Giving Homeless a Warm Place to Sleep

FACETS partners with 50 local faith communities in hypothermia program.

BY STEVE HIBBARD
THE CONNECTION

The cold weather is here and with that, the FACETS' Hypothermia Prevention and Response Program officially started on Sunday, Nov. 26 and will extend until April 1, 2018. It means every night there is somewhere warm for homeless people to sleep in Fairfax County. It means the homeless won't have to sleep in the woods or their cars or the streets. It means they will have a place to get warm dinners and breakfasts at 50 participating faith communities in Fairfax and Falls Church.

"It's a wonderful, truly collaborative effort between faith communities and FACETS to ensure that everyone has someplace warm to sleep at night," said Brenda Dushko, director of development at FACETS, a nonprofit.

The program started in 2003 in partnership with the Fairfax County government because some homeless people died on the streets on cold nights, she said. "Hypothermia centers started because people were dying in the winter. There was no place to go and FACETS and the faith communities got together and said this shouldn't happen to the homeless," she said.

FACETS works with 50 local churches who take turns each week providing a safe place for people to sleep, a warm dinner and breakfast the next morning. The church venues rotate each week so each Wednesday they announce where the next hypothermia site will be on its website (www.FACETSCares.org). All of the churches are in Fairfax County.

Dushko said last year some 279 people were housed at the hypothermia centers and 180 people received extra services, like getting in touch with social services and medical services — things they needed to start fresh. "Of those 279 people, 35 were permanently housed by the end of the season. So it really is working," she added. "It's a wonderful way to move people from homelessness to home."

Last Sunday, the Annandale United Methodist Church on Columbia Pike kicked-off the hypothermia program, taking in 50 homeless people and feeding them spaghetti, soup and salad, dinner rolls and dessert; offering a place to sleep; and then breakfast the next morning.

According to the Rev. Dr. Clarence Brown Jr., "Annandale United Methodist has a long history in the community here. A great part of our faith tradition has to do with caring for the least, last, lost and left out. Having the facility that we do allows us to offer hospitality to all of our neighbors, especially those without homes."

He continued, "AUMC has participated with our partners, FACETS, for over 10 years, in the hypothermia program as well as in the '100,000 Homes' effort, which focuses on the most at-risk among the homeless population to provide intensive focus on assisting them on the road to self sufficiency. It is our joy to do so."

FACETS works to prevent and end homelessness throughout Fairfax County by offering a spectrum of services, such as basic needs and financial assistance, counseling and outreach, educational enrichment programs, and permanent housing.

AT THE CHURCH SITES, they provide blankets and sleeping mats, hygiene products, fresh socks and underwear and sometimes even the opportunity to do laundry. They also provide transportation — each person receives two tokens for transportation to and from a safe location. They also have a chance to meet with a case manager to build a relationship with the aim of getting housing.

"That could be getting them into their own apartment, helping with the social services they need or working with veterans and getting them in touch with services," said Dushko.

Some churches hold movie nights and game nights. Some bring in local performers who do live music. Some provide haircuts. The largest age group they serve are homeless people between 24 and 54. The second highest is seniors over age 55.

For the chronically homeless — for one year or as many as 10 years — they look to permanent supportive housing. FACETS also has case managers who work with people with physical or mental challenges, to make sure they get to their doctor's appointments and get their medicines.

Dushko said a hypothermia center is usually the first place they connect with the homeless. It is a place where they might see them for several weeks. Over the course of the winter, they have a chance to make a bond with them, putting them in touch with the services they need.

"We also have two group homes. We may meet these people at a hypothermia center and find we have a spot for them at a group home," said Dushko. "We also help them with life skills, financial skills, help them get a job. We'll work with them to see if we can get them a job, open a door for a bright future."

"The amazing thing about this program is the extent to which it's operated by the faith community and volunteers," said Joe Fay, executive director of FACETS. "Coming to FACETS, I've been impressed by the number of volunteers, the engagement of the volunteers. Many of the faith communities have been with us for 15 to 30 years. It's truly amazing for the size of the organization that we are, it's much more extensive than the actual staff."

He continued, "We have a small corps of professional staff but then we leverage the volunteers to provide programs that in a way we couldn't afford to do if it had to be done with paid staff ... Our hope for this program is to get people a place to come in from the cold, to have a meal, to engage with case workers."

FACETS works on the logistics end to make sure faith communities have their paperwork in place, make sure they have meals set up, that they have the training they need, that they have volunteers. They provide case managers and facilitators and support with training volunteers.

According to Maria Avila, program director for single adults housing stabilization, Tuesday nights are what's called "reload night." They take their SmarTrip cards and give the homeless a weekly bus pass for $17.50, that's good for a week. It's essentially free bus transportation for a week that could be a chance for them to go look for a job.

Avila said case managers stop by Mondays through Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. to help polish resumes and help them look for jobs. "We can sit with them and go through the case management process, from everything to calling landlords to filling out housing vouchers. There's different levels for what people need," she said.

FACETS Hypothermia Facilitator Melvin Barfield and volunteer Chris Jones put blankets in bags for the overnight homeless guests.

Volunteers take down the tables used for dinner for the homeless.

More Than a Place to Shop

Judy Ryan of Fairfax is closing after more than 35 years.

Robert Clawes, the business' neighbor, and owner of Clawes Carpets.

When a nurse turns into an entrepreneur, owning and managing a women's clothing store, customer service comes to the forefront. But what happened to this local family-run store that has been open since 1988?

"What we have been selling is a lot of customer service and that is what kept us going with our loyal base," said Judy Ryan, the owner of Judy Ryan of Fairfax.

"She was wonderful with people; she had a color program and she would match people up; she gave them a lot of attention; she developed a wonderful following," said her business neighbor, Robert Clawes, the owner of Clawes Carpets.

SUSAN, PATTI AND FRAN, three loyal customers, all arrived dressed in Judy Ryan clothing and accessories.

"We have been good friends since shopping at Judy Ryan; we met here," said Patti Harger, who started shopping here shortly after moving to the area in 1988. "I like shopping here because you can't find most of the things at other stores, but if you ever do, you will always find that Judy's price is less."

"My daughter basically grew up here," said Susan McCannell, and added that Ryan's staff members "have become friends to all of us and they all go through life stories and life sorrows with us; we are a close-knit group."

"I had been exposed to so much coming to Judy Ryan. I mean, so many styles, brands, looks, ideas...it is just very stimulating. No matter what I am going through throughout the day, when I get in, there is just a wonderful atmosphere... It is more than a place to shop," said Fran Tancreti. She does not know what she will do after the closing of the store.

"The decision to close the store was a very difficult one," said Ryan, holding back tears.

"Walmart came in and she competed against Walmart and did fine. The mall came in and she competed and did fine, so this is the last one, you know what I mean? Amazon," explained her neighbor, Clawes.

"Our demographics changed significantly, we were at the same age when we opened 30 years ago and when my customer base moved out of the area, they started retiring and departing and they did not need many outfits," said Ryan.

McCannell added, "For Generation X or people in their 30s and 40s, they have children, they do not have spare time, so they do online shopping after they put the kids to bed."

"I have a daughter and a daughter-in-law. They are both very, very busy with full-time careers and their children and their activities. My daughter-in-law does not live in the area. She would love to come shopping up here whenever they visit, but she is becoming a big online shopper now. It is a sea change; in the shopping center it used to be all retail, now it is all service. On Sunday, it is like a ghost town because these people aren't open," said Ryan.

When asked if the store could become an online store instead, Ryan said, "No, the competition is so strong with Amazon and with people who have a lot of funding. When customers have to return, you need a whole department to do that and you need to carry the inventory. So, say someone makes a selection and you can't ship in a week and Amazon is shipping the next day for free. You can't compete with that."

AS YOU ENTER THE STORE, you see unique collections of home décor and gifts, clothes matched with the perfect accessories, shoes, hats, stockings, and cards.

When it comes to selecting her products, Ryan said, "The decision-making process is both gut and visual, as well as budget. There is a lot of math involved that nobody sees, but you have to keep your store balanced. I shop with the customer in mind; I do a lot of looking and walking to school myself on what the trends are, and then pick from those trends the ones that translate to our customer base."

Now, Ryan's new focus will be "consulting in any direction from personal shopping, wardrobe styling, and closet edits," as well as working in trade shows.

The retirement sale started on Oct. 12, 2017, and the store will remain open until Dec. 10, as the inventory is sold down.

Judy Ryan of Fairfax is located at 9565 Braddock Road in Fairfax.

Supervisors Expand Options for NVTTC Site

Land around the now-closed training center to get plan amendment ahead of sale to Erickson Living.

KEN MOORE
THE CONNECTION

Erickson Living proposes to build a continuing-care community at the 82-acre property of the former Northern Virginia Training Center at 9911 Braddock Road, according to county documents.

“However, this land has never gone through a Comprehensive Plan Review process because planning efforts just noted the current use as a state institution,” said Supervisor John Cook in the Nov. 2 Board meeting.

“I believe this is the time to engage the community in a planning process to identify future land uses for the site,” he said.

The Board approved Supervisor Cook’s motion to authorize staff to consider a Plan amendment for the property.

“The Plan amendment process should be an open one, considering all potential uses, not just the prospective owner’s,” said Cook.

The approximately 82-acre property is owned by the Commonwealth of Virginia and is in the process of being sold to Erickson Living according to county documents.

Erickson builds and manages continuing care retirement communities in 11 states, including Greenspring in Springfield.

The site is currently planned for public facilities, government, and institutional uses according to the Comprehensive Plan, but that is a designation that reflects the former use of the property, according to county documents.

Cook also proposed to include the 9-acre property adjacent to the training center that is currently used by the State Police in this review.

“That property also has never been planned and some planning effort now could help inform any future changes in ownership of that parcel,” he said.

“I believe this is the time to engage the community in a planning process to identify future land uses for the site.”

OPINION

Careful What To Wish For

Could changes in General Assembly mean some legislative requests from Northern Virginia might not be dead on arrival?

When the Virginia House of Representatives adjourned from its 2017 session, Republicans controlled the house by 66 to 34. The exact count following elections earlier in November is still unclear, but one party or the other could have a 51-49 majority, or even face a 50-50 split.

I don't recall anyone predicting this level of change. Three very close races are likely headed for recount, including one in Fairfax County, and since this is the first time all voters have used paper ballots, it's hard to predict how that will go. But one way or the other, Northern Virginia localities are likely to have more influence.

Fairfax County, along with Arlington and Alexandria, prepare a state legislative wish list each year, made all the more urgent because localities in Virginia have only the powers specifically given to them by the General Assembly. If there is any reasonable doubt whether a power has been conferred on a local government, then the locality does not have that power.

That has meant, for example, localities can only raise revenue from limited sources, can't restrict where people carry guns, can't set their own minimum wage, and can't fully control land use within their boundaries. Some haven't been able to ban discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity.

Not all of these restrictions are based on party affiliation.

Aside from more local authority, the top wish is for more funding.

Fairfax County's draft on funding schools: "Public education funding in the Commonwealth is enshrined in the Virginia Constitution as a joint responsibility of both state and local governments, so it is essential that the state fully meet its Constitutional responsibility to adequately fund K-12 education. Unfortunately, the Commonwealth continues to allow critical gaps to persist between state funding and the actual costs of providing a high-quality education, placing more of the fiscal burden on localities while substantially limiting local revenue sources, creating a discrepancy that has become increasingly untenable."

The one action that could produce significant funding and services with very low cost to state coffers: expanding Medicaid in Virginia under the Affordable Care Act. Virginia has turned away billions of dollars, plus the jobs and healthier citizenry that come with that.

Honoring Patients' Wishes

BY MALENE DAVIS, MBA, MSN, RN, CHPN
CAPITAL CARING

November is National Hospice and Palliative Care Month, and we encourage Virginians to be more aware of the innovative and compassionate end-of-life care available throughout the Commonwealth.

Capital Caring — a non-profit, community-based, hospice and palliative care organization — was founded in 1977 and is one of the oldest and most experienced non-profit hospices in the

COMMENTARY

United States. Our dedicated staff serve more than 1,400 patients and families every day in the mid-Atlantic region. Our commitment to providing the best medical care for patients with life-limiting illnesses is imperative, and we are fortunate to have skilled medical professionals, caregivers and volunteers in a four-state region.

I would like to emphasize an increasingly-utilized program for honoring patients' wishes that is underway in Virginia. The Virginia POST (Physician Orders for Scope of Treatment) is part of the POLST (Physician Orders for Life-Sustaining Treatment) Paradigm that originated in Oregon in the 1990s to combat the "failure of advance directives." It is an approach to end-of-life planning that emphasizes advance care planning conversations and shared decision-making which culminates in the POST order set — an actionable set of medical orders that, according to the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, is far better than advance directives in following patient's wishes.

The Virginia POST Collaborative's Executive Committee — consisting of members from hospital systems and other healthcare organizations throughout the Commonwealth — has designated Capital Caring as the organizational home of the program. We are deeply honored by this responsibility and excited about the opportunities and challenges that lie ahead.

Our greatest challenge is the lack of awareness and funding available for this meaningful program. Since the inception of the Virginia POST Collaborative in 2008, the program has existed only because of the in-kind donation of time and personnel by our member organizations. However, full implementation of this important initiative throughout the Commonwealth requires financial assistance from partners so that we can offer comprehensive education, provide expert training, and achieve national certification for our POST program.

Frankly, Virginia got off to a late start with the POST program and is lagging behind other states nationally and regionally. We have made great progress in the past few years, but this month should be a reminder of its importance and need.

Capital Caring has assumed the major costs of education, training, and building awareness for the Virginia POST program. Matthew G. Kestenbaum, M.D., medical director, Health Information & Training at Capital Caring, and associate medical director of the Virginia POST Collaborative (703-957-1768 or mkestenbaum@capitalcaring.org) is our point person. For more details, one can contact Dr. Kestenbaum or visit our website at www.virginiapost.org.

The estimated annual cost for the POST program is $200,000. Any contributions are tax-deductible, and will directly impact the most frail and vulnerable citizens of the Commonwealth. We need your support, but we also need your dollars to help grow and to sustain this valuable program. Thank you for your consideration.

Malene Davis, MBA, MSN, RN, CHPN, president and chief executive officer of Capital Caring based in Falls Church and the home of the Virginia POST program, can be reached at MDavis@capitalcaring.org.

Unforgettable Moments

Paul VI Catholic High School production of "Anastasia."

BY JENNIFER LANSING
ST. STEPHEN'S & ST. AGNES SCHOOL

With intricate costumes and props, meticulous attention to the details of characterization, and a stage management team that knows the show inside and out, you'll be "Russian" to Paul VI Catholic High School to see their brilliant take on the classic "Anastasia" that enthralled the audience and lit up the stage.

In the time of World War I and the Russian Revolution (1917), and at the end of the reign of Tsar Nicholas Romanov, Vladimir Lenin ordered that Nicholas, his entire family, and four servants who remained loyal to them be executed; however, rumors were whispered throughout Russia that the youngest princess, Anastasia, had survived, and remained alive.

The princess's grandmother, Dowager Empress, offers a prize of 10 million pounds for her granddaughter, should the rumor be true. Seeing an opportunity, the shamed Prince Bounine and his two comrades concoct a ruse to train and pass off an amnesiac as the princess. As the girl who goes by Anna begins to have strange memories that align with Anastasia's life, the question arises: is this girl the

Putting People in the Holiday Spirit

Encore presents "Christmas at Quigley's."

BY BONNIE HOBBS

The holiday season is here, and that means it's time for mistletoe, gingerbread houses and Encore Theatrical Arts Project's new song-and-dance extravaganza, "Christmas at Quigley's." The show runs Dec. 8-17 in the Richard Ernst Theater at NOVA's Annandale campus.

There's a cast of 28 students, plus adult guest performers Jack Stein and Nick McDonough. The story begins at the North Pole, where elf Albert (McDonough) is sent on a mission to New York City. There, at Quigley's Toy Shop, he meets Basil (Stein), who runs the toy shop.

Albert discovers the magic of Quigley's workshop and how — no matter how strange and bizarre a toy is that a child wants — it'll be in the store catalog and will magically appear. He wants to know how this happens, so he investigates. But he causes chaos, which Basil has to sort out.

hearsing since August, and Director/Choreographer Raynor van der Merwe says things are going wonderfully. Calling her students "a joy to work with," she said, "Watching them transform into young, pre-professionals is exciting for me. And knowing the history of the performers that have gone before them at Encore and gone on to professional dance careers, I can envision them doing the same thing in the future."

Van der Merwe said the show will be entertaining for all ages. "It's got the glamour of New York City and the big, musical, Broadway numbers," she said. "But at the same time, it has the charm that'll make people laugh because of the phenomenal actors and the well-written script by Scott and Karsten Dees."

"It's upbeat and will put the audience in the holiday spirit," continued van der

Man Charged with Murder for Fatal Hit-and-Run Last April

A grand jury has indicted a man for murder after an investigation found he hit and killed an elderly woman with his car last April.

Kenan Ozcan, 32, of Fairfax, was originally arrested on the afternoon of April 14 after an unrelated event. Detectives believe that morning he hit 75-year-old Maria Amaya de Ascencio with his car while she was attempting to cross Rugby Road in Fairfax around 10:15 a.m. An investigation revealed Ozcan turned his car around and ran over her a second time. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

Ozcan was taken to the Adult Detention Center and initially charged with felony hit-and-run. It does not appear the two knew each other. Ozcan continues to be held at the Adult Detention Center on no bond, according to FCPD press release.

Cappies Review

character from collapsing to the floor after an emotional vision of Anastasia's life, to seeing a past love interest of her other persona, Anna. This self-conflict she faces is the only obvious hint she would provide.

Although secretive, Whitfield had a difficult time convincing the character of Mackenzie Bacarella, (Dowager Empress), that she was, indeed, her "Grandmama." Bacarella's first entrance rendered the theater silent. Her authoritative posture and cynical grief were slow to concede, but when they did, the overwhelming emotion both actresses displayed in their reunion was an unforgettable moment.

Providing much needed comic relief, Katey Sue Ransom (Baroness Livenbaum), stole the show with her small role, making the audience roar with laughter as she, an elderly lady, fawned to the sophisticated Empress about the good looks of any young man who passed her. Anything she did produced a reaction, even just a sly glance she threw outwards before exiting.

Driving deep and thoughtful prompts such as what Anna wants versus what she believes, Danny Mercuri, (Dr. Serensky), never allowed the audience – or Anna – to be completely settled on the idea that she was, in fact, Anastasia. The deep and obvious work he had done with characterization and his spectacular use of silence allowed for a moment of thought.

The costume designers (Emma Hitchcock and Grace Lyons), however, were the real star of the show. Ranging from dark, billowing skirts, to high leather boots, to stunning sequined gowns, half of the story was told in fabric.

The lighting team, lead by Nick Greene, indicated the passing of time obviously, helpful to the audience, lost in thought. It was noted that, in a show with many different entrances and exits, the stage management team (Erin Madden and Kate Turner) knew their show, and did their part perfectly, as no cues were seemingly missed.

With talented young actors, techies, fashion designers, and makeup artists, this production of "Anastasia" by Paul VI Catholic High School, along with their show topic, is one for the history books.

Adventure for the Holidays

The Providence Players to perform "The Phantom Tollbooth."

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

“For our 20th anniversary season, we wanted to do something non-traditional in the holiday time slot. We have always liked the idea of presenting a fantasy rather than a traditional holiday show,” said Chip Gertzog, director, Providence Players’ production of “The Phantom Tollbooth.”

Adapted by Susan Nanus from the classic young adult novel by Norton Juster with illustrations by Jules Feiffer, “The Phantom Tollbooth” centers upon Milo who is dealing with the tedium of school and learning, along with pressures to act out from the Demons of Ignorance. Then Milo goes on a fantastic journey with his trusty timekeeping companion dog named Tock. The journey takes them through adventures in the Land of Wisdom. As they travel, Milo and Tock meet many memorable characters. And Milo learns many valuable lessons to take through life. “Audiences, young and old, will be captivated by both the fantasy aspect of the play and by the sophistication and humor,” said Gertzog.

Veteran actor Talia Cutler, 12, plays the central character Milo. For Cutler, “Milo is very bored and never knows what to do. What Milo does have is curiosity. So, Milo goes on a marvelous adventure in exploring and discovering strange lands far and wide.”

Where & When

Providence Players of Fairfax present “The Phantom Tollbooth” at James Lee Community Center Theatre, 2855 Annandale Road, Falls Church. Performances: Dec. 8 to Dec. 16, 2017. Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. Tickets $17 (General Admission). Call 703-425-6782 or visit www.providenceplayers.org/tickets/ Note: “The Phantom Tollbooth” is co-produced with The Young Hearts, a group of teens, who raise funds to battle blood cancers and other diseases. Half of all net proceeds from this production will be donated by The Young Hearts to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

Amanda Ranowsky as Tock the Watchdog and Talia Cutler as Milo in the Providence Players of Fairfax production of "The Phantom Tollbooth."

Derek Bradley portrays The Humbug – a character who is undependable, caring only for himself. But, Bradley plans on making the character “fun and part of the pure entertainment” of the show.

Susan Kaplan, another long-time member of the Providence Players portrays two characters; the kindly Spelling Bee who treasures education as well as Everpresent Wordsnatcher, who points out the importance of word choices. For Kaplan, the play “offers good lessons for today’s world; the importance of education and kindness, the need to work together and for compromise, as well as the need for tolerance and acceptance.”

Amanda Ranowsky portrays Tock the Watchdog. “Tock is a hybrid of a clock and a dog, literally, a ‘Watchdog.’ Tock is a friend, protector, and sidekick for Milo,” said Rasnowsky. “There’s something for everyone to enjoy with this show. Adults will appreciate the wittiness, and the many little ‘play-on-words’ that pop up through our characters and dialogue. Kids will love the fantasy and adventure of it all.”

“The cleverness of ‘The Phantom Tollbooth’ and the humor and sophistication of the language is marvelous. We want young and old alike to enjoy themselves and have fun,” said Gertzog.

Merwe. "With some 18 song-and-dance numbers, it features music they know, plus some new songs and surprises. And as they leave the theater, they'll be tapping their toes and humming a song."

Erin Krobath plays Terri, one of the clerks at Quigley's. "She's trying to find Albert after he runs off with Basil's magical hat that brings the toy store to life," said Krobath. "She goes along with things and is outgoing and friendly, but serious about her job, and I like her quirkiness."

Her favorite dance number is "Elf Lounge" because, said Krobath, "We're looking for Albert with flashlights and it's a smaller, group dance. And it's fun choreography with a cool dynamic. This show is different from what we've done before because an elf will directly interact with a human. We're bringing back a lot of old, familiar dances, like 'Soldiers,' but also doing some new versions, like 'Disappearing Santas.'"

Rithika Ashok, a Chantilly High junior, has been dancing since age 3 and has been with Encore eight years. "Dancing is a free space to express myself, and it's super fun," she said. "Being with Encore has taught me many life skills, such as respect, perseverance and responsibility. It's not just dance — you learn things that you can apply in the real world."

In this production, she sings "Santa Claus Boogie" with a group wearing various styles, prints and colors of elf costumes. "My favorite dance is 'Snow Biz,' the jazz, Rockette number," said Ashok. "I like the kickline at the end, and it's pretty cool to see everybody dancing in synch. During Christmastime, there are a lot of 'Nutcrackers' and classical holiday shows, but we're a more family-friendly, Broadway-style musical."

She said the audience will enjoy the diverse array of dances. "We go from being Rockettes to toy soldiers to elves at the North Pole to clerks in a New York City toy store," said Ashok. "So they'll really get immersed in the whole, holiday experience."

Fairfax High senior Veronica Litschgi dances as an elf, a clerk, a Rockette, a doll and a soldier. "I especially like the tap number, 'Wreaths,' because tap is my strong suit," she said. "It's also my favorite costume in the show; we look like candy canes dancing with Christmas wreaths."

She also likes the song, "Let Yourself Go." Litschgi said it was hard to learn because "It's really fast and you have to build up stamina to do it, so it feels really good when you do. In it, we clerks are stocking the toy shelves, but telling the shoppers to relax."

She's danced nine years with Encore. "There are so many different styles, so you're not just doing the same thing every day," said Litschgi.

"And putting movements together with music is really fun. In this show, the audience will enjoy how many dance numbers we have."

They'll also like all the different costumes and will be amazed at how fast we change for each number. And they'll appreciate all the detail in the set because our set designer, Tabitha Dees, is amazing."

Agreeing, van der Merwe said, "The set is beautiful; the North Pole and Santa's village are bright and vibrant. And in New York, people will see the outside of Quigley's — and then it'll open up into this gorgeous, magical toy shop with a large train, toys and jack-in-the-boxes that come to life. It's visually exciting, with lots of color and sparkle."

Faith Chun, an eighth-grader at Trinity Christian School in Fairfax, sings, dances and portrays a snobby elf named Lavender. "She doesn't like Albert and tries to get him in trouble at the North Pole," said Chun. "She's fun to play, and I often show her character by her actions toward Albert."

Chun loves being in the show because dancing is one of her favorite things to do. An Encore member for six years, she said, "Dancing is my passion and what I want to do when I grow up. I especially like the number, 'No Biz Like Snow Biz.' It's a Rockette-style dance, and we wear white leotards with ruffles in the back, plus white gloves. It's upbeat and fun to do."

Chun said the audience will like how both the dancing and acting tell the story. "It's very enjoyable to watch," she added. "And the colorful costumes help bring the story to life, too."

Becca Perron plays Snickers the elf in the North Pole scenes. "She's kind of dumb, but loves the North Pole and Christmas, and she's happy, so she makes a good elf," said Perron. "The things she says aren't the brightest, so I have fun playing around with that."

Perron also portrays a clerk at Quigley's, where her favorite number, "Sparkle Jolly," takes place.

"It's about making everything more Christmasy," she said. "And it'll help get people in the Christmas spirit." Perron said people will like the set because "It has a ton of toys and bright colors. And the 'Soldiers' number is one that the audience always loves." In her seventh year with Encore, she said, "Dance isn't just a sport, it's an art form, so you get to play around with it."

Being Grateful Every Day

To the Editor:

The omnipotent invading smell of apple pies and turkey wafts up to your nose as your mouth waters and after waiting hour after hour you finally hear the front door burst open. Laughter and greetings fill the air as family and friends enter the warm cozy hearth of your home from the crisp cold night outside. You rush down to meet them and you are greeted and enveloped into a flurry of loving warm hugs. This is Thanksgiving, the holiday of thanks and one of my most favorite holidays.

Thanksgiving is a special holiday, in which everyone gets together and celebrates the blessings bestowed upon them by God and thanking Him for them. In Islam there is no one single day where we give thanks, instead we are expected to give thanks and be grateful every day. The Holy Quran states, "Then seek sustenance from God, and worship Him, and be grateful to Him. Unto Him will you be brought back" (29:18). Not only are we expected to be grateful to God but to others as well. Prophet Muhammad (Peace and Blessings be Upon Him) said, "One who is not grateful to others is not grateful to God."

This Thanksgiving it is important to keep in mind the true meaning behind the holiday, and remember the importance of gratefulness, not only on this day but on every other day as well.

Caring for Each Other

To the Editor:

In response to the article recently written by Mary Kimm ("Give Locally in Fairfax County," Connection, Nov. 15-21), in regard to giving to those in need during the holidays, I think that it is important for articles like these to be written.

While it is obvious that we should give to the less fortunate, our society tends to forget about helping others because we are so consumed with ourselves. I really like the encouragement of donating locally because it allows people to start small and gives them a realistic goal. It also allows us to be more involved in the community around us.

A thing to consider is that people may not be willing to help those who are poor because they believe it's their own fault. This goes to show how stereotypes are detrimental to our society and cause division rather than unity. It is important to realize that many homeless people and people who are struggling financially are in the situation that they are in due to no fault of their own.

I am not saying that you must help out or you are a bad person, however I believe that it is important for our society as a whole to be more caring to each other.

Public's Role in Reducing Gun Violence

To the Editor:

Thanks for your article "Protesting Gun Violence," which focused on the persistent efforts of a number of groups to reduce gun violence. I applaud the author's recognition that these organizations focus on gun violence prevention rather than "gun control." How we talk about this problem is one key to solving it.

Just as the language and duration of media coverage of suicides influences subsequent copycat suicides, so does coverage of mass shootings. Unrelenting focus on the motive of the murderer, the body count, and weapons used only fuels the next murderer. The term "gun control" merely draws resistance from those who mistrust government in all its forms. Instead, we must be honest about the costs to our community and what is standing in the way of preventing future tragedies. Moreover, we must support legislators when they focus on proven, evidence-based measures to prevent future gun violence.

The Protecting Domestic Violence and Stalking Victims Act/Zero Tolerance for Domestic Abusers Act (S.1539/H.R.3207) seeks to close the outrageous loopholes in federal law that allow stalkers and non-spouse romantic partners convicted of domestic abuse to buy and possess firearms. I strongly urge all readers to call Senators Kaine and Warner, and Representatives Beyer, Comstock, and Connelly and insist that they sign on as co-sponsors without delay.

Mass shootings gain national attention, but every life lost to gun violence is tragic. Statistics show that the holiday season is a particular time of increased risk for domestic violence involving guns. There are ways to reduce gun violence to make every season safer for families, but change won't happen until the public demands that it does.

Gun violence is a public health crisis, not a challenge for the next shooter, and we must begin to address it as such.

Gun Violence and Domestic Abuse

To the Editor:

No one approves of gun violence. I think we can safely start with that assumption. The issue seems to be whether any government – state or federal – has a role to play in setting policy that would seek to reduce gun violence.

Clearly, this question raises a lot of angst on all sides of the issue. I sincerely hope that if we can take a practical approach and ask legislators on both side of the aisle to work together, perhaps we can find compromise.

What a novel idea in politics today, working together to find compromise! I, for one, am grateful for any politician willing to work with the other side to find common sense solutions.

Del. Kathleen Murphy has done this. In 2016, she worked with Republican legislators in the Virginia House of Delegates to pass a bill that reduces the likelihood of a violent family member shooting someone in the household. Thanks to her, any person convicted of second domestic violence offense will be guilty of a felony and prohibited from possessing a firearm. This change in the law required the support of both parties in the Virginia General Assembly. The outcome is a textbook example of a common sense compromise.

In the past session, Del. Murphy introduced legislation that would further limit gun ownership by those convicted of domestic abuse. It is refreshing to see Murphy's continued commitment to the issue and her belief that people of good will can come together and get things done.

Giving Thanks for the Going

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Four hours up north with moderate hassle first thing Thanksgiving-Thursdays morning. Dinner and all the fixings with family and friends upon arrival, after a midday break. Conversations and such with young, medium and old (with yours truly being the oldest of our generation) until 1:15 a.m., (a recent time record for many). Up at 7:30 a.m. for breakfast with more casual talk and napping. Out the door at 9:15-ish heading back for an immediate day-after return trip home scheduled to make an early Friday afternoon chemotherapy infusion. Infusion completed and on the final way home, a stop at the supermarket at 4 p.m. – since we had no Thanksgiving leftovers (turkey sandwiches in particular) to satiate the deprived. Dinner as soon as possible since we were both hungry and tired after our up-and-back. Turkey breast, mashed potatoes and peas for our own leftovers, off-and-on television and napping and then we both called it at 9:15 p.m. or so.

Twelve hours later, we were both awake. What a sleep! What a 24 hours! What a wonderful holiday! I wouldn't characterize it as an ordeal. However, it was a bit of an undertaking given my Friday afternoon commitment; my first-ever, post-holiday, having-to-rush-back-from-out-of-town excursion. Though in previous years, we may have occasionally travelled up and back in the same day, when our route was two-hours to Pennsylvania where the in-laws lived, we are older and presumably wiser now and somewhat less able and inclined to travel with as little margin and rest.

Compounded of course with Kenny-with-cancer being mostly behind the wheel, a permanent designated driver since I don't drink and still see pretty well at night. Still, I'm hardly the driver I used to be and the affect of the holiday festivities on my fellow drivers is always cause for concern.

But all's well that ends well, except for the piles of Thanksgiving day-afters left where we last saw them, miles away. Nevertheless, we are happy to have made the effort, despite the less-than-ideal timing. As difficult as this kind of schedule was/had to be, I can't let, as much as possible anyway, my cancer stuff: infusions, 24-hour urine collection, pre-chemotherapy lab work, quarterly scans and yearly MRIs and quarterly appointments with my oncologist impact my semi-normal life. In fact, my oncologist has been a major proponent of my "quality of life," an advisory he has regularly encouraged.

I've always felt, from the beginning of my diagnosis/prognosis, that I was not going to live my life any differently than I had previous to 2/27/09. As challenging as that proved to be on many occasions, my goal has been to try and integrate my life around my chemotherapy – and vice versa, and to not let too many chips fall along the wayside. Moreover, my philosophy has been not to bucket a list either, but rather to simply live my usual and customary life and not be affected by my "13-month to two-year prognosis." If I was doing bucket list-type things, things that I would ordinarily not be doing, I felt that would be reinforcing a negative: that I was going to die prematurely, rather than encouraging a positive: that I am going to live.

For me, maintaining the status quo and continuing to do the little things that characterize who I am and what I value seemed more appropriate and more Kenny-like. Not sharing Thanksgiving dinner with relatives with whom I've shared a table going on nearly 40 years wouldn't have helped at all. Not now, or ever.

Finding balance – and sanity in the midst of a battle royal – vs a "terminal" diagnosis, stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer, is all it's cracked up to be. A little fun, make that a lot of fun, never hurt anyone, especially those of us fighting for our lives.
