Crowds of citizens from the Town of Herndon and Fairfax County Herndon Fire Station 4 wished members of Jimmy's Old Town Tavern 2017 Rolling Thunder Ride a safe trip to Washington, D.C. The event was part of the Memorial Day Observance honoring men and women who died while serving in the military.

THE CONNECTION

For some people, Memorial Day signifies the start of summer, a three-day weekend, a time to hit the beach, have backyard barbecues and enjoy time with family and friends. Yet across America, in the major cities and small towns like Herndon, the real meaning of Memorial Day still rings true. It is a day to honor and remember those in the United States military who didn't make it back home, men and women who died while serving our country.

At 7 a.m. on Sunday, May 28, the first Rolling Thunder motorcyclists pulled into Herndon. They were there at the invitation of Jimmy Cirrito, owner of Jimmy's Old Town Tavern located at the corner of Elden and Station streets in the heart of Historic Downtown Herndon. Cirrito had arranged for 180 Rolling Thunder motorcyclists and their escort teams, Herndon and Fairfax County Police Departments and Reckoning Motorcycle Club, to meet at his restaurant.

According to Cirrito, the motorcyclists would be escorted through Great Falls and down the George Washington Parkway to Washington D.C. There they would welcome the caravan of almost one million motorcyclists who would be riding from the Pentagon to the National Mall and the Vietnam Memorial to honor and remember U.S. military men and women who gave their lives for freedom.

Aki Damme of Herndon was one of the first motorcyclists to arrive at Jimmy's. When asked how long he'd been coming here and why, Damme said, "I've been coming here 17 years. I'm a vet. We have to remember our brothers and sisters."

Rick Kalo of Wheeling, W. Va. pulled up. He said he goes by his biker name "Scav." When asked the same question Kalo said, "These guys and Jimmy brought me here. This is my third year. I served in Desert Storm, and this is something we do. This one is supporting brothers we lost."

Shortly before 9 a.m., Cirrito climbed in the back of his pickup truck, stood on a step-ladder, and addressed the motorcyclists.

Aki Damme of Herndon was one of the first motorcyclists to arrive for the Memorial Day Rolling Thunder Ride out of Herndon, Sunday, May 28. This would be his 17th Jimmy's Old Town Tavern Ride. "I'm a vet. We have to remember our brothers and sisters," he said.

Cirrito told the crowd although they used to join other motorcycle groups, due to the crowds they couldn't get into the Rolling Thunder parade. So they decided to do their own ride. Get down to the heart of D.C, right at the Vietnam Memorial where they could welcome the first bikes of the Rolling Thunder caravan.

Next, Cirrito welcomed guest speaker and veteran, Sgt. Maj. James Kuiken and his dog, Freedom, there to help promote K9s for Warriors. Kuiken said the nonprofit organization helps veterans suffering from Post-traumatic Stress Disability, traumatic brain injury, and other physical injuries. "I served in six different wars and only got blown up in a couple of them...I was pretty successful when I got out but then it all imploded. I sat in my chair for the next two years until a friend of mine told me to look at this organization K9s for Warriors. Once I got hooked up with him (Freedom) and got together with the training, it got me back up and out." Kuiken reported that when someone donates to K9s for Warriors, what that does is save two lives — the veteran's life and the life of a dog in a kill shelter.

Declan O'Brien, 5, of Herndon has the best view from his dad's shoulder to watch 180 motorcyclists begin their escorted trip to Washington D.C during one of the Memorial Day events held in the town. When asked how he heard about the event, Michael O'Brien said, "We stumbled upon it last year. So we came this year and brought our neighbors."

Remembering on Memorial Day 2017

On Memorial Day, we remember all of those who have died in military service, more than 400,000 in World War II, more than 30,000 in Korea, more than 50,000 in Vietnam.

As many as 620,000 soldiers died in the Civil War, stunningly about 2 percent of the population at that time. To compare, while more than 2.5 million soldiers have served in Iraq and Afghanistan, that number is still less than one percent of the U.S. population.

Since Sept. 11, 2001, more than 6,880 U.S. military service men and women have died in support of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On Memorial Day, there are many ways to remember the fallen, including a visit to Arlington National Cemetery, or many other local commemorations. But at a minimum, wherever you are, you can observe a moment of silence at 12:01 p.m. along with Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA), or you can set your own moment at some point during the day.

More than 52,000 U.S. military service members have been wounded in action, although that number is likely to be revised upward. In 2013, the military confirmed traumatic brain injury in more than 220,000 of the more than 2.5 million troops who have served in Iraq and Afghanistan. The long-term consequences of many of these injuries, including mental health consequences, are unknown, but they will require a national commitment to excellence in health care and services for both active duty military personnel and veterans. Virginia's U.S. Senators Mark Warner and Tim Kaine continue to advocate for better service from the Veterans Administration.

Cuts proposed to health care, food assistance and other aspects of the social safety net in the proposed budget would disproportionately harm veterans.

EVERY YEAR around Memorial Day, this newspaper names the local men and women who have died in military service since Sept. 11, 2001.

COMMENTARY

Get Out and Vote

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

My credentials as a progressive Democrat (capital D) are well established; sometimes missed in the political back and forth of an election year might be my earnest effort to be a democratic (small d) advocate. The outcomes of elections can be no more reflective of the public mood and aspirations than substantial participation by voters in the electoral process. That observation has been made over and over yet elections occur with only a small fraction of eligible voters taking part.

Voting does take some time and effort. To vote one must register, but registration is active as long as you have not moved. Even though elections take place on a weekday when many people work, it should be possible to find some time between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. in order to vote. If not, absentee voting is an alternative. There has been much legislation over the years designed to suppress the vote, but I and others have spent a lifetime working to get it defeated in the courts or in the legislature.

Although candidates spend huge amounts of money and time selling themselves to voters, there are many voters who consider themselves too ill-informed to vote. Bringing a realistic vision of a candidate to a voter is not an easy task. Candidates need to keep trying, and voters need to step up the effort to find out information on candidates for themselves. The recent growth of interest groups registering voters and informing people on the issues is a very hopeful sign. I believe it will help change the outcome of some elections, and for sure it is likely to increase participation.

Virginia has an election every year. While most states skip the and all members of the House of Delegates this year. That election will be on Nov. 7. But even before we get to those campaigns there are many more primary elections in both parties this year than I can ever remember.

June 13 is a most important date when primary elections will take place. Voters do not register by political party in Virginia. To vote in the Democratic or Republican primary on June 13 you need to declare your political party at that time. You cannot vote in more than one primary.

Of course I am voting in the Democratic primary and will be voting for current Lieutenant Governor Ralph Northam for the Democratic nomination for governor and Justin Fairfax as the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor. Attorney General Mark Herring will be the Democratic nominee for re-election as he is not being challenged in the primary.

If you are voting in the Republican primary on June 13, you have a choice of three candidates for the nomination for governor, and three for lieutenant governor. I am not being challenged in the primary but several delegate districts have primaries in Northern Virginia. To look at a sample ballot for each party, go to www.fairfaxcounty.gov/elections/upcoming.htm,

However you choose to vote, do get out and vote and encourage your neighbors to do the same.

Price Points — In the Wrong Direction

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not that I need a pound bag of M&Ms to weigh 16 actual ounces (it's now down to 10.70 oz.) or a half gallon of ice cream to weigh 64 ounces (rather than the 48 oz. it currently is) or the "family" size bag of Utz potato chips to measure more than its current/meager/non-typical-family size of 9.5 ounces (down from 14 ounces that I remember), nevertheless, I do need to feel the love, and right now I don't. I sort of understand price points and the business models ingrained to retain customer loyalty (price matters more than size, generally), but I am hard-pressed to ignore the fact that even though I'm spending the same amount of money as I always have, I'm not getting anywhere near the same amount of product as I always have.

Not that the few items I've listed here are staples (well, maybe not to you they aren't), or the necessary building blocks of a healthy diet, they are pieces to a puzzle which characterizes some of my eating habits — and probably some of yours, too. After all, we are all victims of advertising messages which bombard us 24-7, on television, on radio, in print and on devices. In a way, we're all sitting ducks targeted to quack accordingly because some entity/marketing strategist knows who we are, what we're doing and when we're doing it. It's not exactly "Big Brother," but it's a bit more than "Little Sister."

My brother, Richard and I grew up in the 50s. We ate cookies, candy and snack cakes until the cows came home, and we didn't even live on a farm. Quite the opposite, we lived in suburbia, seven miles from Boston, according to the sign on Rte. 9. We ate dessert after breakfast, lunch and dinner and a few times in between: after school and before bedtime. Why? Because my mother had been non-stop advertised-to about the importance of calcium and the best way for children to get calcium was to drink eight glasses of milk per day to "build strong bones and healthy bodies." And the only way to get us boys to drink that much milk was to feed us something for which milk was a kind of elixir: cookies, cakes, snack cakes, etc. So we ate and drink to our hearts content, but more importantly, we ate and drank to the development of our bones and bodies. And so it continues to this day, sort of, mostly. As my sister-in-law, Vanessa says and then laughs after listening to Richard and I talk about our dessert issues: "Boy, your mother did some job on you two."

I'm exaggerating, a bit, with respect to our current daily consumption. I mean, who could keep up that pace? Moreover, given certain age/weight/cancer realities (particularly concerning yours truly), it would be totally, extraordinarily irresponsible to continue to snack-cake and cookie our way through the day. Still, the urge to splurge seems hard-wired into our brains and when the moment is right, it might not be Cialis that we always think of. (Do you remember the Seinfeld episode when George was determined to combine sex and eating and brought a sandwich to bed? For the record, the thought has never crossed my mind.)

I imagine as you've read this column you've developed a sense that given the Lourie's long-standing — and sitting commitment to such hedonistic pursuits, pennies, nickels, dimes or quarters on the dollar are unlikely to dissuade either one of us from our Santa-like appointed rounds.

Still, we're not idiots. We're aware of the effects on our bodies if we devolve into the snack cake eating machines of our youth/adolescence. We're not getting any younger nor are we likely getting any thinner or healthier. I'd like to think we've gotten smarter and more respectful of what foods go in and by association what money goes out.

But as difficult as it is to turn an ocean liner around after it's headed out to sea, so too is it difficult for yours truly to care less about what I've spent my entire life caring more about: desert/sweets. However, I do anticipate a reaction to this most recent size reduction. As my mother, Celia, used to say: "It's enough already."

Cheyenne Ramsey, 4, and her brother Winston, 2, grew tired of steering the bucket truck, so they decided to explore the dashboard controls. They took turns trying to push the Power Take Off Indicator Light. Winston held tight to his blue toy car the entire time he was at the event.

Big Truck Days Held in Herndon

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Despite cloudy skies and down pours, nearly 1000 people visited the Town of Herndon's Department of Public Works Maintenance Complex on Sterling Road, May 4-5. They were there to attend Big Truck Days, a popular family-friendly event hosted by the Department since 1999.

John Johnson, DPW's Building Maintenance Coordinator/Assistant Supervisor, was on hand early morning to greet the first wave of visitors arriving at the free event and to accept non-perishable food donations for the needy. As Johnson distributed plastic hard hats, stickers and wristbands to the visiting children, he explained that everyone was invited to not only see and touch the town's fleet of big trucks and heavy equipment on display but to go ahead and climb on board. Sit in the cabs, try out the steering wheels, push the buttons and have a great day. Johnson went on to tell the parents, teachers and children that other members of the DPW's staff were in the parking lot. They would be happy to answer any questions and explain the function of the vehicles.

Talia Thompson and her son Carlisle, 5, were among the first to arrive. "What a wonderful way to familiarize our children with our community helpers," she said. Sangae Ramsey brought her two children, Winston, 2, and Cheyenne, 4. She expressed a similar sentiment. "This is a wonderful experience to view all the trucks that we see on the road and in our neighborhood."

Besides the big trucks, there was an activity area where children could control a stop light by pushing a button to change its colors and a set of pedestrian signals set out for them to learn firsthand how to cross a street properly. Karyn Bodell's 5-year-old son, Moses gleefully ran back and forth racing his friend Carlisle up and down the crosswalk and pushing the buttons to change the signal. Bodell appeared very pleased with the exercise and said, "This is a great opportunity for my kids to have fun and learn about safety."

One of the most popular vehicles at Big Truck Days was not a big truck but one of the town's police cruisers. While children waited patiently in line to climb in and take
