Democrats Play the Long Game

Voters choose candidates who have been planning their campaign for years rather than upstarts newly energized against Trump.

Slow and steady wins the day. That's the message Democrats sent this week at the polls, selecting two candidates who have essentially been running four-year campaigns for their ticket in November.

Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam has been planning a run for the Executive Mansion for years, lining up almost every elected official in the state before anyone else even thought about entering the race.

And Justin Fairfax, a former federal prosecutor, has been steadily planning a campaign for lieutenant governor since 2013, when he lost the Democratic primary for attorney general to Mark Herring. Now Northam and Fairfax are ready to barnstorm the state and take on the Republican ticket. Attorney General Mark Herring had no opposition in the Democratic primary.

"I'm a fighter," declared Northam at his victory party, which packed a sweltering Highline RxR in Crystal City. "I'm ready to lead the fight. Are you ready to join me? Let's get it done!"

Northam won a decisive victory, taking 56 percent of the vote. He swept Northern Virginia and Hampton Roads in addition to places like Winchester, Fredericksburg and Williamsburg. Former U.S. Rep. Tom Perriello secured 44 percent of the vote with a strong showing in college towns, including Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Harrisonburg and Blacksburg. But it was no match for the lieutenant governor, who spent more than $2.5 million flooding the airwaves with commercials portraying the lieutenant governor as a hard-working doctor who stood up to Big Tobacco to implement a smoking ban in restaurants.

"Talk about a centrist Democrat, Ralph is exactly where our party should be," said Senate Minority Leader Dick Saslaw, who represents Fairfax County. "On social issues, he's where he should be. And on business issues he's where he should be."

PERRIELLO'S CAMPAIGN tried to challenge Northam from the left, pushing a platform that would raise taxes on the wealthy to pay for free community college. On the campaign trail, he was critical of taking money from Dominion, the utility that wants to build two controversial pipelines through Virginia. Perriello opposed the pipelines, but Northam repeatedly dodged taking a position on the issue. Campaign finance records show Northam has received more than $100,000 from Dominion and its executives during his political career.

"We need to wean ourselves away from fossil fuels. We'll do that," said Northam as pipeline opponents conducted a raucous protest outside the victory party. "We'll continue to work with renewable energy. We've made great progress with solar and wind."

Northam supporters portrayed Perriello was an opportunist, someone who carved out a moderate record in Congress by voting against federal funding for abortions and receiving the endorsement of the National Rifle Association. His campaign for Congress was the polar opposite, moving all the way to the left and receiving support from U.S. Sen. Bernie Sanders and U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren. Many of Northam's supporters held deep suspicion about Perriello's dramatic shift across the political spectrum.

"I think his record in Congress did hurt him, especially with the women's health groups and the gun safety groups," said Del. Jennifer Boysko (D-86), one of the more liberal members of the House Democratic caucus who represents Herndon. "But also he hasn't really been active in Virginia until he showed up running for governor. I think that's probably what hurt him more than anything."

FAIRFAX spent more than $250,000 in a campaign against two opponents, a long-time political operative Susan Platt and a seasoned federal prosecutor Gene Rossi, who once mentored Fairfax at the federal courthouse in Alexandria. Since losing to Herring in 2013, Fairfax set out on a campaign to help raise money and support for candidates across the state, building up a steady stream of endorsements along the way. By the time his rivals announced their candidacies after Donald Trump won the White House, Fairfax had already lined up an overwhelming list of endorsements from elected officials across the state.

"In the last year, we've driven over 40,000 miles with our message of economic security and opportunity," said Fairfax in a written statement following his victory. "We've met thousands of passionate Virginians who agree with our message and want our future for Virginia."

The Democratic campaign for lieutenant governor struggled for attention, crowded out by the hotly contested race at the top of the ticket as well as the soap opera quality that dominated the Republican primary for lieutenant governor. On the campaign trail, the three candidates stuck to the issues and conducted a relatively issues-based debate about how to handle the opioid crisis and how to expand access to higher education in Virginia. All three of the Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor opposed Dominion's plans to build to pipelines in Virginia.

"We must unite as Democrats for victory in November," said Platt in a written statement conceding the race to Fairfax. "We cannot allow Virginia Republicans to roll back rights for women and spread Donald Trump's hateful and dangerous agenda across the commonwealth."

Close primary campaigns for governor and lieutenant governor send GOP candidates to November ballot.

Republicans chose their party's two frontrunners in two hotly contested primary fights for governor and lieutenant governor, but their candidates emerged from the June election with battle scars and depleted campaign accounts. Former Republican National Committee Chairman Ed Gillespie entered the campaign a frontrunner. But he spent more than $2 million fighting back an unexpectedly strong challenge from Prince William County Board of Supervisors Chairman Corey Stewart, who came within 5,000 votes of scoring an upset victory that would have upended Republican politics in Virginia. State Sen. Jill Vogel (R-27) beat back two challengers, one of whom accused her of engineering a false claim of infidelity against a rival. Lawyer John Adams was unopposed for attorney general.

"I can't wait to lead a unified ticket to victory in November and wage a campaign that makes us all proud," said Gillespie in a written statement following the election results. "We will not only elect a Republican governor, but lieutenant governor and attorney general."

Stewart served as chairman of the Donald Trump campaign in Virginia until he was fired from the campaign for participating in a protest at the headquarters of the Republican National Committee in Washington, a rally organized by Trump supporters who were concerned the party's support for the reality TV star would be lukewarm. His campaign hit many of the same themes as the Trump campaign, including Stewart's outspoken opposition to undocumented immigrants and unyielding support for Confederate memorials. In the end, the chairman of the Prince William County Board of Supervisors came less than a percentage point away from securing the nomination.

"There's one word you'll never hear from me, and that's unity," said Stewart during a defiant speech in Woodbridge. "Whether it is the political establishment on the right with the Republicans or the political establishment on the left with the Democrats, in fact establishment Republicans and establishment Democrats are one in the same thing."

STEWART'S CAMPAIGN was built on the reputation he built in Prince William County, where he became a national firebrand against undocumented immigrants and sanctuary cities. Although he never had the name recognition that Trump enjoyed from his decades in the spotlight, Stewart appealed to many of the same interest groups — white nationalists who oppose immigrants and support Confederate monuments. Gillespie spent much of the primary avoiding answering questions about his views about the Trump administration. Now he has to move past his narrow victory in the primary and leverage his ability to fundraise in a battle against a Democratic Party united against Trump.

"The primaries left our campaign with a very strong cash on hand figure and a robust ground game that made more than 800,000 contacts during the primary powered by over 6,000 volunteers," wrote Chris Leavitt, Gillespie's campaign manager in a post-primary memo. "The primaries also placed Ed Gillespie squarely in the center-right of Virginia politics. On the Democratic side, the long, expensive and bitter primary forced Ralph Northam to spend over $4 million, reducing his cash on hand to half of ours, and, more importantly, pushing him far to the left politically."

For the most part Gillespie tried to ignore Stewart and another Republican primary rival, state Sen. Frank Wagner (R-7). He agreed to only one televised debate, and declined to answer questions about Trump. The centerpiece of his campaign is a tax cut that would reduce the income tax rate from 5.75 percent to 5.15 percent. On the campaign trail, Wagner said that was an irresponsible move that would threaten to undermine the cash-strapped state budget. But Gillespie and his supporters view tax cuts as a clear way to frame the Republican case for taking the Executive Mansion from Democrats.

"Virginia needs a new direction, and with Ed Gillespie at the helm, the commonwealth will get back on the right track," said Republican Governors Association Chairman Gov. Scott Walker of Wisconsin. "Ed has a substantive vision for Virginia's future, including a commitment to cut taxes, raise take-home pay, reform state government, improve education and encourage business growth and job creation."

VOGEL emerged from a primary fight that often seemed more like a soap opera than a political campaign. Rival candidate state Sen. Bryce Reeves (R-17) accused her of a plot to accuse him of infidelity, a claim Vogel strongly denied. Late in the campaign, Reeves sent a controversial piece of direct mail criticizing Vogel for voting in favor of appointing a gay judge in Fairfax County. Ultimately, she was successful in persuading voters to support a moderate candidate, someone who often sounded like she was already running a general election strategy of appealing to Democrats even though she wasn't yet through the Republican primary.

"The biggest issues of our day should not be partisan issues," said Vogel in a written statement after primary. "As this campaign continues building momentum, I eagerly look forward to earning the support of independents and Democrats who also wish to put principle over party and focus on solving our problems."

McGuireWoods lawyer John Adams was unchallenged in the primary, which means he spent the last few months building a campaign war chest to take on incumbent Democratic Attorney General Mark Herring,

"The primaries left our campaign with a very strong cash on hand figure and a robust ground game that made more than 800,000 contacts during the primary powered by over 6,000 volunteers."

— Chris Leavitt,
campaign manager for Ed Gillespie who was also unchallenged in the primary. For Adams, it was a case of being in the right place at the right time. Del. Rob Bell (R-58) was considered the frontrunner in the race, but then he decided to withdraw from the race and focus on his reelection campaign to the House of Delegates, where he is expected to become chairman of a key committee next year. Virginia Beach lawyer Chuck Smith was also planning to run, but he failed to submit the required number of signatures. That left Adams unchallenged in the primary.

"I am confident that Virginians want an attorney general that will enforce and defend the laws of our commonwealth, not pursue a political agenda," said Adams in a written statement after the primary. "There's a clear difference between me and Mark Herring, and I look forward to sharing that with every voter over the next five months."

Brabrand Confirmed as Superintendent

The Fairfax County School Board has voted to confirm Scott S. Brabrand as division superintendent of Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS) for the period July 10, 2017, to June 30, 2021.

Brabrand returns to FCPS after spending five years as superintendent of Lynchburg City Schools. This year, he was named Region V Superintendent of the Year by the Virginia Association of School Superintendents.

Symphony Celebrates Anniversary

BY MIKE SALMON

In the middle of the West Springfield High School 50th Anniversary Concert, the band hammered out the world premiere performance of “It’s Just a Phase,” by Anthony O’Toole, that was written to commemorate the anniversary event. It was a multi-faceted piece with a lively intro, and a steady progressive beat that rolls along, getting bolder with interjections from the xylophone and cow bell.

“This piece has been a challenge for sure, it takes us out of our comfort zone,” said conductor Eric Hoang, the school’s director of bands that teaches the symphonic, concert, jazz and marching bands at West Springfield. In the description that was on the pamphlet, phrases were used like “embody musically the rambunctiousness of youth,” and “abundantly energetic.”

The song complemented an evening dotted with guest stars from West Springfield’s yester-years, parents, and clarinet player Cameron Harper who is recognized on the state level for his woodwind skills. He is heading to Temple University next year.

“He has grown a tremendous amount,” Hoang said, introducing Harper to the audience.

The next song was conducted by Michael Bellinger, the former West Springfield Band Director from 1993-1997, then a saxophone quartet that student Julien Berger thought up while in bed one night, the symphonic suite from “Star Wars: The Force Awakens,” and finally El Camino Real.

Sisters Bonnie and Justine Campbell were on clarinet while parents Bob and Heike watched from the audience. Being in the string symphony “taught our daughters about teamwork and being part of something bigger,” Bob Campbell said. “It helps set them up for success later on,” he added.

Chris Kincaid agreed, as he went in to watch with some friends who had children in the symphony. “It rounds out your secondary education to take music, connects art, math and history,” he said.

Don Wogaman, who has spent much time fundraising for the string symphony, was supportive of all the band’s achievements. “This is a great bunch of kids,” he said. O’Toole, who wrote “It’s Just a Phase,” has a master’s degree from George Mason University and has written music for well-known bands such as “The President’s Own,” U.S. Marine Band, the Kansas State University Wind Ensemble and the Singapore Wind Symphony.

Jessica Laudie, 16, plays the flute, and noted the layers in the new song. “The meter, it changed a lot which made it hard, and that made it special,” she said.

Fundamental Freedom to Choose to Marry

Virginia is historically slow in extending rights.

In 1967, Virginia was one of 16 states that banned interracial marriage and had criminal penalties for violators.

Mildred Jeter, an African-American woman, and Richard Loving, a white man, were married in 1958, were convicted and banished from living in Virginia for 25 years to avoid serving a one-year prison sentence. On June 12, 1967, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Loving v. Virginia, overturned the convictions of Mildred and Richard Loving, declaring the ban on interracial marriage unconstitutional.

Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote the opinion: "Marriage is one of the 'basic civil rights of man,' fundamental to our very existence and survival. ... To deny this fundamental freedom on so unsupportable a basis as the racial classifications embodied in these statutes, classifications so directly subversive of the principle of equality at the heart of the Fourteenth Amendment, is surely to deprive all the State's citizens of liberty without due process of law. The Fourteenth Amendment requires that the freedom of choice to marry not be restricted by invidious racial discriminations. Under our Constitution, the freedom to marry, or not marry, a person of another race resides with the individual, and cannot be infringed by the State."

This week, Gov. Terry McAuliffe celebrated Loving Day, June 12, with a new state historical marker to commemorate the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in the landmark case. The dedication marked the 50th anniversary of the 1967 ruling that overturned all state laws restricting interracial marriage. The ceremony was held at the former site of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, where the case was heard before it reached the U.S. Supreme Court. The Lovings' story is told in a movie of the same name.

On Valentine's Day, 2014, Judge Arenda Wright Allen, ruled that Virginia's ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional. In the opening of her order, Allen quotes Mildred Loving in a statement she made in 2007 on the 40th anniversary of Loving v. Virginia:

"We made a commitment to each other in our love and lives, and now had the legal commitment, called marriage, to match. Isn't that what marriage is? ... Today's young people realize that if someone loves someone they have a right to marry. Surrounded as I am now by wonderful children and grandchildren, not a day goes by that I don't think of Richard and our love, our right to marry, and how much it meant to me to have that freedom to marry the person precious to me, even if others thought he was the 'wrong kind of person' for me to marry. I believe all Americans, no matter their race, no matter their sex, no matter their sexual orientation, should have that same freedom to marry. Government has no business imposing some people's religious beliefs over others. ... I support the freedom to marry for all. That's what Loving, and loving, are all about."

Judge Allen's written decision begins: "A spirited and controversial debate is underway regarding who may enjoy the right to marry in the United States of America. America has pursued a journey to make and keep our citizens free. This journey has never been easy, and at times has been painful and poignant. The ultimate exercise of our freedom is choice. Our Declaration of Independence recognizes that 'all men' are created equal. Surely this means all of us. While ever-vigilant for the wisdom that can come from the voices of our voting public, our courts have never long tolerated the perpetuation of laws rooted in unlawful prejudice. One of the judiciary's noblest endeavors is to scrutinize laws that emerge from such roots.

"Plaintiffs assert that the restriction on their freedom to choose to marry the person they love infringes on the rights to due process and equal protection guaranteed to them under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. These challenges are well-taken. ...

"The Court is compelled to conclude that Virginia's Marriage Laws unconstitutionally deny Virginia's gay and lesbian citizens the fundamental freedom to choose to marry."

Fairfax County Celebrates its 275th Anniversary

BY JOHN C. COOK
SUPERVISOR (R-BRADDOCK)

It seems no matter where you go in Fairfax County, you can't go more than a few hundred yards without finding something of historic or cultural significance. Fairfax County is rich in nearly all historic eras — be it colonial, civil war, or 20th century, and played a significant role in each. As the supervisor for the Braddock District, I want to make sure all of my constituents — and all county residents — take full advantage of this. This year marks the county's 275th Anniversary, and on June 17, Fairfax County will hold a commemorative celebration honoring just how far the county has come.

On June 17, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. in the area surrounding the Historic Fairfax Courthouse located in central Fairfax (4000 Chain Bridge Road), Fairfax County's 275th Anniversary Celebration and Historic Fair will take place. The celebration will include historically themed family-friendly activities and demonstrations, live musical performances, and more than 80 historical organizations and attractions showcasing their sites and neighborhoods. The county's Fire and Rescue Department will display antique vehicles, and attendees can enjoy other historical displays covering events such as the Revolutionary War as well as World War I and II. Kids can enjoy a petting zoo and other fun, interactive activities.

As a special treat, the actual Lord and Lady Fairfax will be attending the celebration as our honored guests all the way from England. The Lord and Lady Fairfax will also personally present the annual Lord and Lady Fairfax Awards to their 2017 recipients. The Lord and Lady Fairfax Awards recognize community members for their volunteer work and civic engagement.

Two residents are chosen from each magisterial district by each supervisor.

In addition to this visit from abroad, attendees can enjoy meals from a variety of on-site food trucks, and the event will feature speeches from county officials and guests throughout the day. Parking is available at the Historical Festival on the Safety Complex; Parking Garage B (10550 Page Ave, Fairfax). There is no rain date for this event. This is a rare, and sure to be special, event so please consider taking part in the festivities. For more information about this celebration, and to register for other events observing the county's 275th Anniversary Celebration, you can go online to www.fxva.com/275/.

I hope you will attend the County's 275th Anniversary Celebration this Saturday, and help fill your summer with not only ways to explore the county you call home, but also gather with friends and neighbors for activities that are culturally enriching. You are sure to find something about your county that you didn't know before.

Most importantly, I hope you enjoy a safe and happy summer with all of your friends and neighbors.

Albo Retirement Prompts Hotly Contested House Race

Democrat Kathy Tran to face Republican Lolita Mancheno-Smoak.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

On paper, the 42nd District in the House of Delegates is a solidly Democratic district. Terry McAuliffe won the district in 2013 with 50 percent of the vote for governor. Mark Warner won the district in 2014 with 50 percent of the vote for the U.S. Senate. And Hillary Clinton swamped Donald Trump in the district last year, securing 57 percent of the vote. But Republicans have held the district for decades because of the popular longtime incumbent, Del. Dave Albo (R-42), who fashioned himself as a “Northern Virginia Republican.”

But Albo’s last-minute decision against seeking reelection in May has now opened up the seat, which is at the top of the list for Democrats seeking to pick up Republican-held seats in districts that Clinton won last year.

This week, Democrats selected Kathy Tran as their candidate for the general election. Tran, who immigrated as a refugee from Vietnam with her family as a child, spent years working in a variety of positions in the federal government.

She beat longtime social worker Tillie Blanding, who came out of retirement to run for the House of Delegates. Tran joins an unprecedented number of first-time candidates running as Democratic candidates for the House of Delegates, a political landscape largely shaped by the controversial election of Trump last year.

“They are farmers and teachers, law enforcement officers and stay-at-home parents, veterans and small business owners,” said House Democratic Leader David Toscano and Caucus Chairwoman Charniele Herring after the primary. “More than half are women, about a quarter are people of color, and at least six are members of the LGBTQ community.”

The Republicans decided to select their candidate in a caucus rather than a primary, choosing engineer Lolita Mancheno-Smoak over two other candidates. Mancheno-Smoak won with 45 percent of the vote against two challengers, Steve Adragna and Michael Drobnis. She’s a familiar face to voters in Fairfax County because she waged an unsuccessful campaign for the School Board in 2011.

“Lolita has been an active member of our party and more importantly an active member of the community for many years,” said Republican House Speaker Bill Howell after the caucus. “She’s been an advocate for education and business, and will be a worthy successor to Del. Dave Albo.”

Making Sandwiches for Martha’s Table

Sydenstricker United Methodist community in Springfield comes together to help less fortunate.

BY THOMAS KENDZIORA
THE CONNECTION

When dozens of volunteers showed up at the Sydenstricker United Methodist Church cafeteria on Wednesday morning, they were surrounded by some 500 loaves of bread, 80 pounds of cheese and scattered tubs of ham and a homemade peanut butter and jelly blend.

Two hours later, the room was empty, and roughly 4,000 sandwiches were on their way to the homeless in Washington, D.C.

The sandwiches are first donated to Martha’s Table, which distributes them in vans throughout the district. This mission partnership has been going for over three decades, and it continues to grow.

When the project started, 250 sandwiches was considered a good day, longtime volunteer Rob Shafer said. That number is nearly 20 times larger now, and with the group convening once a month, the donation total for 2016 nearly eclipsed 50,000 sandwiches.

“It’s grown as I’ve learned more and more about it, and being able to see where the sandwiches go and who the people are that are being fed, it makes it that much more exciting,” senior pastor Don Jamison said.

The current group is led by Mike Robertson, who’s been involved for roughly a decade. All he did was open bread at first, but now he’s in charge of getting everything ready for Wednesday; this involves roughly three hours of preparation on Tuesday before everyone comes together.

“[My favorite part is] the challenge of having everything ready for Wednesday morning, getting enough bread and enough meat and enough supplies to sustain this for two or three hours,” Robertson said.

The 40 or 50 volunteers on hand are there for a variety of reasons—religious, social, moral, etc. But everyone who shows up on the first Wednesday of each month is ready to make an impact.

“A lot of times, groups like this don’t get the attention ... but it’s small groups like this that make a difference,” volunteer Mary Susan Searlin said.

At 10 a.m., all sandwich-making stops for a prayer. Many volunteers cited increased involvement in their church as one of their motives to participate in sandwich days.

Remodeling a Home in Stages

David Foster helps clients design in phases, and at their own pace.

BY JOHN BYRD

Kevin and Priscilla Kelleher have occupied their 5,200-square-foot Springfield home since 1992 when they bought it new. At the time, the builder provided an array of finish work choices. The couple selected the Corian kitchen counter surfaces, a food preparation island of their preferred size and style. The flooring, cabinet-facings, window styles were all a testament to personal taste.

Situated on nearly an acre that backs into the woods, this is the spacious home where the couple raised two daughters who have subsequently fled the nest.

Great memories.

But 18 years is a long time to be regularly re-assessing the same floor plan, contemplating the same unyielding look.

"It was when the appliances started failing that we thought seriously about remodeling our kitchen," said Kevin Kelleher who retired from the Army several years ago and now works in government. "My wife eventually decided she really didn't like the Corian countertops. There was a wasted space and dead corners; yet not enough storage. We also wanted more natural light, and better views of our pretty wooded setting."

Of course, such observations typically describe the beginning of a process that entails much research, a regime of decisions. But, more importantly: where do you turn for ideas that will give definition and focus to a collage of emerging preferences, images and wish-lists?

It was easy for the Kellehers, who turned to David Foster.

Foster, president of Foster Remodeling Solutions in Lorton, had finished the Kellehers' 1,500-square-foot basement in 2003. The positive experience had left the couple with the sense that they had found their "go to" guy for home improvements; better yet, Foster's process had actually gotten easier to implement in the intervening years.

"Fifteen years ago, we were offered sketches of designs for the lower level," Kelleher said. "Today, Foster's designers model three dimensional space on CADD system software. This allows you to instantly assess different views of the room you're remodeling so you can clearly visualize how each perspective will affect the whole. It's a great tool for space planning."

Which — combined with a wholly new interior design scheme — was exactly the kind of the improvements the Kellehers were seeking.

In fact, the footprint of the kitchen, breakfast nook, family room, foyer and, even, the grand stairs at the entrance retain their existing measurements down to the centimeter. It's only the positioning of key components, their design, their storage capacity and their aesthetics that have changed — and dramatically.

“Inches really count when you’re renovating a kitchen floorplan,” said Dory Clemens, the Foster architect who designed the project. “This was largely about making better use of existing space while introducing a whole new interior design style.”

For instance:

- ❖ Removing a mostly unused desk built in an interior wall elevation and shortening the wall by 9 inches freed-up 32 square feet of floor space, allowing designers to nearly double the size of the kitchen’s food prep island and dining counter.

- ❖ Space-wasting counter surfaces on two walls were replaced with a curvilinear design that emphasizes the easy-flowing circulation of the new plan. Wider, taller (42-inch) cabinets increased storage capacity by 40 percent.

- ❖ A seldom-open casement window was replaced with a 4.5-foot-by-4.5-foot divided light picture window that dramatically improves available light while offering spot-on views of the leafy backyard.

A comparatively new flooring material, the wood pattern is ink-jetted into the tile, offering the warmth of wood — but with much greater durability.

Meanwhile, ceilings and cabinet facings are bright white; the wall — a color that West Pointer Kelleher describes as “Cadet Grey.” Throughout the play of lights and darks is further developed — like a three-dimensional checkerboard.

The island base is a resonant walnut-color; the quartz surfaces are vanilla-hued Cambria Berwin finished with an OGE edge.

Clemens designed a quintessenza backsplash that combines gray (genesei) with white (bianco). The traditional raised-panel cabinet facings, in turn, lend a crisp linearity amid muted tones.

In the foyer the game of contrast continues. The staircase balustrade and all risers and treads are bright white, but there are now black iron spindles in place of their wooden predecessors.

Since the staircase and living room rise two levels, the Kellehers wanted to reduce the monotonous crush of white walls disappearing up into a distant ceiling.

“We wanted more definition around the stairway, and in what one generally sees looking up in a big room.”

To this request, Clemens introduce a shadow box effect by adding white picture frame molding to walls that have been repainted grey.

“It draws your eyes up,” said Kevin Kelleher, which makes the space feel more proportional and balanced.” He added: “Foster’s lead carpenter, Brian, is really a master at this kind of detailing. It’s hard to see how anyone else could have done as well.”

Spontaneous Confusion

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Since I have some alone-time; just me and the cats, I thought I'd try to write my next column a few weeks ahead and take a bit of the time-sensitive deadline pressure off. Not that meeting my weekly commitment has been too much of a problem over the years (nearly 20 in fact), still, I thought I'd put pen to paper, literally, and see what comes out.

So far what has come out is that I'm having creative difficulty writing something that's to be published two weeks hence. It seems/feels that writing in the present about something to be published in the future is awkward, sort of. It's somewhere between wishful thinking and a prediction. Neither of which is characteristic of who I am or how I think. I guess my writing nature is that I like to react to reality and then address it in print, rather than anticipate it and then respond to it. Typically I prefer to be current in my thinking and honest in my prose. Apparently, I have nothing else to share so trying to explain that void is the semi point of this column.

And I suppose, without being too self-indulgent, that if a stage IV cancer patient — yours truly, who shares everything with you regular readers; highs, lows and in-betweens, has nothing of particular interest to share, perhaps it's because I'm experiencing a comparatively easy fortnight between 24-hour urine collection, pre-chemotherapy lab work, every-five-week infusions, and quarterly scans followed by my quarterly face-to-face appointment with my oncologist, so I have minimal cancer-related business to preoccupy my life. It's almost as if I'm unencumbered by my underlying problem: non-small cell lung cancer. And I have to admit, it's a heck of a feeling to not have my conscious and unconscious minding my business and reminding me that I have an incurable form of cancer. Which of course I never need reminding of; as opposed to ending a sentence with a preposition which obviously I do need to be reminded of.

Getting back to the substance — if you can even call it that, of this column: my difficulty writing weeks ahead of publication. What's puzzling about this difficulty is how uncharacteristic of my personality it is. I am not spontaneous. I rarely do anything spur of the moment other than getting off the couch, changing the channel on the television, switching radio stations in the car, deciding what to wear, eating/drinking/going to the bathroom and/or miscellaneous other household-type duties and responsibilities. Yet the problem I'm experiencing now — related to my June 14 column, is that since I'm not being spontaneous, I'm unable to create?

How can that be a problem? That's who I am all the time. I do everything in advance — of consequence, that is. Maybe I'm making too much out of nothing? (Oh, really.) Maybe I'm simply stuck in my head and need to get out of my own way. Not that I make mountains out of mole hills but sometimes, and I've told by my oncologist that I can blame my having cancer for everything, I might not think so clearly and get bogged down emotionally. Ergo, I will lay the blame for this column and it's lack of substance, on having "terminal" cancer.

Cancer doesn't work in mysterious ways (well, perhaps it does to researchers), it works in destructive ways: physically, mentally and spiritually. Logical becomes illogical — and vice versa; rational becomes irrational — and vice versa; and manageable becomes unmanageable — and vice versa. For cancer patients/survivors, expecting that one's life will go merrily along is totally unrealistic. Expecting the unexpected is the path of least resistance.

This week's column/dilemma is simply another example/reminder of how cancer intrudes and deludes and affects those of us who naively thought we would be unaffected.
