THE CONNECTION

The campaign for governor is a bit like a Rorschach test as the candidates close in on the final stretch toward Election Day. Democrat Ralph Northam and Republican Ed Gillespie are presenting a series of inkblots to voters about everything from the health of the economy to the value of Confederate statues.

How voters feel about President Donald Trump and the Affordable Care Act may end up playing more of a role deciding the fate of the election than all the carefully crafted policy proposals and press releases.

“The critiques that one is leveling at the other that aren’t policy oriented are designed to undermine the opponent’s base but also energize their own base,” said Quentin Kidd, professor at Christopher Newport University. “But while they do have to play politics and critique each other, they’ve got to talk about policy, and they’ve got to talk about the things they would do to solve problems and make life better for Virginians.”

Polls show Northam holding a steady but slight lead since March, the last time Gillespie was leading in a statewide poll of voters. One of the most recent polls was conducted by the University of Mary Washington earlier this month, which shows Northam edging out a 5 percent win over his rival — a lead that’s so slight it was within the margin of error. Polls have Northam crushing Gillespie in vote-rich Northern Virginia. But they also show Gillespie leading among independent voters and holding strong in conservative parts of the state.

“You see a lot of undecided voters, which means both campaigns have a lot of work to do between now and November,” said Stephen Farnsworth, professor at the University of Mary Washington. “When you take out the portions of the electorate who will reflexively vote for a Democrat or a Republican, you are left with people who are going to be motivated by community-level issues.”

THE DEBATE in Northern Virginia on Sept. 19 illustrated the fickle nature of Rorschach politics in the age of Trump as both candidates tried to shape the narrative. Sponsored by the Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce and moderated by Chuck Todd of NBC’s “Meet the Press,” the televised debate was held at Capital One headquarters in McLean on Sept. 19. Panelists included Julie Carey of NBC4, Aaron Gilchrist of NBC4 and Mark Rozell of George Mason University.

Several times during the debate, Gillespie rattled off a series of data points about sluggish job growth and stories of people leavphasizing lowering the unemployment rate and a series of corporations that have moved their headquarters to the commonwealth. During one point in the debate, Northam turned to Gillespie and said all his trash-talking about the Virginia economy could prevent Amazon from setting up shop in Virginia.

“Right now, Ed, we are having negotiations with Amazon — 50,000 jobs,” Northam said to Gillespie. “Amazon doesn’t want to hear from people like you, especially if you want to be the next governor, that we are doing poorly in Virginia.”

CONFEDERATE STATUES are creating an emotional flashpoint in the campaign, a disagreement between the candidates highlighted by the violent clashes that erupted in Charlottesville after white supremacists marched across the campus of the University of Virginia chanting Nazi slogans and holding tiki torches. Gillespie said the statues should stay in place with some added context, and he called for adding a statue of Virginia’s first black governor to the state Capitol. Northam said local communities ing Virginia to move to other states. His solution to the perceived weakness is a 10 percent reduction in the individual income tax rate, a proposal that would cost more than $1 billion over the next five years.

“We have tended to put a lot of focus on what I call whale hunting — trying to get a Fortune 100 company to move lock stock and barrel into Virginia,” said Gillespie after the debate. “And I’m all for it. We need to make a run at Amazon, and we’re going to. But that can’t be the singular focus of our economic development agenda and vision.”

Northam criticized Gillespie’s plan as a tax cut for the wealthy, a proposal that would blow a billion-dollar size hole in the budget and crowd out spending for roads and schools. Instead, he said he would like to continue on the path of current Gov. Terry McAuliffe’s “New Virginia Economy,” em-

CIF Honors Three Leaders 110 people attend dinner sponsored by Centreville Immigration Forum.

BY STEVE HIBBARD

About 110 people, including local politicians and VIPs, attended the third annual Centreville Immigration Forum (CIF) Dinner on Friday, Sept. 22, at the International Country Club in Chantilly. While guests dined on beef, salmon, or veggie ravioli, and drank from an open bar, the evening celebrated three individuals who have made contributions to the immigrant community.

The honorees included Kofi Dennis, a Ghanaian teacher and drummer; Diana Katz, who leads a host of local philanthropies and nonprofits, including Giving Circle of Hope, NOVIE, Fairfax Rides, and Computer Core; and Mukit Hossain (now deceased), who was a telecommunications executive, philanthropist, and political activist. Walter Tejada, former chair of the Arlington County Board of Supervisors, served as master of ceremonies for the evening.

After coming from Puerto Rico, Katz has worked to help improve the lives of people in the community. She is a founder of the Giving Circle of Hope Foundation and Empowered Women International. She was the driving force behind NOVA Rides that provides transportation for the elderly, and has Hossain (posthumous award) was a telecommunications executive in Northern Virginia and, after the Sept. 11 attacks, he urged Muslims to become more engaged in community service. He modeled this by working with Jewish and other faith groups on a variety of causes, including organizing food and clothing drives for the poor in Herndon, and using his organizing and analytical skills to speak out for day laborers. Center (the HOW Center), and advocated for immigrants in Loudoun and Prince William counties. He provided expertise for Centreville Immigration Forum during its beginning.

Katz said: "I am thrilled because this is the first time that I get an award that is for me personally as opposed to my group, which is the Giving Circle of Hope. And also to get it from these people who are doing such amazing work with the most vulnerable of our citizens and noncitizens. So this

'The Type of Business We Want to Flourish'

Northern Virginia's first, self-serve brewery opens.

BY BONNIE HOBBS

Imagine a new, local craft brewery that's a mom-and-pop operation with modern technology. It features a self-serve beer wall allowing customers to pay for only what they pour. It also pays its employees competitive wages and donates tips to charity.

Meet Ono Brewing Co., 4520 Daly Drive in Chantilly. Owned by Cyndi and Scott Hoffman of Oak Hill, it opened Sept. 1, but had its official grand opening last Wednesday, Sept. 20, on the couple's 20th anniversary. She's a former teacher and he's an Army veteran and a former engineer.

"My husband and I always wanted to open a business together," said Cyndi Hoffman. "He wanted something where he could put his engineering skills to good use, as well as his love of home brew. And I had a background in restaurant-managing for 10 years before teaching, so this brings me back to my roots."

The pair met in Florida while attending college, later moving to Hawaii, where Scott was stationed at Schofield Barracks. Cyndi's mother is a native Hawaiian, so the Hoffmans learned Hawaiian culture and traditions and enjoyed the island way of life. And that's evident in their brewery. With tropical décor, beach pictures on the wall and Jimmy Buffet music often playing in the background, customers are immediately immersed in Ono's relaxing, Hawaiian vibe. And the name, "Ono," is Hawaiian for "delicious."

Scott Hoffman applied his engineering talents to design the 139-person tasting room and brewery. The tasting room features handcrafted, wooden tables and bars made from wood recycled from 120-year-old homes torn down in the Washington, D.C., area. It also boasts a self-serve beer wall, instead of the usual bar with barglass, full glass or just a taste, paying only for what goes into their glass. They also select 5-ounce taster glasses or 16-ounce pint glasses and may even create their own "flight" of tasters by pouring various beers in several glasses.

Scott Hoffman, who attended brewery school, is also the head brewer. The brewery has three 30-barrel fermenters, so Ono's initial offerings are a pale ale, IPA and wheat beer, along with other tropical creations, including Awapuhi (lemon ginger ale). Coming soon will be a dark brown ale and a coconut brown ale, plus other seasonal

Dire and Urgent

Does current repeal effort set the stage for billions in tax cuts for the wealthiest?

“Dire and urgent.” Those are the words used by U.S. Sen. Mark Warner to describe the need to turn back the most recent attempt to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act.

In addition to repealing and replacing the Affordable Care Act with a plan that would result in chaos, the Graham-Cassidy bill also repeals Medicaid as we know it, Virginia’s senators said in a call with reporters last week.

“Why are they going after Medicaid?” asked U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine. Per capita caps on Medicaid have “nothing to do with the Affordable Care Act.”

The proposed cuts include $243 billion less between 2020 and 2026 for the ACA’s expansion of Medicaid, and cuts to the rest of Medicaid of $175 billion during the same period, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities analysis.

The cuts would grow dramatically in 2027, with nearly $300 billion more in cuts that year alone.

“Why go after Medicaid? Why?” Kaine asked again. Kaine is pretty sure he knows the answer: To generate money for billions in tax cuts for the wealthy.

“Senators who support this [repeal], who think that the Federal government should not be paying for health care for the poor, for the aged, for the disabled, are planning to give this money to the wealthiest Americans in tax cuts. “We must resist that at all costs.”

While the Graham-Cassidy bill appears to lack the votes to pass right now, and many people predict that the Senate will move on from trying to repeal and replace the affordable care act, vigilance is still required. These ongoing efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act also threaten the quality of coverage for everyone by shredding protection on pre-existing conditions, by stripping funding for addiction and mental health treatment in the midst of a nationwide opioid epidemic, by allowing lifetime caps on coverage that would leave the most seriously ill patients without coverage, by undermining what constitutes “essential benefits,” the very definition of what one expects to be covered by insurance.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reforming Obamacare

To the Editor:

Your “Killing the Poor to Pay Millionaires” headline [Editorial, Sept. 20 and June 28] is one of the most demagogic I’ve ever seen. It slanders as killers those who support reforming Obamacare. The article is full of dire predictions associated with the Senate’s current Obamacare reform legislation, but no sources are cited for most of those predictions, leaving the reader to conclude they were pulled from a biased source.

The article turns the definition of “to pay” on its head, implying that to pay someone means taxing less of their hard-earned money out of them. A bitter irony is that “paying millionaires” is exactly where many want to take Obamacare – as a “single-payer” or “Medicare-for-all” system in which the government literally pays for the healthcare of everyone, rich and poor alike.

That kind of system is known for rationing, in which the poor and nearly everyone else get denied access to healthcare via months-long waiting lines (not to mention low-quality care), as is currently the case in socialized systems the world over.

Obamacare is not sustainable in its current form, with the number of health insurers dwindling and premiums skyrocketing, due to onerous government rules.

Far more preferable would be a system involving high-deductible insurance plans coupled with mandatory (and for the poor, government-funded) health savings accounts, prompting citizens to shop around for the best insurer and health care provider to suit their needs — while leaving Medicaid in place. That would force insurers and providers to compete much more aggressively, causing prices to plummet and quality to improve.

The current Obamacare reform legislation is a small step in that direction.

Right Priorities

To the Editor:

Here in Northern Virginia, two major issues threaten our communities on a daily basis: violent gangs like MS-13 and the opioid epidemic. I am proud to see Republican gubernatorial nominee Ed Gillespie putting forward detailed plans to address both of these concerns.

As governor, Ed will be tough on gangs. He will ban sanctuary cities and work with federal law enforcement officers to deport violent criminals who are in Virginia illegally. He will secure funding for the Northern Virginia Regional Gang Task Force and will give our law enforcement officers the support and resources that they need to keep our children safe. He knows that gangs are most harmful to immigrant communities, and he will work to keep all Virginians safe.

And when it comes to the opioid epidemic, Ed also takes a compassionate approach. He understands that addiction is a disease, not a moral failing, and he knows we cannot arrest our way out of the problem. Too many of our fellow Virginians fail to receive the treatment and counsel they need. Ed will make structural changes to fix this. He will educate our children about the danger of drugs early on, and make sure those who do develop drug addictions sent to treatment, not prison.

The goal of our next governor should be to do everything possible to keep Virginia families safe, and I trust Ed to keep my family safe. Join me in supporting him on Nov. 7.

Elite Athlete To Appear in Reality TV Show

Stephanie Huntsman of Clifton stars in “Steve Austin’s Broken Skull Challenge.”

BY STEVE HIBBARD
CENTRE VIEW

Elite athlete Stephanie Huntsman, 28, was born and raised in Clifton/Centreville. At 5-foot-8, 150 pounds, she can dead-lift 285 pounds; back squat 215 pounds; and bench press 105 pounds. She lifts weights in some form or other six days a week, runs between 10-50 miles, and bikes 70 miles a week. Her workouts last anywhere between one and four hours a day for six or seven days.

All of that helped to prepare her for the reality competition TV show called “Steve Austin’s Broken Skull Challenge,” where she is a contestant on Season 5. She’ll be featured in the first female episode (No. 502) next Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 10 p.m., titled “The Women Bring It,” on CMT (Channel 65 on Cox Cable). The show will be repeated on Sunday, Oct. 8 at 2 a.m. The season began on Sept. 26.

“It was a fantastic experience. I would definitely love to go back and play again,” she said. “Everybody there was in fantastic shape. You had elite crossfit athletes, a couple of body-building professionals, and obstacle course racers. Everybody there was an elite athlete.”

She continued: “It was a well-rounded competition. And any athlete who’s going to take home the cake, they’re going to be a great athlete — from contact sports, to agility, to moving around heavy weights.”

The show received over 5,000 applicants for Season 5, and as a competitive obstacle course racer, Huntsman was hand-selected among the eight athletes to set the bar for the upcoming season, competing in head-to-head physical challenges as she represented her hometown.

“Broken Skull Challenge” features host and Hall of Fame professional wrestler Steve “Stone Cold” Austin, who dares the athletes to compete for a chance to win $10,000. The males and females battle it out with each other until only one is left standing. It features an updated and more difficult personal obstacle course called the Skullbuster.

“The show is a reality TV show without the actual reality,” she said. “They pick eight elite athletes who go head-to-head in a bracket-style challenge, single elimination. So each time you’re going up against one other person; then four people are eliminated, and the next round is head-to-head and two people are eliminated.”

They compete in strength and dead-lifting challenges, and the winner of the bracket competes in an obstacle course race called the Skullbuster against the clock. In her show, they were positioned on top of trailers, and they raced to the top, picked up weights and raced down to see who carried them down the fastest.

To prepare for the show, she had been doing competitive obstacle course racing for three years with a lot of heavy carrying, working with sandbags, and crossfit and cross-training.

Huntsman said the part that was the most fun was being around girls with the same body type and same mentality. “That was probably the best part; I walked away from the show with seven new, fantastic friends,” she said.

She got to meet host Steve Austin, she said: “He’s exactly the same in person as he’s on the show. He’s great. He’s super-humble and super-invested in you putting your best effort out there. That’s really refreshing actually.”

While now living in Las Vegas, Huntsman works as a performance medicine therapist for Cirque du Soleil’s seven Vegas shows. She is waiting to hear whether she’ll be going on tour with a show called “Luzia,” where she’ll assist performers with injury prevention, evaluation and emergency coverage.

In addition, the week following the CMT airing, she will be headed to Canada to represent the United States in the Obstacle Course Racing World Championships.

While growing up in Clifton, Huntsman attended Union Mill, Greenbriar West and Willow Springs elementary schools; then the Highland School in Warrenton for middle and high school. For college, she studied athletic training at Penn State; and got her master’s degree in sports medicine from the University of Virginia.

Clips of Season Four are on the website. There are 10 episodes per season.

Plane Pull Supports Special Olympics

The 25th annual Dulles Day Festival and Plane Pull was held at Washington International Airport on Saturday, Sept. 23. Close to 100 teams of 25 competed to see how fast they could pull a full-size jet aircraft 12 feet. The family friendly event is sponsored by the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority and has raised more than $2 million for the Special Olympics Virginia.

Officers from the Fairfax County Police Department participate in the annual plane pull.

ROUNDUPS

Free Carseat Inspections

Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections Thursday, Sept. 28, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed.

Because of time constraints, only the first 35 vehicles arriving on each date will be inspected. That way, inspectors may have enough time to properly instruct the caregiver on the correct use of the child seat. Call 703-814-7000, ext. 5140, to confirm dates and times.

Join 'AI Summit for All'

The Girls Computing League at Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology (TJHSST) is sponsoring an artificial intelligence summit — AI Summit for All — on Saturday, Sept. 30, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The summit is designed for students in grades 8-12 who are interested in learning about artificial intelligence. Computer science or artificial intelligence experience is not required to attend the summit, which is free and will be held at the Marriott Conference Center in Chantilly.

The summit is designed to interest the next generation in AI technology, innovation, and leadership. It is currently being used in the business, finance, and health industries.

Keynote speakers include Teresa Carlson of Amazon; Afua Bruce of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy; Evan Burfield of 1776; and Del. Ken Plum. Presenters on artificial intelligence include Jim Liew of Johns Hopkins University, Tim Hwang of FiscalNote, Lisa Singh and Peter Bock of George Washington University, and Patrick Hall of H2O.ai.

Attendees can register online at <http://aisummit.girlscomputingleague.org/registration/>.

The event is sponsored by Google, Amazon Web Services, and the Spirit of Innovation Challenge. The Marriott Conference Center is located at 14750 Conference Center Drive in Chantilly.

offerings. And the styles on the beer wall will rotate, so customers are enticed to return often to see what's new.

Also setting Ono apart is its commitment to the community. Since employees are paid competitive wages, they don't need to rely on tips. And because customers serve themselves, tipping is optional. But any tips received are donated each month to a different, local charity. For September, Ono's donating to the CIA Officers Memorial Foundation, supporting families of CIA officers killed on active duty.

Cyndi Hoffman said they wanted their brewery in Fairfax County because "there are so few breweries here, compared to Loudoun County. We saw a need we wanted to fill and looked for the proper industrial zoning. This location had everything we wanted – great parking, access to nearby restaurants and proximity to the Dulles Expo Center."

Since Ono opened its doors, she said, "The response has been great. We've only been open a few weeks and we already have many, loyal, returning customers. They love the self-serve aspect, the island ambience, relaxing music, comfy furniture and the fact that Scott and I are here working hand-in-hand with our employees in a truly, family-owned atmosphere. And there's great beer, too."

During last week's grand-opening ceremony, Scott Hoffman thanked the other breweries in Fairfax County for "paving the way and helping us go through the county-approval process." And Jerry Gordon, president and CEO of the county's Economic Development Authority (EDA), called small businesses "the backbone of this county."

Barry Biggar, with Visit Fairfax – the county's tourism-marketing arm – noted that Ono is the seventh craft brewery in Fairfax. "Craft brewery is a real, growing, tourism product, and we welcome you to the craft brewery family of Fairfax County," he said.

"Ono is one of only three breweries in this country with the self-serve beer technology. We know of millions of people who travel to find beer, so I'm looking forward to marketing to them."

John Boylan, new president of the Dulles Regional Chamber of Commerce, told the Hoffmans, "We're here to help, and we're really excited to welcome you to the community."

County Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova and Supervisor Kathy Smith (D-Sully) then presented a proclamation declaring Sept. 20 as Ono Brewery Day in the county. Calling the Hoffmans "really good folks," Bulova said, "Fairfax County is fiercely pro-business, and craft brewing is the type of business we want to see thrive and flourish here."

"I'm so happy you're here in Sully," added Smith. "We want this to be a vibrant and fun place where people want to be."

Ono's hours are Wednesday-Thursday, 5-9 p.m.; Friday-Saturday, noon-10 p.m.; and Sunday, noon-6 p.m. For more information, go to www.onobrewco.com.

should be able to determine what they want to do with their statues, although he added he wants to see them in a museum.

"I think what is important is to talk about some of the statues that aren't built of bronze, the inequities that we still have in our society," said Northam during the debate. "Inequities in access to health care. Inequities in access to voting rights. Inequities that we have in education."

Views of the Affordable Care Act are also expected to play an important dividing line in the election. Northam has been consistent in his support for expanding Medicaid, criticizing Republicans for undermining a system that has expanded health insurance to millions of Americans who previously had no coverage. Gillespie has been consistently critical of the landmark achievement of former President Barack Obama, although he was noncommittal when asked about his view of the reform proposal currently working its way through Congress.

"I'm not endorsing or opposing any specific legislation that is being talked about right now. I haven't had a chance to read it," said Gillespie after the debate, adding that Virginia should not be punished for declining to expand Medicaid. "But as a principle I've been consistent in this regard, and that is where I am today."

PERHAPS NOTHING looms as large over this election as Donald Trump. The president has become a lightning rod of opposition and a rallying cry for people who feel marginalized. Virginia was the only Southern state Trump lost, and polls show that he remains unpopular here. Gillespie has been trying to distance himself from the president by opposing some of his budget proposals and declining to answer questions about whether he'll ask Trump to campaign for him in Virginia.

"Probably the biggest thing being hung around Ed's neck is the Trump administration," said Republican strategist Dan Scandling. "But depending where you are in the state determines how much of a weight that is. If you're downstate, that's not a problem. If you're up here in Northern Virginia, it's a potential problem."

Democrat Hillary Clinton won Virginia with 50 percent of the vote, with Trump at 44 percent. Many of those presidential year voters might not show up in an odd year-election, when the electorate tends to be older and whiter. For Democrats, the goal heading into Election Day is to run up the numbers in Northern Virginia and overwhelm Republicans in parts of the state that still support Trump. For Republicans, the challenge is find some kind of way of embracing Trump voters without alienating independents who might feel conflicted about the president.

"I think what's really going to drive the election is President Trump," said Democratic strategist Ben Tribbett. "A lot of voters are going to vote either for or against Ed Gillespie based on how they feel about Donald Trump."

Ought To Ship

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

I don't want to praise the Lord too much for providing me with such a trivial and mundane benefit but, I sure am grateful when my 112 pounds of cat litter arrives/is delivered to my front porch, mere feet away from our cats' litter boxes. "Auto Ship," baby. No more am I lugging 28 to 44 pound boxes of cat litter into our five-indoor-cat household from the local supermarket and/or pet superstore. I don't want to plagiarize a television "spokesting" from my youth so I'll give "Speedy" from Alka Seltzer proper attribution when I write as enthusiastically as I can: "Oh, what a relief it is!"

The litter is my second auto-ship of substance; having made an earlier/similar commitment to 16 pound bags of dry cat food. I do get some fancy, multi-vitamins auto-delivered and my wife, Dina, as well receives special eye vitamins in the mail, but I thought that was the only way to purchase them, given that the manufacturers were out of town so I never considered them an auto-type ship. Previously, I had always resisted inquiring about getting products delivered from a national company when they are available locally. My thinking had been that since I'm home during the day, and regularly in and out doing errands at many of the stores that sell this merchandise, why ship it when I can shop it? It seemed redundant.

Now however, given the pleasure I felt when I saw that litter sitting on the porch without my having had to life one finger; well, a few fingers initially when I "keystroked" my way through this company's online registration, the light has come on. Moreover, given the neuropathy I have in my feet, I'm tired of walking around those giant warehouse stores. Sure, the local proximity and availability is helpful but the bigger the buyer, the more effort the unloading/restocking is required at home. Perhaps I've simply come to a realization, and not necessarily an accommodation to my age, that less effort equals more overall value. And if in addition to less effort, I can buy products at equal or even lower cost than doing so locally, than I am sittin' pretty in high cotton, if I may double-down on the benefit?

Not that I'm overworked and underpaid for the household duties I perform but, I'd rather be under worked and overpaid, if you catch my drift? And given certain realities to the many tasks now performed by hand, it's up to me to reinvent the wheel, so to speak. And so, I'm starting to consider very seriously, ordering more stuff this way, especially bulky/weighty stuff and to let my fingers do the clicking rather than my arms and legs doing the walking and carrying. Let commercial/corporate America do the driving and delivering. I don't have to prove my shopping mettle anymore. I'm ready to sit back and let the boxes do my talking.

I'm not quite ready to order food/perishable however. I feel a certain sense of calm and serenity wandering down supermarket aisles taking mental inventory of what's present and what's not — and what's new and what everything costs. Not that I try many things as anybody who knows me knows, but occasionally, Entenmann's or Hostess or Nabisco will surprise me with a new item and thus will have made the visit all the more sweeter. I wonder if I'll have the same sensation perusing and clicking my way through a site that so far has been unseen — by my eyes, anyway. I guess it can't hurt to explore a bit. I mean, it's not exactly the dark web. (Is it?) Nor do I expect to use bit coins or have to create an avatar for myself. Nevertheless, the process does seem a little daunting; changing habits that have become habitual, and routines which have become routine. Seems a bit like turning an ocean liner around after it's headed out to sea. They don't turn on a dime and neither do I. Still, I'm intrigued by the possibilities, and besides, I'm nearly out of laundry detergent.

Perhaps a test is in the offing. I don't think I'm quite ready to join a club/pay a membership fee, but I am open to investigating. Time will tell I suppose, as will my first bill.

CIF Honors Three Leaders

is a really lovely and touching honor for me.”

Jerry Foltz, assistant treasurer of CIF, who retired from Wellspring United Church of Christ, said: “I am so happy to honor the memory of Mukit Hossain and his work in establishing a labor resource center in Herndon, which we modeled ours after originally. He set a style of operating which we really appreciate, and I’m glad we could honor him posthumously tonight.”

Speaking on Dennis’ behalf, his daughter Araba Dennis added: “Immigrants and children of immigrants are just as American as anyone born here.”

According to Alice Foltz, president of the CIF Board, “What we’re doing tonight is honoring some immigrants who themselves have reached out and helped others. And I think that it’s wonderful to be reminded that immigrants make big contributions to our community in so many ways.”

“Our vision is a community that’s inclusive of all immigrants. We work to provide programs that allow immigrants to emigrate into the community and allow people to build bridges across cultural and economic divides,” added Terry Angelotti, executive director of CIF.

State Sen. George Barker (D-39) added: “The CIF has been a very valuable entity in the Centreville area, helping to provide structure when there were problems before, and helping the community in terms of being able to deal with the employment situation there.

And it’s been phenomenal in meeting community needs and doing it in a responsible way.”

Karen Keys Gamarra, School Board at-large representative, said: “This organization means so much to our community in supporting our immigrant residents who are contributing in a positive way to our community, and I’m grateful to see this exhibit of the right attitude towards people who come and have helped to make such a positive impact on the community.”

Sully District Supervisor Kathy Smith added: “I’m really happy to be here to support the Centreville Immigration Forum. They do a great job bringing our diverse community together and it’s really important that they recognize the people that help make us a better community.”

GMU Associate Professor Al Fuentes said when CIF formed in 2007, that it was a public forum initiated through Wellspring UCC.

“It basically was a grassroots movement and then CIF came about organically,” he said. “There were individuals from the Centreville area who came together with a main vision to do the right thing with undocumented immigrants ... so now, looking back to those years, the right thing was to build this center and how it continues to bring the community together.”

According to Jasmine Garcia, the director of the Labor Resource Center, the CIF has helped to fulfill 1,400 job requests. “We are grateful to our employers for providing fair wages to the employees; they ranged from $13 to $17 per hour with an average job of $15 per hour,” she said.

John Cano, community organizer with CIF, added: “The Centreville Immigration Forum is a labor center that’s open to everyone regardless of race, ethnicity; and we’re here with welcoming arms.”
