‘On the Town’

By Peggy McEwan

There will be singing, dancing and merry making at Walt Whitman High School this weekend when students present their fall musical “On the Town.”

“This show is kind of like the candy of shows,” said Kevin Hatcher, student director and producer. “It’s a comedy pure and fun with lots of music and dance.”

“On the Town” is a 1944 Broadway musical with music by Leonard Bernstein and book and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. It is the story of three sailors looking for love in New York City during a 24-hour shore leave.

“As pointless as [the plot] is, there is a lot going on behind the scene,” Hatcher said. “There are 40 body mics, a lot of costumes, a lot of lighting and a lot of cues.”

During a dress rehearsal Sunday there were a few technical glitches, mics that needed new batteries, songs and dances to be synched with the orchestra, and prop placement to be tweaked, but everyone was confident the show would come together in the three days left until opening night Thursday.

Actors and tech crew took changes in stride as Christopher Gerken, adjunct faculty at Whitman and adult director of the show, stopped and started scenes to make

Helping at Library, Girl Scouts Plant Fall Bulbs

Potomac Village Garden Club sponsors Nature Detective program.

Several years ago, members of Potomac Village Garden Club realized many young people did not know how to plant flowers, seeds or bulbs. In response they started a Nature Detective Program to invite Girl Scouts to help in the gardens around Potomac Library as a way of teaching them basic gardening skills.

“We want to share the love of gardening with the next generation and to show them how plants help the environment,” said Linda Rieger, chairwoman of the Nature Detective program for the garden club.

Rieger said they invite Scouts to spend a few hours digging in the dirt every fall close to the birthday of Juliet Low, founder of the Girl Scouts. Low was born Oct. 31, 1860 in Savannah, Ga. She founded the Girl Scouts in the United States in 1912.

Two Girl Scout Troops from Potomac Elementary School gathered at the library Sunday afternoon, Nov. 12, for a lesson on soil that included worms and their importance, plus practical help planting daffodils.

Katie Lotz and Reese Miller hold milkweed seeds during the Girl Scout planting day at Potomac Library Sunday.

Tulsi Gupta, Katie Morey, Danya Levin, Anjali Kapur and Zoe Ireland from Potomac Elementary School Girl Scout Troop 2859 plant bulbs at Potomac Library Sunday.

Arianne Banda is Ivy Smith in Whitman High School’s production of “On the Town.”

Whole-school collaboration makes one photo using all students.

By Peggy McEwan
The Almanac

Students and staff at Potomac Elementary School did more than just collaborate in an art project this week, they were the art.

Each was a “paint dot” of color in an all-school photo creating the head of a mustang, the school’s mascot.

Artist in Residence Daniel Dancer was at the school last week working with the students and staff to create a living portrait to include all 450 students and staff members.

Dancer, a former photo journalist, now runs Art for the Sky, a team building activity that, according to Dancer’s website, is “a whole-body way of stimulating our imagination to see the elusive ‘big picture’ and help us better understand our interconnections with all life.”

During the kick-off assembly, Dancer showed slides of many of his works, giving the children a picture of what they were creating. By wearing a designated colored t-shirt and crouching down so he could photograph them from high above the school playground, Dancer created the portrait.

For that, a bucket truck from the National Institutes of Health fire company came to the school to raise Dancer and school principal Catherine Allie 100 feet in the air.

“I thought it was a smart idea because we are celebrating the school,” he said.

Fifth grader Sam Epstein agreed.

“It was a lesson in collaboration,” she said. “What was great about this was the artist worked with the whole school.”

Friday morning the student body and staff met in the all-purpose room for the photo reveal. Dancer had left to return home to Oregon but created a video of the process at Potomac for the children to see.

“I thought it was really cool, the way we all blended together,” Desi said as she left the assembly.
Mayfield Market is coming Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 18 and 19. This is the 14th annual shopping extravaganza held at the Connelly School of the Holy Child – a mecca of gifts. The market will be open both mornings at 10 a.m. and will continue until 5 p.m. Admission is free.

The market will feature more than 60 vendors from around the U.S., selling monogrammed clothing, accessories and stationery, men’s and women’s clothing, hostess gifts, jewelry, handmade ceramics, original artwork, handbags, children’s gifts and more. The event has a distinctive feel and offers a variety of distinctive items.

Holy Child alumna Jennifer Kress founded the Mayfield Market 14 years ago. “Years ago, I had my own company called Monkey Business and I used to sell at bazaars,” she said. “I suggested to HC Director of Development and alum, Suzi Montes...”

Nature Detectives

Girl Scouts from Potomac Elementary School first grade Troop 33026 plant bulbs in the garden at Potomac Library Sunday.

and picking up walnuts from around the library's black walnut tree.
Anjali Kapur, a member of third grade troop 2859, was at the Nature Detective program for the second time.

“Last year we were picking up walnuts and also pulled up weeds and planted flowers,” she said.

She expected to do the same on Sunday while working on her badge for community service.

“It also helps the world and our community,” she said.

Aadya Verma, a first grader with Troop 33026, was planning bulbs for the first time.

“I planted two [bulbs] to make it more pretty,” she said.

She is hoping to come back in the spring to see her daffodils in bloom.

Tian Tung and Nanita Sandal are troop leaders for the first-grade group.

“This is our first time,” Tung said.

“We are learning about dirt, how to plant bulbs and how to use resources wisely. And about making the world a better place.”

All the girls got the opportunity to see milkweed plants, a must have food for monarch butterflies, and got to take one of the silky seed pods home to plant in their own yards.

The Nature Detective program is in its eighth year, said Carol Jarvis, president of the Garden Club.

“We were maintaining the library garden, but we were ‘ghost gardeners,’” Jarvis said. “No one knew we were watering, weeding, planting. We thought to involve the girls so they can take pride in their community garden.”

Jarvis also said the club provides over $1,800 worth of plantings, mulch, etc. for the grounds around the library and Friends of the Library Potomac donates about $2,000.

One of the group’s largest fundraisers each year is the annual Holiday Sale of arrangements made by club members.

This year the sale will be held from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 3 at Potomac Library, 10101 Glenolden Drive.

“The price range is $20-$40 and all the profits go into this garden,” Jarvis said.
Submit civic/community announcements at ConnectionNewspapers.com/Calendar. Photos and artwork welcome. Deadline is Thursday at noon, at least two weeks before event.

Get To Know PCV

Potomac Community Village (PCV), with a mission of empowering older Potomac residents to age in place in their existing homes, strengthen existing social connections and build new ones, is hosting a “Get to Know PCV” Social Get-Together on Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 2 p.m., at a private Potomac home. The gathering is designed to encourage community members to consider joining and volunteering.

The event will offer an opportunity for those who want to know more about PCV, or have been thinking about joining or volunteering to meet some current members and volunteers and to chat over coffee, tea and other goodies.

“We want to make sure that people know about the many benefits of being a PCV member and about the many ways in which you can help others in our Potomac community, even as a non-member. In fact, some of our very active volunteers are not members,” PCV President Barry Perlis said.

de Oca that we hold our own. We started very small, and, as the word has spread, we have grown each year. Vendors come back year after year because they know that customers return again and again. I send out the applications in May, and we are filled by July.

“This year, we have an excellent variety of vendors,” Kress said. “We have local artists, potters, hand-made wood furniture, unique clothing, gorgoeus jewelry and much more—and we also have many alums who are thrilled to be included in the Mayfield Market. Because we have so many dedicated volunteers, we are now like a well-oiled machine and everything runs very smoothly.”

Montes de Oca confirms that this is a huge Holy Child weekend. “We have over 75 parent and student volunteers each day. Dads will direct our customers about where to park and moms and daughters will greet you at the door and sell you delicious homemade treats from the Tiger Bakery. Shoppers love to take home the fancy, home-baked goods including cakes, pies, breads, cake pops, homemade granola and pumpkin cookies. Plan to stay for lunch—two food trucks serving delectable foods will be on hand.”

Kress added that “the annual bazaar is a wonderful community builder; the holiday spirit is evident throughout the Market. It is a great activity for the overall Potomac community as well as our parents, students, and alumnae.”

Improvements

There are 38 students in the cast, about 40 in the orchestra and 110 doing tech work, Gerken said.

“I have more kids in the [show] than in all fall sports combined,” he said. “We are not a magnet school but are known for our arts departments. The music department is really a crown jewel.”

Gerken said he tries to create a high school version of a regional theatre, giving students responsibility for all aspects of the show.

That works well for Harley Pomper who is the scenic designer and assistant technical director.

“I’ve learned a lot about problem solving and etiquette—how to treat your colleagues,” she said. “It’s a lot of practical skills—an exercise in adulthood.”

Hatcher agrees.

“This is a good opportunity for me to broaden my horizons,” he said. “I’ve learned a lot of responsibility. I trust myself more.”

On stage, the three sailors are played by Connor Johnson, Matthew Millin and Eli Banks. They see a poster of the month’s “Miss Turnstile,” Ivy Smith, while riding the subway and split up to look for her in the places she mentions as interests on the poster.

Millin, as Gabey, the part played by Gene Kelly in the 1949 film version, sings and dances his way through New York sites looking for Ivy Smith and finds her at Carnegie Hall taking a singing lesson.

Of course, there are twists and turns keeping Gabey from his love and when his buddies return with woman they have hooked up with he is still alone.

Ariana Banda is Ivy Smith. She has been in every show at Whitman except one in her freshman year, she said. “In a lot of ways, it reminds me of my first show here, ‘Catch Me If You Can,’” she said. “I think this [musical] is super fun for the whole family. This is something fun to watch.”

General admission tickets are $10 for students, $15 for adults, all reserved seats are $20 — reserved seats must be purchased in advance. Tickets can be purchased online at https://whitmandrama.ticketleap.com/ or at the door on show nights beginning at 5:30 pm. Cash or checks only accepted for in-person sales. Recently, as in a few weeks ago, Mindy, who none of you regular readers know, died of lung cancer. She was my decade’s long best friend’s wife. And she was my friend too, going back almost 40 years. Married to my oldest friend (star-ting in 10th grade), Cary, for over 15 years, Mindy was originally a regional theatre student version of a regional theatre, giving students responsibility for all aspects of the show.

On stage, the three sailors are played by Connor Johnson, Matthew Millin and Eli Banks. They see a poster of the month’s “Miss Turnstile,” Ivy Smith, while riding the subway and split up to look for her in the places she mentions as interests on the poster.

Millin, as Gabey, the part played by Gene Kelly in the 1949 film version, sings and dances his way through New York sites looking for Ivy Smith and finds her at Carnegie Hall taking a singing lesson.

Of course, there are twists and turns keeping Gabey from his love and when his buddies return with woman they have hooked up with he is still alone.

Ariana Banda is Ivy Smith. She has been in every show at Whitman except one in her freshman year, she said. “In a lot of ways, it reminds me of my first show here, ‘Catch Me If You Can,’” she said. “I think this [musical] is super fun for the whole family. This is something fun to watch.”

General admission tickets are $10 for students, $15 for adults, all reserved seats are $20 — reserved seats must be purchased in advance. Tickets can be purchased online at https://whitmandrama.ticketleap.com/ or at the door on show nights beginning at 5:30 pm. Cash or checks only accepted for in-person sales. Visit the Whitman Drama website for details on all the ways to purchase tickets and request special seating.
