The suspect is described as black, in his 40s, about 5-feet-10-inches tall, and approximately 180 pounds with no facial hair, according to police.

The police urge the public to call 703-691-2131 with any information.

Help Support the Shepherd’s Center

The Locker Room restaurant in Falls Church will be sponsoring a fundraiser for The Shepherd’s Center of McLean-Arlington-Falls.
A different sort of performing arts festival will be front-and-center at 1st Stage in Tysons. Featuring some of the nation’s most celebrated solo performing artists, The Logan Festival of Solo Performance at 1st Stage is the first of its kind in the region. The Festival will run for two-weeks of performances, workshops, discussions, and events.

Curated by Alex Levy, artistic director, 1st Stage, The Logan Festival has support from the Riva & David Logan Foundation.

“Although solo shows pop up from time to time in theater seasons in the D.C. area there is no festival that is bringing the country’s great solo performers to the area,” said Levy. “I really wanted to share with our audience how beautiful the work being done around the country is. “I wanted to be able to share the great work happening around the country with our region,” added Levy. “I hope our audiences come and see all of the different ways the solo performer art form can be used. It is powerful and intimate theater.”

The Festival will include three multi-performance solo shows. They are “Hick: A Love Story,” “Empanada for a Dream,” and “The Gun Show.” Each of the three productions runs approximately 90 minutes with no intermission.

“Hick: A Love Story” is by Terry Baum and directed by Carolyn Myers. A one-woman show, featuring Terry Baum, the show based on Eleanor Roosevelt’s letters to pioneer journalist Lorena Hickok exploring the romantic relationship between the two women.

“Empanada for a Dream” is written by and features Juan Francisco Villa. It is a portrait of family and neighborhood set against a dark secret that destroys it all. It’s about growing up by getting out, then returning home.

“The Gun Show” by E.M. Lewis and directed by Shawn Lee, features Vin Shambry. The performance draws on the playwright’s personal history with firearms. It examines the gun control debate including how a diverse nation searches for mutual understanding.

1st Stage aims to be a cultural hub for the community reaching beyond theatrical productions to host professional musicians, orchestras and visual artists. The theater company has received not only Washington area Helen Hayes Awards, but an American Theatre Wing National Theatre Company Award as well.

“Each of the shows in The Logan Festival of Solo Performance is compelling and theatrical and powerful. All approach the art form in completely different ways,” said Levy.
House Paint and Risk Takers at McLean Project for the Arts

The McLean Project for the Arts show Strictly Painting opens at new venue.

BY EDEN BROWN
The Connection

I
f 1446 Chain Bridge Road were not in a strip mall next to the Giant supermarket in McLean, but down some sandy road to the beach in East Hampton, N.Y. or Easton, Md., ...then you could imagine it this way: “the McLean Project for the Arts inhabits a new summer home it has decorated with stunning modern canvasses by risk-taking painters. The other night, guests milled about the home, sipping wine and admiring the art, which simmered with the sophistication of nearby New York or Richmond...”

The show is called Strictly Painting 11 and features Arlington and Washington, D.C. artists as well as Charlottesville area painters. Some of the paintings in the show are rich with color; some rely more on design and limit the color to grey, black, and white. All of the exhibited work makes one want to “meet the people who live in this summer home” – the painters – and those who created this oasis of modern art squeezed in between a Turkish restaurant and the CVS.

At the opening reception for the show on June 15, people came in to sip wine and do just that. This juried biennial exhibition of the work of artists from the Mid-Atlantic region explores the medium of painting. The Juror who elected the entries is Anne Reeve, Assistant Curator at Glenstone, a private museum near Washington, D.C., devoted to modern and contemporary art.

One artist, Sally Kauffmann, stood in front of her oil on canvas painting called “On and On,” a vibrant scene at the outdoor concert series in Washington, D.C., last summer. She did a series of three paintings showing people outdoors at the concert, talking and taking in the music – it’s a loud, boisterous canvas that reminds one of the Bal du Moulin de la Galette or the Dejeuner des Canotiers by Renoir, so full of life and color that you can hear the conversation and laughter.

It’s not an impressionist at all but a lovely blend of abstract and representational art. Two of the series were purchased by the city of Washington for its art in public spaces program.

AT THE SHOW, visitors can treat themselves to modern art reminiscent of the fundamental life objects of Claes Oldenburg, the reclaimed house paint can lids, “The Colors of Our Lives,” by Steven Dobbin, actually very soothing to look at – and the eggs on toast with ketchup bottle, “Match Enemy” by Jenny Walton. “Torrent” by Paul Hrusa is a beautifully executed natural rush.

Sue Grace had a painting elected for the juried show, with an intriguing title, “Injury and Pardon.” Like many of Grace’s paintings, it has a wonderfully muted palette of colors, and looking at it makes one feel allowed in on an intimate moment of emotion. Grace’s art is about the domain of abstract versus figurative. She accentuates the flatness of the picture plane by emphasizing marks or patterns and at the same time renders a recognizable shape that can tell a story.

Grace said, “In this painting I was looking at the notion of forgiveness: how that word gets framed. For me, painting is a fascinating battleground where abstraction combats the figurative.” Grace is an Arlington painter who has been painting full time for 10 years: re-emerging after an earlier art career and raising a family.

Nancy Sauser, the McLean Project for the Arts executive director said most of the work she shows is from the mid-Atlantic region. The summer exhibit was physically set up by Jen Lillis who is the gallery manager and did the lighting for the show in its new, temporary space, while renovations on the McLean Project for the Arts take place. The show will be open to the public from June 15-Aug. 12, 2017.

Killing the Poor to Pay Millionaires

Even employer provided insurance would suffer; coverage caps and exclusions of pre-existing conditions could return.

The U.S. Senate bill to repeal the Affordable Care Act would take more than $600 billion (yes with a B) from poor children, poor elders and people with disabilities to give a tax cut to people who make more than $200,000 a year. Households with income of $1 million, would gain $50,000 in tax cuts per year. It is a massive transfer of wealth to the wealthiest households in America taken from the most vulnerable and neediest people. It would lead to more sick people and thousands of preventable deaths every year.

While much of the damage is done by massive cuts to Medicaid, affecting poor children, people with disabilities and most people in nursing homes, some of the changes will result in damage to the quality of insurance for those who get their insurance from their employers as well.

What could go wrong?

- Millions of people lose their health insurance — 22 million fewer would have health insurance by 2026 according to the Congressional Budget Office analysis.
- Loss of coverage for pre-existing conditions, including cancer survivors, people who had transplants, people with asthma, arthritis, high cholesterol, hypertension, obesity, mental health issues, ADD, etc.
- States could opt out of the law’s essential health benefits measure, which requires insurers to cover 10 main benefits, including hospitalization, prescription drugs and other services. That is, companies could sell health insurance that wouldn’t actually be health insurance.

Would Virginia be a state that opts out? Quite likely.

- Ending annual and lifetime coverage caps would also impact people who get health insurance from their employers and the private insurance market. For example, a serious accident or an illness that requires surgery or bone marrow transplants could put one of us over the coverage cap.
- Medicaid pays schools publics for many services for special education students, but the Senate bill removes schools from eligible Medicaid providers, costing Virginia an estimated $40 million annually; $3 million in Fairfax County; $2 million in the City of Alexandria.
- $800 billion plus in cuts to Medicaid paid the funding for most people who are currently in nursing homes at risk. Many of these are people who were middle class and but outlived their savings and coverage.
- In Virginia, the proposed changes to Medicaid would cost the state $1.4 billion over seven years.
- Medicaid pays for much of the fight against opioid addiction, including treatment. Cuts would be devastating to efforts to counter the wave of overdose deaths and other effects of addiction.
- Coverage for mental health treatment, including addiction treatment, is threatened both by cuts to Medicaid and by changes in the private insurance market.
- There will be greater need for Medicaid over time. More seniors will be poor, as fewer people who are retiring have pensions or adequate retirement savings. The demand for nursing home beds will be increasing as the population ages.

If a version of the Senate bill were to pass, the results will be harmful to tens of millions of Americans. Call your senators. Virginia’s U.S. Senators, Tim Kaine and Mark Warner, are both Democrats in the forefront of pushing back against this bill. But let them know you expect them to do the extraordinary to hold this up. Call the senate listed below and tell them to vote against it.

Ask family and friends to call their senators today.

If you have family or friends who live in West Virginia, Louisiana, Maine, Nevada, Alaska, or Ohio, their calls are especially important. Senators Shelley Capito (R-WV); Bill Cassidy (R-LA); Susan Collins (R-ME); Dean Heller (R-NV); Lisa Murkowski (R-AK); Rob Portman (R-OH) are among those reported to be possible opponents of this proposal.

The U.S. Capitol Switchboard number is 202-224-3121, and a switchboard operator will connect you directly with the Senate office you request.

November General Elections

With the conclusion of the political party primaries last week the general election is now tued up for Nov. 7. There were some surprises coming out of the Democratic and Republican primaries. Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam easily won the Democratic primary to be the nominee for governor even though there was discussion beforehand that polls indicated a tight race. Polling for primaries is notorious for being inaccurate because with a typically light turn out the universe of potential voters is almost impossible to determine. Former one-term U.S. Rep. Tom Perriello has a write in offer and will hopefully stay on the scene for future opportunities. Although the term “establishment” was grossly over used in describing Ralph Northam, his success in the state senate plus his active role as lieutenant governor made him well known and greatly admired throughout the state.

Justin Fairfax gained everyone’s admiration after a primary loss to Attorney General Mark Herring four years ago led to his active campaigning during the interim time making him well known for this primary. He was also well known for his work as an attorney.

If you review the areas where Ralph Northam did well and compare them with where Justin Fairfax was strongest, you create a strong statewide team that will be nearly impossible to defeat. Attorney General Mark Herring was not challenged in a primary and will be on the ballot to succeed him in November. There is no one limitation with the attorney general and the lieutenant governor as there is with the governor.

The greatest surprise of the primaries may have been on the Republican side to pick a candidate for governor. Ed Gillespie who has been mentioned for years as the next Republican governor of Virginia barely got through the primary with a shockingly strong showing by Corey Stewart who is known for his anti-immigrant work in Prince William County and for campaigning with a Confederate flag. He has the distinction of being so over the top that he was fired by the Trump campaign. Turnout was especially low in the Republican primary, and Stewart was just over a percentage point in taking out Gillespie. It will be interesting to see if the people who voted for Stewart will vote in the general election or decide to stay home.

The Republican primary for lieutenant governor was a slug fest between two state senators with Jill Vogel winning after a mudslinging campaign that left neither candidate looking good.

All 100 seats for the House of Delegates are up for election this fall with a record number of contested elections. Historically it has been difficult to recruit candidates to run for the House of Delegates, but events of the past year have brought forth more candidates than ever before. There was a record number 27 seats where the candidates were determined by the primary because there was so much interest in running. Democrats will certainly pick up seats in the House of Delegates getting closer to shifting or sharing power in that legislative body.

While I am uncontested in my race for the House of Delegates you can still expect to see me campaigning. It is a good way to stay in touch with constituents and to increase turn out for the statewide elections. Expect a busy fall of campaigning leading up to the fall elections in Virginia that will send a signal to the nation as to the public’s reaction to national events.

property owners have withdrawn their rezoning application that sought to redevelop the Old Dominion and Chain Bridge Corner shopping centers in McLean into a combined, mixed-use development.

The preliminary designs for the proposal were first promoted to the public in February. A follow up meeting was held in May, which included revisions after landowners collected community feedback.

McLean Properties, which represents the landowners, filed a proposal for a comprehensive plan amendment and rezoning with the county in April. Unexpectedly, the company sent an email to the Connection and other undisclosed recipients on June 14: “Good morning, Thank you to everyone who attended the Main Street community meetings, visited our website, and shared your questions/comments; we appreciate your input. Unfortunately, we have decided to withdraw our zoning application.”

We are grateful for the time and energy that the McLean Planning Committee, McLean Citizens Association, Supervisor [John Foust’s] office, and county staff put into this project. While we are disappointed that Main Street will not move forward at this time, we remain excited about the future of our community.

Best, McLean Properties”

The email provided no explanation as to why the application was withdrawn.

Neither Betsy Frantz, a spokesperson for McLean Properties, nor Vidal Sadaka, who addressed community members on behalf of McLean Properties at the community meetings, responded to inquires from the Connection.

“There was a lot of community support for the application and I was surprised and disappointed by McLean Properties’ decision to withdraw it,” Supervisor John Foust said in an email to Dranesville District residents who subscribe to his newsletter. “I am frustrated that the opportunity to implement the Main Street concept is once again delayed,” he added. “However, I realize that no project can move forward without the cooperation of the property owner. Despite this setback, we will continue to encourage and work with landowners to identify and deliver projects that contribute to the re-vitalization goals for the McLean Community Business Center.”

Wearing Orange Won’t Stop Gun Violence

To the Editor:

On June 2 we wore orange for National Gun Violence Awareness Day and in memory of a Chicago teen who was shot and killed in 2012. As a McLean mom of a teenager, I can just look at the daily headlines to know gun violence can strike anyone and anywhere and this is a scary reality.

Federal data published in late 2015 showed in Virginia, along with 20 other states and the District of Columbia, deaths by guns outnumbered deaths by auto accidents. Here in McLean the NOVA Firearms shop stands less than 100 feet from Franklin Sherman Elementary School which is a location which defies logic. Legislators, for the most part, have failed to take a more common sense approach to gun ownership.

There has been one bright spot with Virginia Delegate Kathleen Murphy’s tireless work on legislation to prevent gun violence. In 2016, her bill HB1391 was signed into law which prohibited people under a permanent protective order for family abuse from possessing a firearm.

I am saddened that Murphy’s further efforts have been blocked with HB2044, which expands on HB1391, languishing in committee in the Virginia General Assembly. This bill would close the gap to bar people under other protective orders from accessing a gun. It should be noted that Murphy’s bill HB422 to keep gun shops out of school zones is stuck in committee too.

I implore policymakers to co-sponsor Delegate Murphy’s bills.

Infusing is Rarely Amusing

By KENNETH H. LURIE

Four weeks out of every five, it appears as if I don’t have cancer. Fortunately, I don’t look the part. Nor do I act the part – in my opinion. However, there is one week out of every five when I feel like I am reduced to a mere semantic aside: the week after my chemotherapy infusion, when eating is a particular challenge. The look, feel, taste and thought of food and/or drink is nearly impossible to swallow – literally and figuratively. And though I’m not in any pain during this treatment, the chemical penalty weak, I am compromised nonetheless.

Friends and family who are familiar with my “normal” eating habits (I’d order off the children’s menu if I could) have joked that since I’m unable to eat any of the usual and customary Kenny selections, perhaps I should try eating foods that I would never select: Brussels sprouts, grapefruit, tuna fish in a can, fresh fish on a platter, all condiments other than mayonnaise, all cheeses and a million other foods that you probably love. Plain and boring is how I roll (a potato roll is my preference even). The problem is that when I’m post chemo, nothing satiates: salty, sweet or “snacky,” hot, cold or medium rare, slow cooked, quick cooked, homemade, made or restaurant-ready. It’s all merely a variation on a theme where my back, stomach, my head tilts back and down and my eating mind says “no.” It’s been this way for about two and a half years now: And though I don’t lack the least bit of enthusiasm, I am overwhelmed by these week-long post-chemotherapy eating fits and non-starts. Naturally I have discussed this side effect with my oncologist. When asked how long this situation lasts, my seven-ish day struggle seems average compared to other patients he treats who are infused with the same chemotherapy drug as I am. Apparently, there are other patients where the eating challenges last even longer than mine. And since there’s nothing to be prescribed/recommended to affect this eating problem/lack of outcome, all I can do is live with the consequences of my treatment. Live being the operative word. So unless I stop treatment, this eating challenge will persist, presumably. (Although, there’s scant clinical information regarding side effects on stage IV non-small cell lung cancer patients still living after eight years and four months as we’re a patient population that doesn’t much exist. We’re not exactly unicorns, but neither are we ponies at the Fair.)

Fairness – and normalcy for me was officially gone on Feb. 27, 2009, the date of my diagnosis and the initial Team Louie meeting with my oncologist. But so what. As of that date, my perspective/orientation became about living forward, not recriminating backward. Sure, the present was important, but the future was non-important, and the past, well, it had passed. No more could I afford to consider who, what, when, where, why and how I am in this predicament. My goal was to remain positive, take the bad with the good, survive until the next drug approval by the FDA (which there have been half a dozen in the last two years specifically for the treatment of lung cancer) and try not to impose problems on anyone else. Which I believe I’ve succeeded in doing. Oh sure, I’ve imposed myself on you regular readers, but does that not make me seem like I have been my experiences. Considering the context, I’d like to think I’ve shared, not self-indulged. Moreover, I’d like to think we’re all far too busy for the experience. I know I am.
Wishing you a safe and happy 4th of July weekend!
