by Ann Krebs and Olivia Compton. In her first year, a rebuilding year due to the loss of five seniors after last season, Krebs has led the Cardinals to an overall record of 7-14.

The team has qualified to compete in the VISA (Virginia Independent Schools Athletic Association) State Championships which will begin May 16 in Richmond.
