Waynewood Boy, 9, in Light the Night Walk

Michael Erlandson is Honored Hero; MEE Team hopes to raise $100,000.

For the past three years, his “Walk with MEE” team has rallied alongside Michael and raised $70,000. This year, their fourth, they are hoping to bring that number to $100,000, according to Maureen Beddis, 41, the MEE team captain and friend of the Erlandsons from Waynewood. They’re currently at the $13,651 mark for donations on the website, with a goal of $25,000.

Beddis, who works as a VP of marketing for a non-profit, said the money came primarily from generosity of the Waynewood community (ZIP Code 22308) as well as a few local businesses that support the team each year. Next Friday, Oct. 20, a private party of all volunteers is planned at a Waynewood home where some generous contributors will chip in between $100 to $500 for the MEE team.

“This community is one that rallies around each other,” said Beddis of the support. “I felt there was a line outside the Erlandson’s door, and people wanted to give them money, gas cards, and restaurant cards.”

She added: “I think (the support) was a little overwhelming, but they were very appreciative and they needed some time to figure out how to handle this on their own. When they learned about the LLS and the fact that there was an event like Light the Night that brings together patients and survivors, it just seemed like the right thing to do, to get a team together to raise money for the cause.”

She said the first year, there were 20-30 on the team of Light the Night walkers. And everyone who walks carries a lantern — the color red is for supporters, white is for survivors, and gold is for remembrance. And each year, it’s gotten bigger and more and more people are walking. “Word has spread of what an amazing event it is,” she said.

Added mom Sandi Erlandson, 39, a stay-at-home mom: “We know how much this community has done for us, but when we actually see this tent and all the lanterns and get the visual picture of what they’ve done for us, it’s really something.”

Sandi Erlandson said Michael’s ordeal started in May 2014 when he was just tired all the time and not able to keep up with his friends. So they took him to Fort Belvoir Community Hospital and discovered he had a mass in his chest; he was then diagnosed with leukemia.

“He did eight months of chemotherapy treatment and in March he started his maintenance treatment,” said Sandi. “He was able to go back to school and did a month of first grade. He then had a homebound instructor and skipped the rest of the school year.”

His mom said the first eight months were pretty intense with intravenous chemotherapy and spinal taps, which kept him out of school with low blood counts and many hospital stays due to fevers. “He felt crummy and lost his hair and a lot of weight. He was then on steroids and he gained weight back, which put him in a wheelchair.”

He began maintenance therapy in April 2015, which is daily oral chemo, and once a month he got intravenous chemo through his port; and every three months he got a spinal tap. “We will finish all of that in three weeks and we will be done,” she said, adding that she’s “equally excited and anxious” that the treatments will end.

“Michael is over-the-moon excited because the chemo is at night and it keeps him from having sleep overs, so it keeps him from being a normal kid,” said his mom. Michael attends Waynewood Elementary in Alexandria and his hobbies include baseball, video games, chess and Legos. He has two other siblings: Carlie, 12, and Gabriel, 5.

At one point, dad Mike, 39, who works in the U.S. Army, thought they were out of the woods. “But then he developed an immune disorder because of the first treatments, which led him back to the hospital for one month,” he said. “There were 11 other people diagnosed with this in the National Capital region, and Michael was the only one to live.”

During his treatments, Michael also worked with the Resilience Project by designing socks with his friends’ initials on them as a fundraiser. Those were friends from the community affected by blood cancer.

Unidos por Puerto Rico DMV ships supplies to survivors of two hurricanes.

By Marti Moore

Fairfax County business partners Susana B. Slayton and Rafael Babilonia-Dudley saw it all play out on the television news last month. They watched Category 5 storm Hurricane Irma sideswipe Puerto Rico Sept. 6. In less than two weeks, they were horrified as Hurricane Maria made a beeline toward the island — where Babilonia-Dudley was born and his parents live.

Babilonia-Dudley knew this was a train wreck waiting to happen. He experienced the wrath of Hurricane Hugo — exactly 28 years ago, when it packed a Category 3 wallop and punched Puerto Rico. At the time, he and his wife, Martha, lived on the island’s northern coast in the City of Guaynabo. It took 52 days for them to get electricity. He said he and his wife went to nearby San Juan then spent the next nine months working for the American Red Cross recovery efforts in the mountains.

They knew Hurricane Maria was much worse.

They knew a direct hit from a Category 4 storm would bring stunned Puerto Ricans to their knees.

A day before Hurricane Maria nearly destroyed the island Sept. 20, Slayton and Babilonia-Dudley called a federal government liaison to this U.S. Commonwealth and asked how they could help.

They learned about an initiative started by Puerto Ricans to help islanders recover from two natural disasters they weathered in just one month. It’s on like “Donkey Kong” for Slayton and Babilonia-Dudley, co-owners of Dynamic Animation Systems Inc. of Fairfax — which creates virtual training systems for military and police.

These Burke residents, whose families attend the same church at Burke United Methodist, wanted to help. They rolled-up their sleeves then made space at their warehouse in Chantilly for humanitarian relief supplies.

Before Hurricane Maria made landfall, Slayton said, “we were creating the Facebook page.” Unidos por Puerto Rico DMV is a grassroots effort with more than 1,600 followers and filled with testimonies from donors like Maribel Costa, who brought a car full of provisions from Baltimore to Chantilly: “I was happily put to work within minutes. It was so wonderful to see so many people moving quickly, very focused and just working so hard to get everything ready for a safe trip to PR,” Costa remarks on her Oct. 7 Facebook post. “They are so organized and it just gave me so much confidence that all these donated goods will get to the people who need it most.”

This group is among 18 chapters nationwide that help the Puerto Rico Federal Affairs Administration in Washington, D.C., coordinate this movement.

Slayton and Babilonia-Dudley are building a network of more than 200 volunteers to come to the rescue of Puerto Ricans.

Soon after Maria passed, she noticed area residents were in tears because they couldn’t reach their families on the island. It took them four days to realize islanders with cellular service from AT&T wireless could receive calls only. That’s how Northern Virginians learned their friends and family in Puerto Rico had nothing.

Babilonia-Dudley knows, hardly will happen. “That’s how generous Virginians learned their friends and family in Puerto Rico did nothing.”

The sixth graders were part of heat #2.

Stratford Landing students raise funds for their school.

By Mike Salmon
The Gazette

Sixth grader Aidan Casto has run in Stratford Landing Elementary School’s “Rock’n Run” since he started at the school as a kindergartner, so running over 20 laps around the course with fellow sixth graders in the school’s biggest fundraiser was no big deal.

“It’s something besides recess and PE,” Aidan said.

There he was, running around a track for 30 minutes with his classmates as teachers and parents cheered them on, and the “Rocky” movie theme song blared out of speakers in the field. All morning on Friday, Oct. 13, all 825 students

Yacht Haven Garden Club hosts annual fundraiser.

By Mike Salmon
The Gazette

Floral Fantasy is what brought the Yacht Haven Garden Club out on Oct. 12, as they gathered at the Mount Vernon Country Club for their annual fundraiser that supports the community beautification activities the gardeners do around Mount Vernon.

Whether it’s fixing the plants outside of Sherwood Hall Library, donating funds to the Wounded Warriors Friendship Garden on Fort Belvoir, or partnering with the University of Maryland Honey Bee Project, it all starts with the funds raised at the annual fashion show. Clothes are modeled, gift baskets are bid on and artwork raffled to raise funds.

Saving the honey bees is a challenge taken on by organizations on a global scale, but the gardeners plant some bee-friendly plants and donate money to support the efforts by others. “It’s a very serious project,” said Babs McClendon, a member of the garden club for 25 years.

“We contribute money so someone else can do the planting,” said Gail Miarchik, chairman of the fashion show.

In previous years, the fashion show has been at Fort Belvoir but this is the first year they were at the country club. In 1983, at their first fashion show, the clothing styles were a little different and more for-

Four Issues No One Is Discussing This Election

By Scott Surovell
State Senator (D-36)

Virginians go to the polls in three weeks and if you followed the new cycle, you would think that the next General Assembly Session is going to be all about Confederate Statutes, street gangs and natural gas pipelines – none of which is accurate. Here are four big issues facing Virginia that have been missing in action this cycle.

Redistricting

Hyper-partisan legislative districts are at the root of the partisan gridlock we see today. While the Senate Democratic Caucus drew Virginia’s Senate districts in 2010, Virginia’s congresional and legislative districts were otherwise drawn by Republicans majorities with the cooperation of Republican governor’s in 2000 and 2010. Democratic voters have been crammed into a small number of seats and Virginia’s Congressional and House of Delegates districts are way out of proportion to Virginia’s actual voting.

Virginia’s next Governor will participate in Virginia’s next redistricting process. Ralph Northam and I have repeatedly endorsed and voted for nonpartisan redistricting which would go a long way towards voters picking their leaders instead of leaders picking their voters.

Metro Funding

Metro is facing a $15 billion cash shortfall over the next 10 years that must be resolved by Virginia, Maryland and the District. There is plenty of blame to go around, but little discussion about viable solutions. The future of our region’s growth, including economic development lies in a viable Metro. All of the construction cranes in Northern Virginia are next to Metro stations. Transit is our future.

While Virginia cannot choose a solution on our own, the negotiations must be led by our Governor in conjunction with our legislature which is controlled by downstate interests. This problem will not be solved without state money and there has been little public discussion about solutions in the race.

Transportation

In 2013, we passed the first transportation tax increase since 1985. The measure only funded about 20 percent of Virginia’s long-term transportation funding needs. Subsequently, we have become entirely dependent upon private toll road expansions to pay for road widenings – and high tolls that are mainly used by those who can afford to use them and not everyone.

The improvements planned in Fairfax County’s stretch of U.S. 1 are slated to cost $2.1 billion — we have identified funding for a fraction of that. Last year, several Northern Virginia counties alone submitted lists of funding requests that totaled more than the entire amount of money available for all of Northern Virginia. Statewide, we have multiple megaprojects that are likely to suck up huge sums – Metro, Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel, I-64 widening, I-95 widening and Higher Speed Rail including a new Potomac River bridge and tunnel at I-395. Quantifying the unfunded need in terms of a tax gap would be equivalent to about a $1 per gallon tax over 20 years.

The Woodrow Wilson Bridge and Interstate 95 at the Occoquan are once again congested every day – both after being widened. We are not going to build our way out of this problem, and sticking our head in the sand is not going to solve it either.

Coal Ash

Last session, we passed legislation placing a one-year moratorium on permitting for Virginia’s four coal ash dumps in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed to facilitate a formal assessment to provide the legislature with better information about alternatives before making a decision. The results of the assessments are scheduled for release next month.

The next legislature will need to decide whether to allow millions of tons of coal ash to simply be buried in perpetuity in leaky landfills within yards of major waterways or whether to facilitate either recycling or removal. This has already cost over $300 million to cleanup and the ultimate result could cost ratepayers (you) between $1-3 billion in closure costs, but also has many long-term health, environmental and economic benefits.

There has been no discussion about these issues this cycle, but I plan to head back to Richmond looking for solutions. Please email me at scott@scotturovell.org if you have any feedback. It is an honor to serve as your state senator.

Letter to the Editor

‘Come Together’ For Stuart

To the Editor, Oct. 26, the Fairfax County School Board (FCSB) is scheduled to vote on the name change for J.E.B. Stuart High School. After a lengthy process, Superintendent Brabrand suggested to the FCSB that they choose from among the top five choices that resulted from consideration of 73 possible names in a vote of residents of the J.E.B. Stuart Pyramid that occurred on Sept. 16, 2017. The top five choices in descending order are Stuart, Thurgood Marshall, Barbara Rose Johns, Peace Valley, and Louis Mendez.

The vote to change the school name occurred on July 27, 2017. During consideration of a motion to change the name, Mount Vernon School Board representative Karen Corbett Sanders stated the following: “We need to come together with Stuart High School.” This comment by Ms. Corbett Sanders occurred after an earlier motion to delay the name change decision failed on a 6-5 vote. During the debate before that vote, Ms. Corbett Sanders described in detail that it took 30 years to get over the emotional feelings resulting from the name change in our community from Groveton High School (which, she intended) to West Potomac High School.

Each time the J.E.B. Stuart community has been asked by FCSB to vote on whether the name of J.E.B. Stuart High School should be changed or on what the new name should be, the answer came back: either don’t change the name or change it to Stuart. First, in 2016, the FCSB polled local residents. There were 3,414 responses. 56 percent said don’t change the name. 35 percent favored a name change. 8 percent had no opinion. This result did not comport with the decision the FCSB wanted to make to change the name, so they next asked the entire student body of the high school to vote. 90 percent of the students did not vote and of the 10 percent that voted only one-third favored changing the name, 3 percent of the entire student body. Again, this result did not support what the FCSB wanted to do. Finally, the FCSB held a public meeting on Sept. 9, 2017, in which anyone on the planet could propose a new name for the school. 73 names were proposed and they were voted on solely by residents of the Stuart Pyramid on Sept. 16, 2017. Each voter was permitted to vote for a first, second, and third choice. Of the first place votes, “Stuart” received twice as many votes as the next choice (Marshall).

On Oct. 26, I am looking to our School Board representative Karen Corbett Sanders to display integrity and vote for “Stuart” as the new name for J.E.B. Stuart High School, as she said she would do when she voted on July 27, 2017 with the Stuart Pyramid.

Full disclosure: I represent five citizen plaintiffs, four of whom are from the Stuart Pyramid, who are suing the FCSB, Superintendent Brabrand and Mason District representative Sandra Evans in her capacity as an FCPS member. The law suit requests a permanent injunction compel FCSB to vacate its name change decision, go back to square one, revise the regulation so that it is constitutional and understandable by, among other things, defining the three vague terms mentioned above, and then follow it for this and any other school name change. The law suit does not request that any particular school name be imposed on FCPS.

Desire Christian gave testimony of Rising Hope's help. She now has a place to live provided by New Hope Housing, an agency Rising Hope partners with. She also volunteers in the Rising Hope food pantry and clothing closet.

Shonna James, Gala Committee chairperson, spoke about Rising Hope's loving compassion as a church community. She is the Lay Leader and the Worship Leader at Rising Hope.

Samantha Jacobs, who was featured in National Geographic Book “Feeding America: Stories of Hunger and Hope,” shared her story of how Rising Hope changed her life.

The Hope Grows Gala benefiting Rising Hope Mission Church of Alexandria held Oct. 13 at the Waterford in Springfield was an evening filled with dining, dancing to the Moonaddies band, silent and live auctions led by auctioneer Donna Bolton. NBC-4 Reporter and Saturday Morning News Anchor David Culver emceed the program, featuring four life-transforming stories as examples of how Rising Hope provides food, clothing, shelter and empowerment to help those in need.

One of the four speakers was Samantha Jacobs, featured in the National Geographic book “Feeding America: Stories of Hunger and Hope,” Jacobs shared how Rising Hope’s food pantry, in partnership with the Capital Area Food Bank, made a difference in feeding her family. Now she and Rising Hope will be at the center of a national Ad Council public service campaign to encourage Americans to support their local food banks.

Desire Christian expressed how Rising Hope helped her find a place to live in partnership with New Hope Housing. Formerly homeless, she knows that life is more blessed when one gives rather than receives.

She now serves in the same food pantry and clothing closet that she needs to make ends meet. She often brings her gift of music into worship services, leads prayer ministries, and counsels others in need.

Other speakers included Jeff Lisanick, who first came to Rising Hope 9 years ago for help after being released from 20 years in prison. He described his journey from living in the Eleanor Kennedy Shelter to now working as the coordinator for Residential Services for New Hope Housing.

He also serves on the governing board of Fairfax County’s Office to Prevent and End Homelessness, is a member of the Community Services Board, and was honored with the title of “Lord Fairfax 2017” as citizen of the year by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

Shonna James described the welcoming atmosphere of love and support she has received as a member of Rising Hope’s congregation. As a single mom of two children, she earned a Master’s Degree from American University and holds a Federal job in Washington, D.C. She is now the Lay Leader and Worship Leader at Rising Hope.

The Gala was planned and coordinated by the Rising Hope Fund Development Committee co-chaired by Maria Ward and Karen Booker. The committee includes Sharon Emory, 20-year organizer of the Gala, Jane Gandee, Kat Roman, and Shonna James.

Rising Hope’s goal of netting over $30,000 was supported by a $30,000 matching gift by Beyond Coffee, Beyond Church. During the live reverse auction alone, $17,000 was raised toward this match. Donations and pledges may still be made to Rising Hope Mission Church.

Contributions with “Match” in the memo line must be received by Dec. 31, 2017, to be applied to the $30,000 matching gift. To donate, visit risinghopeumc.org/shop or contact Kat Roman at Rising Hope, 8220 Russell Road, Alexandria, VA 22309, phone: 703-360-1976, kroman@risinghopeumc.org.

Rising Hope’s Yard Sale Fundraiser will be held Saturday, Oct. 28, 7 a.m. to 1 p.m., at Wesley United Methodist Church, 8412 Richmond Ave., Alexandria, VA 22309.

Townhouse Fire

On Sunday, Oct. 8, at approximately 2:38 a.m., units from Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department and the Alexandria City Fire Department responded for a reported townhouse fire in the 2700 block of Carter Farm Court in Hybla Valley. Units arrived on scene and reported fire showing from the rear of a two-story, middle unit townhouse. The occupants were not home at the time of the fire. The fire was discovered by a neighbor who then called 9-1-1. Fire investigators determined that the fire was accidental in nature and started on the rear deck. The fire was caused by improperly discarded smoking materials. Damages as a result of the fire were approximately $197,500.
Boosting a Child’s Self-Esteem

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

One of the greatest gifts that a parent can give a child is a healthy self-esteem. Positive feelings about oneself can lead to success in a gamut of situations ranging from school to social circles, says child development experts.

“Self-esteem plays an important role at all stages of our lives,” said psychologist Stacie B. Isenberg, Psy.D. “As adults, it can affect how one approaches situations and interacts with other people. When self-esteem is low, it may, for example, affect work performance or one’s ability to recognize and enjoy accomplishments.”

Parents play an essential part in the development of their child’s self-esteem, advises Cheryl Giacomelli, who teaches psychology at Northern Virginia Community College. “Parents foster self-esteem in many ways including leading by example, being emotionally available, engaging with their children, and providing a loving and supportive environment that allows children to succeed and fail,” she said.

Parents can model this behavior in every-day tasks. “For example, while helping a child with a math assignment and not understanding the math problem, the parent who says ‘I can’t believe I don’t understand this, I was always terrible at math’ is sending a different message than the parent who says, ‘I’m not sure about this one. Let’s ask your teacher to explain it to us in a different way,’” said Isenberg. “Parents can benefit themselves and their children by learning to describe situations according to the specific circumstances and resisting putting a generalized label on the situation or their behavior.”

Since children learn by observation, modeling healthy relationships and habits is a vital component of developing a healthy self-esteem, suggests Giacomelli. “Choose an activity once a day in which you are fully engaged with your child,” she said. “This may sound like common sense, however in today’s busy world, it’s sometimes difficult to devote all of your attention to one task. This means playing a game or reading a book and ensuring your cell phone is not in sight.”

“Experiences that may negatively impact the development of a strong sense of self occur when we do not fully engage with our children, when we do not allow our children to fail, and when we do not acknowledge our own faults,” continued Giacomelli.

Avoid harsh criticisms and display expressions of love, warmth and affection, advises Joanne Bagshaw, PhD, LCPC, professor of psychology at Montgomery College-Germantown.

“Children’s self-esteem develops based on how well their parents love them,” she said. “The best thing parents can do is to openly and unconditionally love and accept their child. Parents … can do so verbally, by telling their children often that they love them and by being openly affectionate, with hugs, for example. Parents can also communicate warmth through their tone of voice, and eye contact.”

PRAISING CHILDREN is important, but it must be sincere. Even setbacks can offer opportunities for developing a healthy self-esteem, suggests Isenberg. “Children feel good about themselves when they have received genuine, positive reinforcement from people and situations,” she said. “Praising a child’s efforts is one of the best things parents can reinforce, because a child can control his effort, whereas outcome isn’t always within one’s control.”

One example that Isenberg offers is saying something like, “I’m so proud of how hard you studied for that science test. You spent a lot of time reviewing the material and were really dedicated to being prepared.”

Allowing children to learn to do things on their own and even experience a setback within a supportive environment may increase feelings of confidence and competence, says Jerome Short, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology at George Mason University.

“Parents may do too much for children or protect them from failure so that children do not learn to cope with difficult situations and soothe themselves,” he said. “Children should believe that they have worth for being a unique person.”

Fostering opportunities for positive social interaction with their peers can lead to a healthy self-esteem, says Short. “Children who have close friendships and reciprocal sharing with friends tend to have higher self-esteem,” he said. “Children’s successful accomplishment of goals also boosts self-esteem.”

Establishing boundaries and setting limits with children can instill a sense of safety and security, advises Short. “Authoritative parenting that is high in support and high in structure and expectations contributes to children’s positive sense of self,” he said.

A Gender-Bending Twist for ‘Hamlet’

By Steve Hribar

Port City Playhouse, which used to perform plays in Alexandria and Arlington, is staging the classic "Hamlet" by William Shakespeare with a gender-bending twist, at its new venue at the Sleepy Hollow United Methodist Church in Falls Church, now through Oct. 28.

The story follows Hamlet as she returns home after her mother’s death to find that her father has married her aunt, ascending the aunt to the throne of Denmark. Her mother’s ghost appears, asking Hamlet to avenge her murder. Hamlet is then led on a twisting ride of madness, murder, and discovery.

Director Juli Blacker wanted to do something different with this production as “Hamlet” tends to be done fairly similarly each time we got on our feet, the actors have changes, both big and small, required. But once we understood the story, the actors have inhabited these characters. So much that I now have to remind myself that this is how they were initially written," she said. Rebekah Raze is playing the role of Hamlet. "She is a girly young lady living in a world filled with deception and secrecy," she said. "Two months prior to the beginning of the play, Hamlet’s mother has died unexpectedly and now her father has re-married, to Hamlet’s aunt. It is revealed to Hamlet through an encounter with a ghost that her mother’s death was not an accident. This throws her into a whirlwind of ever more secrets, deeper grief, and a great thirst for revenge.”

She said her biggest challenge has been learning her lines. “The character of Hamlet has more lines than any other Shakespearean character ever written. Although our director cut the script significantly, it has still been a challenge to get all of my lines fully in me, while also being sure to focus on the development of my character and my acting choices.”

Timothy Caron is playing the role of Ophelius, a young man in the Danish court. “He lost his father sometime in the past, but has remained close with his mother and sister. When this environment keeps him and Ophelius hopeful and generally happy, it has also rendered him a bit sheltered as to the harsh realities of life,” he said.

He added: “In the case of his pre-play relationship with Lady Hamlet, for example, he doesn’t have much romantic and social experience to work off of, but he nonetheless believes that there’s something genuine in his relationship. This is emotionally long-lasting between him and her. Unfortunately, in the course of the show, he can’t handle the quick breakdown of things between him, Hamlet, and her mother, and that ultimately destroys his mental and emotional wellbeing.”

He said like any Shakespeare production, he hopes that the audience can, in spite of the largely dated language, recognize the characters’ motives, as well as the timeless themes that have helped keep Shakespeare relevant for centuries. “Of course, a big part of that depends on how well we can communicate the things to them.”

Jessie Roberts is playing the role of Polonia, who is quite maternal. “Her first concern is her children; second, although not a distant second, is the welfare of Denmark. And when they converge, her composure to ‘fixing’ things doubles. She’s a bit of a yenta and quite funny,” she said.

She said once she got a handle on the maternal qualities of the character, the hardest part was learning the lines. “I don’t do the usual way — lots of lines, etc. Rather that Polonia throws in so much extraneous verbiage that it was difficult to remember all the unnecessary — but colorful — things she says. But it’s that extra verbal baggage that makes her character what it is,” she said.

Raeanna Larson plays the role of Laerta, the older sister of Ophelius and daughter of Polonia. “The role pretty famously serves as a foil to Hamlet — where Hamlet takes forever to decide what to do, Laerta is all about action. She can be pretty intense and definitely has a temper, but she is also someone who cares really deeply,” she said.

She said the most challenging part was also the most rewarding — that of the gender-swap. “There aren’t many roles like Laertes written for women. In my experience, women aren’t often portrayed in moments of sheer rage, especially not anger that manifests in violence. So, I’m getting to do several things and tap into several emotions I haven’t had the chance to explore on stage, and it’s really wonderful.”

Lesley McKnight is playing two roles — Claudia and the Ghost of Hamlet’s mother. “Queen Claudia is a sociopath who was willing to do anything to become queen, including killing her own sister. She has married her sister’s husband, for whom she has genuine affection, to secure the crown,” she said. “Claudia has a plan to kill Hamlet, but in the end is found out for all she has done, and Hamlet kills her in revenge.”

She added: “I am also playing the Ghost of Hamlet’s mother, who was murdered by Claudia. The Ghost comes back to tell Hamlet about the murder, and to demand that she seek revenge.”

She said the hardest part of playing two different characters is to make sure that they are unique. “I have tried to give them different voices, postures and mannerisms so that they look and sound like two distinct people,” she said.

ASO Offers Nature-Themed Concert
Led by Conductor James Ross

By Melinda Kernc
ALEXANDRIA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

T he Alexandria Symphony Orchestra presents an unusual season this year, featuring the four final candidates for music director. The finalists are diverse, conducting symphonies from Xalapa, Mexico to Lucena, Spain — from the Los Angeles Philharmonic to the Washington National Opera. One final candidate will be chosen as the next music director to conduct the 75th anniversary season in 2018-19.

The season continues this weekend with James Ross on Saturday, Oct. 21, at Schlesinger Concert Hall) and Oct. 22 (3 p.m. at the George Washington Masonic Memorial) with a concert inspired by nature. Complete with a theme related to the same concept, the concert evokes images of coastal shores and pastures and green pastures. Ross programmed the concert with these common ideas in mind, as he commented: “Birds, waves, rocks and a lonely human taking it all in — these are the elements that bind our program.”

One of George Butterworth’s last works before he gave his life as a soldier in WWI, “The Banks of Green Willow” incorporates folk songs and poetry from his native England. The “Four Sea Interludes,” which Benjamin Britten derived from his acclaimed opera “Peter Grimes,” paints the sea itself as character in this heartbreaking tale. “The North Sea takes on the role of psychological underpinning and commentary on an individual against society,” observes Ross. “That same craggy power and inwardsness that infuses the Brahms Third Symphony is present in a raw form in the ‘Sea Interludes’.”

Ross is currently director of orchestras at the University of Maryland, recently completing a 16-year tenure. He also serves as the director for the National Youth Orchestra — USA, music director-designate of the Orquesta Sinfónica del Valles in Barcelona and serves on the faculty at The Juilliard School. He is internationally recognized for advancing the future of orchestras through cross-genre collaborations. His recent performance of Beethoven’s Symphony No. 9, presented in Catalán at the Palau de la Música, received an enthusiastic standing ovation. “I believe in the ongoing humanizing impact of classical music on the lives of those it touches,” says Ross.

The second half of the program features Brahms’ Symphony No. 3. “The symphony embodies a cycle of time,” notes Ross. “The first movement has the explosive energy of spring while the second is a summer pastorale. The third movement is autumnal and inward-turning; the final movement is again full of turmoil — a storminess of fire and ice — and brings us back to motifs from the first movement.”

Concert attendees, musicians and community members are invited to provide feedback after each performance in order to assess the four final candidates. The ASO plans to announce the new music director following the final concert of the season, and special events are planned to introduce him to Alexandria and the surrounding community.

The Alexandria Symphony is a fully-professional orchestra drawing from the Washington, D.C. metropolitan region’s wealth of musical talent. Many musicians perform with other orchestras and top military bands.

The ASO performs Saturdays at Rachel M. Schlesinger Concert Hall and Arts Center and Sunday matinees at the George Washington Masonic Memorial. Adult tickets are $20-$80, with $5 youth, $10 student and military, senior and group discounts available. To order tickets and for more information, visit www.alexsym.org or call 703-548-0885.

3 Coffee Shops to Perk Up Your Day

By Hope Nelson

The days are getting shorter and the darkness has descended over more of the morning hours. Need a little pick-me-up on the way to work or on the way home? Here are three coffee shops that can’t wait to help you get your caffeine fix, no matter the time of day.

Swings Coffee, 501 E. Monroe Ave.
Is it possible to sport an industrial look with a cozy ambiance? If so – or even if not – Swings has both sides of the coin covered in spades. The large roastery on Mount Vernon Avenue could easily look like a hulking cavernous space, but instead, Swings makes it feel like a place one could spend a day working, studying, or chatting without breaking stride. Swings takes its coffee seriously, and you’d be wise to do so too. Try one of the multitude of pour-over varieties, ranging from a full-bodied Sumatra to a sweeter Java Honey, or go for the iced route with an iced or nitro-iced coffee. (If they’re serving a bourbon-barrel style! Go for it.) Can’t get enough coffee? Take a spin through its Coffee Capping at 10 a.m. on Fridays, where visitors can venture into the roastery’s “coffee lab” and taste-test new coffees, specially limited-edition varieties, and more.

Misha’s, 102 S. Patrick St.
For years, Misha’s has been a beacon in the night – but don’t stop at the doorway – enter the belly of the beast and come back our caffeinated and happy. Misha’s offers a plethora of blends and varietals to enjoy by the cup; taste-test to find the one you like, and then take home a bag of it. A popular blend is its Route 66, the French roasted beans are full-bodied but accessible. Or travel the globe with any of its African, Indonesian or American varietals, either to sip in-house or take back to your own coffee-brewing setup. And don’t skimp on the pastries – more than simply window-dressing, they are the real deal and pair very nicely with whatever brew you choose.

Coffeeshops that can’t wait to help you get your caffeine fix, no matter the time of day.

Killer ESP, 1012 King St.
At first blush, it might seem a bit odd to have two coffee shops around the corner from one another, and neither does seem to be hurting – and neither does Misha’s. Rather, the two offer discrete enough selections that it’s easy to see how they’ve both managed their close relationship perfectly well. Venture into the shop and you’re greeted with a welcome sweet sight – a gelato counter. Don’t think this is a hasty addition to Killer ESP’s offerings – after all, the shop’s initials stand for “Espresso, Sorbet, and Pie.” You’ll find the pie behind the counter as well, in both sweet and savory varieties, from DC’s Dangerously Delicious Pies. And as far as the espresso, well, Killer ESP wins the frequent-flyer award with its connection to Portland, Oregon’s Stumptown Coffee. Enjoy a multitude of varieties of the espresso, sorbet or pie – or live dangerously and have a tasting of each component. Life’s short, after all.

Junior Umpires Make the Calls for Ft. Hunt Little League

Teens cover nearly 70 percent of umpire slots this fall.

By Steve Dressing
FHLL Umpire and Coach

In the words of John Donaldson, administrator of Virginia Little League District 9 and long-time Ft. Hunt Little League (FHLL) umpire, “Umpires are as essential to the game of Little League baseball as well-maintained fields and dedicated coaches. Yet today, not enough parents of young players are signing up to become umpires, preferring to stay in the stands and watch their kids play.” This is understandable, but usually results in a shortage of adult umpires. Fortunately for FHLL, Youth – or Junior – Umpires have come to the rescue by taking on a large share of the umpiring workload.

FHLL accepts teenagers age 13 and older for training as Junior Umpires, but they are restricted to working the bases until age 16. Training typically includes 2-3 hours in the classroom reviewing the rules and another 1-3 hours in the field practicing positioning. In addition, some mentoring is provided by adult umpires, particularly during games. The result of this training is that experienced Junior Umpires are far more knowledgeable of the rules than most coaches and fans.

Two umpires at a minimum, one behind the plate and one covering the bases, are needed for a well-umpired game. A clear measure of the importance of Junior Umpires to FHLL is the share of umpiring slots they cover. This spring, for example, there were 214 games requiring umpires, and Junior Umpires filled just over half of the slots. This fall, Junior Umpires have covered nearly 70 percent of slots. A total of 25 Junior Umpires have worked in the spring and fall seasons, usually – but not exclusively – on the smaller fields used by younger players. These umpires are paid $25 for bases and $35 for plate for each game.

Most get into umpiring simply because they love baseball, but there are also other reasons. First-year umpire Sean Finn likes the different perspective on the game that umpiring offers, but adds that “it’s one of the only jobs I can do as a 13-year-old.” Alex Depumpo, an experienced umpire with many games behind the plate, enjoys “being in control of the game.”

Riley Jay has umpired for six seasons, two behind the plate, for love of the game, but also because he can earn some money while giving back to the community. Jay says that the hardest part of umpiring is “making split-second calls.” Depumpo is concerned most about “making close calls that can change the outcome of the game.” Finn echoes the thoughts of many adult umpires when he notes that the hardest part of umpiring is keeping track of baserunners while also being ready for the action that occurs when a batter hits the ball. As would be expected, these umpires like their roles least when people argue or question calls or assume they know the rules better than the umpires.

Jay says umpiring is fun because he can watch as young players enjoy and learn to play the game. Depumpo likes high-scoring games with a lot of action. Finn takes pleasure in making “safe” or “out” calls in the same manner as professional umpires.

The FHLL family is very appreciative of the contributions made by Junior Umpires. Coach Brian Kasprzyk, for example, says, “I respect the junior umpires in FHLL because they demonstrate a positive attitude toward the coaches and the players.”

Bob Mulvaney, a coach and director of Fields and Facilities at FHLL, adds “Junior Umpires are a huge asset to FHLL. They work really hard to be professional and bring excellence to their work. It’s impressive to see and essential to the long-term success of Fort Hunt Little League.”

Parents and coaches alike see that the participation of Junior Umpires is important to ensuring that there are umpires in the future. Steve Sarro, parent of a AAA player, particularly likes that the Junior Umpires show the younger players what they can work towards.” He adds that the Junior Umpire program is a great way that youth can help with community service, make some money, and stay involved in baseball even if they no longer play the game.

Senior Umpires probably appreciate the Junior Umpires more than anyone because the Juniors lighten the load and bring fresh energy to the umpire corps. Mike May, who both umpires and handles umpire scheduling for FHLL, says he enjoys working games with Juniors and appreciates their commitment to doing the job right, adding “we couldn’t do it without them.”

FHLL Junior Umpires have varying plans for the future, with newcomer Finn hoping to become a plate umpire, while the more-experienced Depumpo “would like to eventually umpire travel and all-star games.” Both plan to continue umpiring through high school and during summer break while at college.

Kasprzyk says, “The program provides Junior Umpires with an opportunity to learn about leadership and responsibility, while also growing their self-esteem and gaining experience in a fun atmosphere.”

Mulvaney adds: “Taking on the responsibility of umpiring games is a credit to these young people, and learning umpiring skills translates far beyond the field of play. The experiences they gain will help them navigate all kinds of situations and challenges later in life.”

came out in their allotted time and ran the course, earning pledge money for the school to fund special projects and curriculum items that otherwise would go unfunded. The students were getting a workout and having fun, and so were the parents.

Stephanie Fultz gave her son Jack the high-five as he went around, “and killing it,” she said.

Meredith Romley had her twin third graders, Evelyn and Silvia, to cheer on, and their race preparations started the night before. “Last night we had a big pasta dinner to get them ready for it,” Romley said.

Not only was it a fundraiser and exercise opportunity, Brook Aljilani noted that “it gets their class spirit going,” she said.

Local businesses contributed, and according to the amount, got in various levels of sponsorship starting with the platinum, which donated $1,000, then gold at $500, silver was $250 and bronze at $100. The PTA was in charge of the fundraising program, and at 9 a.m. that morning, the amount they had raised was $55,131. Sponsorships cover the cost of Rock ‘n’ Run so that all other money raised goes directly to school needs. The planning for this annual event started in the summer.

Holly Ferry, who had a kindergartner and fourth grader in the run, was a silver sponsor from her home-based embroidering company “The Monogrammed Monkey.” She has an embroidery machine that “is like a sewing machine on steroids,” she said.

Donna Peterson donned a wig and pom poms, dancing on the sidelines as she had for the event in years past. “It’s awesome, I can skip the gym,” she said.

e-mail, but now the trend seems to be toward casual. “I think things have gotten more relaxed, it reflects the style these days,” said McClendon.

To Denise Wight, it’s comfort and easy, “more vacation-type clothes,” she said.

The clothing in the show was from Details of Occoquan, and modeled by members of the garden club. When the models are through on the catwalk, the clothes can then be purchased by the audience or the models themselves. Some of the money goes back to the company, and some goes to the garden club. “I bought one of the tops I’m wearing today,” said Patricia Uchello, standing outside the dressing room.

“Righty Tighty, Lefty Loosy”

By KENNETH R. LOURIE

So I’ve been told moronically for years. But when you’re home and automobile-repair challenged as I am, everything is much easier said than done, especially when the repair device is easier to handle/figure out than whatever tool and/or schematic is necessary/available for the at-home/in-dwelling repair. (We don’t have a garage, or much of a basement for that matter. It’s more of a cellar actually. In fact, I call it “The Dig Out,” so lack of spatial accommodations can exacerbate the problem.)

And that’s sort of how I feel whenever I attempt a home/car-owner-type repair. Soon after I organize whatever thoughts and tools I guess I might need, I suddenly realize that I have likely complicated the repair and will be forced to dig myself out, sometimes literally. I’ll spare you the details, but suffice to say, it is disaster. As for the owner’s inability to handle the most mundane tasks. Might have actually gotten worse. As for the fateful day, but not as it concerns this home/car repair; and anything else involving plumbing, electrical, or create a problem where one or two previously didn’t exist. I have to employ the simplest of solutions. And what’s simpler than “a pithy observation that contains a general truth:” an aphorism (Maggie Force, 1973), and believe me, I do.

Granted, replacing bulbs in my house, as written in the final paragraph of last week’s column: “What To ‘Wane,” ranks pretty low on the home owner’s list of honey-car-you-did. Nevertheless, challenges do present themselves, especially when height and a ladder – or a step stool, with no spotter, are involved. And when I’m backing up with arms outstretched attacking the problem: light fixture from multiple angles, sometimes, when I place my hand on the bulb, I begin to lose my orientation and am unsure where’s ‘Righty and where’s ‘Lefty. And even though I always remember ‘Righty and ‘Loosey,’ when ‘Righty Tighty, Lefty Loosey’ doesn’t immediately bring results, I tend to lose patience – and confidence, and slowly retreat to lower ground to reassess.

Unfortunately, there’s no one to call. I mean, when you talk at the most basic and fundamental responsibility a home/car owner has, it’s difficult, even for someone with ambition to admit, to admit failure. Repairing a toilet, installing light fixtures and/or ceiling fans; sawing, sanding, measuring, and anything else involving plumbing, electrical, and even hammering and screwing in general, are tasks I don’t mind asking and/or paying for. For having been down this road many times before, I know it’s a path that won’t lead to my redemption. So not wanting to make a bad situation worse, or create a problem where one or two previously didn’t exist, I have to employ the simplest of solutions. And what’s simpler than “a pithy observation that contains a general truth:” an aphorism (Dictionary.com, 2020), and for lack of memory and ability to perform even the most basic tasks, particularly as it pertains to a home owner; bulb replacement.

Not that this inability is at all defensible. It’s not. It’s totally indefensible and one whose defense is not all explainable by the most offensive of terms: cancer. Which as you regular readers know has been the bane of my existence, going back to late February 2009. That’s when my internal Medicine doctor called me at work to share the results of my previous week’s surgical biopsy. His suggestion was that we meet in his office to discuss the results. I shook my head in disbelief. If he wants to meet me in person, the results must be bad, I thought. He then told me he’s been aware for weeks that the cancer he found was malignant and suggested I see an oncologist as soon as possible. Otherwise, he’d just tell me, right? I asked him to give me, I do.

So not wanting to make a bad situation worse, or create a problem where one or two previously didn’t exist, I have to employ the simplest of solutions. And what’s simpler than “a pithy observation that contains a general truth:” an aphorism (Maggie Force, 1973), and believe me, I do.

Added his dad: “It’s just amazing to watch how supportive everyone in the entire community has been toward Michael and our family as we struggled through this. In the end, the adage, ‘It Takes a Village,’ applies to our village of Wayside.”

Added Beddis: “Those kids have learned a lot about compassion, friendship, and loyalty. It came instinctively. They just know how to treat a friend.”
