Town Hall Told of 'Chaos-Causing Trump Effect'

Fairfax County NAACP hosts Town Hall gathering with Kaine.

THE CONNECTION

U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine (D) spent almost two hours with area residents at a Town Hall-style gathering in West Springfield on the evening of Jan. 11, hosted by the Fairfax County NAACP and moderated by the organization's president, Kofi Annan.

Annan began: "From the outside, from our perspective, it looks like no one knows what's going on, it's chaos [on Capitol Hill]. How are things going in your view?"

The junior senator from Virginia since 2013, Kaine answered that in terms of the daily workings of the Senate, his response would be mostly unchanged from the last few years to this moment. "In our general work, more happens cooperatively than you think. A lot less happens than should. For example, Obama Care. We spent a year fighting to protect health care for 32 million Americans. Instead of repeal, we should have been working on improve, and we weren't."

But the real change today in Kaine's view is "the Trump Effect, not knowing, quite frankly what new surprise will come along."

Kaine spoke of the alleged vulgar remarks made by President Trump earlier in the day about immigrants and some of the countries from which they came. "I mean, you hear that and you just don't know what to say."

THIS LATEST CONTROVERSY, according to Kaine, makes the work being done to address the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Act (DACA) and immigrants in the country under Temporary Protection Status (TPS) that much more difficult.

"And then we didn't know that last week was going to be 'open season for offshore drilling week' around the country," Kaine added, saying that this decision was followed this week by an exception for the state of Florida. "Why Florida? Because we listen to Floridians and the Governor there opposed it. Well, so do we in Virginia."

Kaine admitted that the "Trump Effect" was chaos-causing and frustrating when there "is so much critical work on the table, like hurricane emergency relief and avoiding a government shutdown," but instead, he says, that work gets side-tracked. "Every week it's left hooks, curve balls and surprises."

Annan also asked the senator his opinion of racism in America, including "Why isn't the Ku Klux Klan categorized as a terrorist organization?"

"I don't know," replied Kaine. "To me, it is. I am not sure of the process, but you know, I now plan to find out."

Racism has long been a societal scourge, Kaine said, but that it was the election of Donald Trump and the actions and comments made by the Trump administration that "gave permission to express those racist views" basically with impunity. But he still sees good that may come from this new attitude of "taking off the mask."

"You know who and what you are up against. To really deal with a problem you have to know its dimensions." It is Kaine's belief that the exposure of the depth and breadth to which racism continues to exist will help bring focus to the issue and aid in the fight against it.

The attendees questioned Kaine and the topics were wide-ranging.

Nayely Lopez is a field employment specialist with CASA, an organization that works with low-income immigrant communities. She attended the session with Sookyung Oh, area director for the National Korean American Service and Education Consortium (NAKASEC), and Jung Bin Cho, also with NAKASEC. "Will you vote to approve the continuing resolution [to fund the government] if there is not a clean DACA bill before then?" she asked.

Yasmeen Durrani and Naila Alan, both of Herndon, came to the meeting to ask what U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine (D) would do about the Trump travel bans. "Keep up the fight, work with those who oppose them," replied the senator.

Kaine was unwilling to commit to her request. Despite being a "passionate advocate" for immigrants, he also said "I am an anti-shutdown person" and cited the damage done to the Virginia economy and many of its citizens because of the government shutdown in 2013. "I need to see the details of the bills being put forth before I can make a decision. I think we are really close."

THE QUESTIONS AND CONCERNS kept coming — environmental protections and the effects of climate change, LGBT rights and the status of transgender persons in the military, protection against voter suppression, advancing opportunities for minorities at Governors Schools in Virginia (a program started in 1973 by then-Governor Linwood Holton who would later become Kaine's father-in-law), even the possibility of promoting programs like Fairfax County's Diversion First (aimed at diverting individuals with mental health issues to medical care versus the criminal justice system) on the national level.

Jorel Sabado of Springfield wanted to know how the senator's Catholic faith affected his political actions. "Of course, your values inform your decisions," replied Kaine, but added that it was not his job to make everyone follow the rules of his church. "That is not why we are elected."

Naila Alam from Herndon, and a member of the All Dulles Area Muslim Society (ADAMS) worries about the travel bans that have been in and out of effect and in the courts since President Trump first introduced them as an Executive Order January last year. Kaine vowed to continue to fight against them.

Asked to comment on the election of more Democrats to the Virginia Legislature, Kaine responded that it gave him a level of energy and confidence for his own chances in Virginia, it bode well for the expansion of Medicaid in the state, and that as a member of the Senate Health and Education Committee there was a synergy that could result.

Kaine is seeking re-election in November, and has already made campaign stops "in some areas of our state that are really suffering," but said that the Town Hall meeting wasn't about campaigning, but about keeping up a dialogue with all Virginians. "Hearing what the concerns are, and keeping people informed — that's practicing democracy."

OPINION

First Week in Richmond

BY BARBARA FAVOLA
STATE SENATOR (D-31)

COMMENTARY

It is always exhilarating and humbling to sit in the Chamber as the President of the Senate gavels an unruly body of 40 senators into order. On Jan. 10, Lieutenant Governor Ralph Northam did just that. The next day, Lt. Gov. Northam presided over the Senate for the last time. We wished him well and sent him off to be inaugurated as the 72nd Governor of Virginia.

in committee meetings. This long overdue bit of sunshine will enable Virginians to see for themselves how seriously lawmakers are tackling issues important to them. The link to view meetings can be found under the "Members and Session" tab of the viriniageneralassembly.gov website.

Education: Option for Four-Year Teaching Degree: I am proud to say that my bill SB 76 to enable prospective teachers to potentially gain a teaching degree in four years, rather than five, passed out of the Senate Health & Education Committee unanimously. This will reduce the opportunity cost of becoming a teacher, a factor that weighs heavily on prospective teachers who have incurred a large school debt, yet they have the desire to enter an important but low-paying profession.

Children & Families: Kinship Care Bill — My bill (SB 44) provides support payments to relatives who are willing to offer kin in foster care a permanent home. It passed out of the Rehab and Social Services Committee but was referred to Finance. More than 75 percent of the cost of this kingship program, called "Fostering Futures" is born by the Federal Government. I really hope the money committees can find the $45,000 to start this program.

On a lighter note, my bill to help small business that bake alcohol infused confectionery products obtain an ABC license, so they may continue to grow their businesses, passed out of committee, as well.

Your emails and support are crucial to the legislative process. It is an honor to represent you and to fight for our values.

The state senator represents parts of Arlington, Fairfax, and Loudoun.

HIGHLIGHTS OF MY WEEK

Transparency: Committee votes will now be recorded and live-streamed, so Virginians can hear the substantive debates on bills as they work their way through the process. Most bills, especially controversial ones, face their defeat

Mr. speaker — Not Mr. Speaker

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

COMMENTARY

One of the first tasks in a new session of the Virginia General Assembly is to decide who is going to run the show. In the Senate of Virginia, the decision is made by the voters of the Commonwealth when they elect the Lieutenant Governor whose principal duty is to preside over the Senate.

In the House, the Speaker of the House is the presiding officer who is elected by the members of the House. The political party with the most members has control of the House and elects the Speaker. Republicans control of the House is 51 to 49 this session, a sharp drop in the 66-34 control of recent years. The closeness of the balance of power led to some meaningful discussions that should result in more transparency in the operation of the House.

My interest in becoming the presiding officer of the House by being elected Speaker was well known. Once the two disputed delegate elections were decided in favor of the Republicans there was no way I could reasonably expect to win. Only the Republican who had worked in his party and in the legislature for decades was nominated, and he was elected unanimously. That helped the session get underway in a cooperative spirit. There will be ample opportunity for debate when the many bills that reflect the issues before the General Assembly are considered.

What does a Speaker wannabe do when his party does not gain control of the legislative body? I have decided for myself that if I cannot be the formal Mr. Speaker of the House of Delegates then I can return to my role as Mr. speaker (small "s") speaking out on tough issues that some may want to duck, and I can speak out on institutional practices that are not transparent or fair. In this way, I can best serve my constituents and the long-term interest of the Commonwealth. I can also serve as a mentor to the many new exciting members that are joining the House of Delegates, and I can help to reduce any feelings of intimidation they might be experiencing. Certainly the legislature provides experiences that are not replicated in any other role in life.

The techniques of mass communication through phone calls, postcards, rallies, opinion writings, and other practices that were so successful in helping to get candidates elected can be utilized in the legislative process to help influence the outcome of legislation. I have already been seeing groups shifting from advocacy for individual candidates to advocacy for issues. On issues like expansion of health care and independent redistricting, a strong public voice and advocacy are necessary for success.

There will be more opportunities for the public to follow the legislature in real-time this year than ever before. Video streams of meetings of House Full Committees can be accessed online. Download an instruction sheet at https://publications.viriniageneralassembly.gov/display_publication/209.

You can contact me in Richmond by using regular email, kenplum@aol.com or by calling my local telephone number 703-758-9733, which will ring in my Richmond office.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Preserving Character of McLean

To the Editor:

Downtown McLean is being invaded by prospective developers looking for tiny pockets of land to build high density buildings. The current proposed six-story condo with a parking garage, to be built on the existing parking lot behind Chipotle is the most imminent.

The notion that a small parking area can be torn down and redeveloped into a huge condo complex sets a precedent for others to follow.

We have already been negatively impacted by the Tysons development, which is causing relentless traffic, and is slowly changing the character of our town.

McLean residents, before we lose our downtown McLean to Urban Sprawl and become another Clarendon or Reston Town Center, write your Supervisor and say No to the proposed condo behind Chipotle in McLean.

Winter Owls in our Midst

BY DONALD M. SWEIG

It was a frigid 4 or 5 degrees in Great Falls National Park on the morning of Sunday, Jan. 7. Even so, a hearty and determined group of birders carried on with their usual Sunday morning bird walk. Part way into the walk, the leader, Kris Lansing, noticed something unusual about a knot hole in a large tree 40 or 50 feet away. She and another birder, looking carefully with their binoculars, realized it was an owl.

When spotted by the birders, the little (about 8.5 inches high), rufous-morph, Eastern Screech-owl (Megascops asio) was perched in the sun on the edge of the hollowed-out knothole that was its roosting retreat. Doubtless the owl was hoping that even the weak January sun would provide some warmth against the frigid morning cold. For the birders, it was a pleasant and delightful surprise, eagerly viewed with binoculars and spotting scopes, and recorded with cameras. Screech-owls are not unknown or unseen on the bird walk or in Great Falls Park, but they are a rare occurrence. At another point on that morning's walk, the birders found and observed a larger (about 21 inches tall), gray-brown, Barred Owl (Strix varia), a more frequent sighting in the park than the Screech-owl.

TO MOST BIRDERS, many ornithologists, not to mention the general public, owls are often a matter of great interest and often fascination.

Four years ago, in January 2014, the appearance of at least two migrant Snowy Owls (Bubo scandiacus), about 23 inches high, at National Airport, and two more in downtown Washington, generated great interest and discussion. Snowy owls migrate during the winter months as far south as the Washington area irregularly. But, Screech-Owls, Barred Owls, and the even larger Great Horned Owls, live and breed in local woodlands. They are permanent residents, even in the frigid winter.

Finding local owls can be, and usually is, both challenging and unpredictable. But when one is spotted it often becomes a subject of intense interest. For that reason, most birders and other responsible observers, refrain from posting on the internet or otherwise revealing the location of a roosting owl, for the owl's protection. The Screech-owl found on the Sunday bird walk was reported on E-bird and the Virginia birding listserv, with a notation that the location would remain undisclosed. Even so, birders and ordinary folks do find and see local owls, particularly in the winter when there are no leaves on the trees.

GREAT FALLS NATIONAL PARK, and environs, as well as along the C&O Canal in Maryland, are excellent places to look and listen for, and occasionally find owls. Similarly, they are sometimes located in wooded areas such as south of Alexandria, as well as in local parks and even residential yards. Local owls are often as ubiquitous as they seem elusive. They frequently roost or nest in hollows in large trees, often completely out of sight. It helps to have an experienced owl-finding companion or two when looking for the secretive birds.

The Sunday morning Great Falls bird walk is as good an opportunity as any to chance upon a local owl. The walk meets at 8 a.m. every Sunday in the first large parking lot at Great Falls National Park, Va. Everyone is always welcome on the walk, although there is no guarantee of seeing an owl.

In a crowded gym at Langley High School Friday night, the Saxons Boys Varsity Basketball team defeated the McLean Highlanders for the tenth straight time, 60-53.

Both teams were squarely matched until the fourth period when the Langley Saxons powered through to win with just five fouls. The McLean Highlanders struggled to reclaim the ball in a full court press down to the final seconds of the game.

The rivalry between McLean and Langley has always been a friendly one. But between both sections of cheering students the gym was sweaty and the rivalry was stronger than ever.

"The gym will be sold out. We will play in front of a packed house. It's always a nail biter, and that's the way a high school game should be," said Mike O'Brien, McLean's Head Coach.

"Mike O'Brien and I are good buddies. I love the rivalry game when both teams are good. Tonight is going to be one of the best Langley-McLean games in a while. There's a buzz around the rivalry," said Langley Head Coach Scott Newman.

Langley's five-man squad is led by two seniors, Chase Beckett and Colter Carton. Beckett, small forward for the Saxons, had 21 points and seven rebounds.

"There were ups and downs and we started out slow, but we proved we could play hard and we did," said Beckett. McLean's 5-7 record this season had them optimistic going into the game, Especially with a close win against Herndon on Tuesday, 81-62.

"We've started playing pretty well. We didn't win a game last year and we needed to get the kids used to winning games," said O'Brien. "The kids have a lot of belief right now, to understand that they can win games and take that momentum into tonight."

But Langley proved the better team even without Tre Vasiliadis, Langley's sophomore starting point guard who spent Friday's game on the bench from a previous concussion. He missed the last six games, but according to Newman, he will be playing again soon.

Mike Redding, a senior at McLean High School, was keeping score at Friday night's game. "Both teams played hard and it came down to the best one. It came down to the end and they put out a good effort," said Redding.

Supporting Rise Against Hunger

Rise Against Hunger was accepting cash donations at the game in large black buckets carried by Langley High School seniors, both from Great Falls, Chris Obolensky and Grace Roemer.

Rise Against Hunger's goal in partnership with Langley High School is to raise $29,000 this year to package 100,000 meals to be air-dropped in countries affected by hunger around the globe. They are accepting donations at Langley High School through Jan. 19.

Northern Virginia Lawmakers Push for Menstrual Equity

General Assembly to consider of bills providing feminine hygiene products in schools and prisons.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

When a City of Alexandria woman was booked into the Fairfax County jail, she wasn't wearing white underwear, the only color allowed. It's not like she packed a bag, and she didn't know that she would be arrested on a shoplifting charge. So when the deputies confiscated her underwear she started worrying about what would happen when she started menstruating.

"They give you these pads after they have not given you any underwear, so there's really no place to hold the pads," she said. "If you start a menstrual cycle while you are in there with no underwear, they don't give you anything to protect yourself."

While she was behind bars in 2015, inmates were limited to two pads a day. She says they were the cheapest kind available, which means they were very thin and more than two were often needed. She said she heard some of the other inmates begging for more pads, but the deputies would not provide them.

"It's an area that's probably been overlooked just because it's not a subject that people talk about often in public."

— State Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34)

"So I've had to sit on one pad for half of the day and then use the other pad to sleep through the night so that when I wake up in the morning I could get two more pads," she said. "It definitely makes you feel less than a person, like I'm not even worth a 50-cent pad."

HER EXPERIENCE in the Fairfax County jail is common say leaders of a nonprofit group known as Bringing Resources to Aid Women's Shelters — known by the acronym BRAWS. That's why they are pushing members of the General Assembly to pass a number of laws to provide "menstrual equity," a growing movement in state capitals across the country.

"It's not right to charge them, especially charging prisoners who really don't have much access to money at all," said Del. Kaye

Kory (D-38), who has a bill that would require jails and prisons to provide feminine hygiene products on demand. "So it's wrong. And we shouldn't do it."

Del. Jennifer Boysko (D-86) has two bills that work toward menstrual equity. One would add feminine hygiene products to the list of products that are exempted from sales tax during the annual back-to-school tax holiday. The other bill would eliminate the sales tax for these products altogether.

"A woman doesn't have a choice whether or not she wants to buy menstrual products," said Boysko. "And because she's taxed on it that's unfair and it's discrimination and so it's a parity issue and a fairness issue."

THE ISSUE HAS been gaining steam for several years, although lawmakers are still trying to get their bills out of committee and onto the floor. Del. Mark Keam (D-35) has been working on this issue since 2016, and he says every year the effort gains more supporters. He's currently working on a bill that will require public schools to provide feminine hygiene products in restrooms.

"Boys may snicker and joke about it, but the reality is that these are serious psychological as well as physical problems that girls have to deal with," said Keam. "I've talked to many young women who said this has happened to them and it's so embarrassing, and they can't study or focus on what's happening in the classroom."

Keam acknowledges that his bill would be an unfunded mandate for school divisions across Virginia. That's one of the reasons state Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34) is taking a different approach — a budget amendment that would provide funding for groups like BRAWS to distribute feminine hygiene products to prisons and homeless shelters.

"It's an area that's probably been overlooked just because it's not a subject that people talk about often in public," said Petersen. "Really what we are talking about is more matching funds for the community, and we are basically coming late to the party."

Julia Stucky, of Great Falls, qualified for the fall 2017 dean's list at Belmont University (Nashville, Tenn.).

Paige Galiani, of Great Falls, was named to the fall 2017 dean's list at Lehigh University (Bethlehem, Pa.).

New Year, New Order Local organizers teach methods for streamlining a space.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

With the holidays now a memory, local organizers are getting requests from those with overflowing buckets of ambition to create and maintain a clutter-free space.

“One of the first things to learn is that a few minutes spent on a few tasks each day can go a long way in maintaining order,” said Jodie Jacobs of SOUPerior Organizing. “Decide how important a clean, clutter-free space is to you and follow through on keeping it that way. Prioritize it like other important things in your life.”

One habit that Susan Unger of ClutterSOS teachers her clients to focus on simple things that can be done easily and frequently. “In general, I recommend keeping up with household duties on a daily basis so none of them become a bigger project,” said Unger. “For example, don’t leave dishes in the sink. Load the dishwasher after every meal and put all cooking and food prep items away so the counters are clear.”

Establishing a daily routine so that tidying becomes second nature is a technique that Unger uses in her own life and teaches to her clients. “I always make my bed first thing in the morning,” she said. “Having a neat bedroom is a great way to start the

Also on her recommended list of daily tasks: apparel. “Be sure to put all clothes away on a daily basis rather than leaving them on a chair or the floor,” said Unger. “Clean clothes should be hung up or put in drawers and dirty clothes in the laundry basket.”

In fact, Unger tells clients to gather the entire family at the end of each day and spend 10 minutes tidying as a group. “Make a sweep of your house and determine which items need to be put in their proper place,” she said. “It makes for a less stressful and more pleasant morning when you’re not waking up to clutter sitting around,” said Unger.

Deal with mail on a daily basis so it doesn’t pile up, advises Unger. “Immediately recycle or shred the junk mail and put bills, items to file and reading in an appropriate place.”

Whether it’s a small basket by the front door or storage boxes placed under a bed, one technique for tidiness is having a designated space for items. “Kids’ homework should have a landing place like a backpack,” said Jacobs. “The backpack should go in a particular place, like on a hook. You have to figure out what works for your family.”

Keep bathrooms in order by adding over-the-door hooks to hold towels, suggested Todd Martz, Home on Cameron in Alexandria. “This might make the room appear smaller, but it [offers] a place to put towels,” he said. “Include a decorative bag on the door hook for toiletries so they’re out of the way.”

“Add an ottoman or coffee table with storage,” continued Martz. “Maximize the space next to a utility or laundry room by adding a ... shelf to hold blankets.”

Whether it’s once a week or once a month, schedule time to spend on organization projects and record it on a calendar, advises Jacobs. “Tie it to something that you already do and select a time that won’t be overrun by other events, she said. “If you know that every Sunday at nine o’clock, you always watch a television show, set aside that time to go through mail, pay bills and respond to invitations while you’re watching. That way, your time won’t get bumped for a soccer game or business meeting.”

One caveat that Jacobs offers her clients is, “Maintaining a routine doesn’t mean that you won’t slip up at times,” she said. “You have to hold yourself to realistic standards or you’ll get discouraged.”

the march in Charlottesville. I think Reston, in particular, has maintained its welcoming position through difficult times in the past year and serves as an example of Dr. King's dream for other communities to follow."

Since Dr. King's time, there has been much progress in our society, especially in Northern Virginia, which has become a diverse and welcoming community. However, there are still instances that make me think my country is taking a step backward. Like

Eliza Seigel, High School Student,

"With the increasingly polarized times that we live in, sometimes it feels like the differences between one another are becoming more decisive. With every political and social event that has happened these past years both locally and nationally that was meant to divide us or separate us, there have been reactions that brought all kinds of people from all walks of life together.

"With every event that happened in Charlottesville, where there was a group of people who were opposed to the livelihoods of people of certain religions, races, and identities, there was a community that came together to say that hatred and violence are intolerable and we must progress to make the world a better place.

"That community in the aftermath brought people together, and in that particular sense, Dr. King's dream is very much alive."

Seasons Gratings

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As a baby-boomer, I've transitioned from black and white television to color to "H.D" - and of course now to "Smart Television," and within that evolution, so too has the variety, content and number of channels— and the "demand" that we consumers can make — from home, transitioned as well. And I don't suppose much of it could have happened without advertising and the revenue it has generated. Promoted by people, places and things. From sports heroes to celebrities to news makers to cartoon characters to puppets and on to anthropomorphic agents/avatars and other creative mouthpieces.

I grew up watching television — without a remote, not listening to the radio. I remember seeing "Mr. Clean," "The Jolly Green Giant," "Mr. Magoo," "Speedy" — from Alka Seltzer — among other iconic creatures of the creative, all of whom sent so many messages to so many consumers, ripe for the plucking. A brand new medium had arrived: television, and its audience was extra large and extra eager.

And even though these spokes-things were not exactly speaking from the heart (what heart?), they were speaking/symbolizing with conviction — and repetition. The impressions made on impressionable future consumers were incalculable. It launched a generation. Not the "Greatest Generation," mind you, but a generation nonetheless, prepped and ready to make its mark: in the drug store, the convenience store, the supermarket, the box store and now the on-line store. We are not merely what we buy, we are what and how we are advertised to.

Previously I had written a column about how I loathe the computer-generated characters which have been utilized on television in an attempt to capture consumers' interest. As soon as they appear on television, I switch rather than fight. For me, it's an immediate turn off, literally and figuratively. I am not listening to inanimate objects/creations tell an "animate" (yours truly) object what to do. And though I understand the humanity behind the message, as far as I'm concerned, the delivery system does not compute (an old-fashioned usage). Artificial spokes-things are not worth the computer screens they're drawn on.

What has brought this rant on is a new element in the artificially-intelligent world in which many of us are subjected: holiday greetings from a computer. Mass emails sent by manufacturers from whom as a consumer we've emailed, inquired, bought, sold, etc., wishing me a "happy, healthy, prosperous holiday/New Year," yada, yada, yada; click/delete. As fast as I can. Are you kidding me? It's not bad enough that as consumers we are regularly watching/listening to fake spokes-things on television, I am now being directly interacted with through my personal emails too. No. That's where I draw the line/terminate my attention span.

However well-conceived, I am not getting involved with what is in effect, a thing. Pre-programmed messages of this kind are the unkindest cut of all; "Et tu, Brute?" If you/your company can only treat me like a number — and not as a person, don't treat me at all. Don't think for a nanosecond that a holiday missive to a massive holiday audience carries any substantial weight. It doesn't. It provides the exact opposite: a greater wait until I respond. It's akin to be weightless in outer space. It's for bemusement. It serves no functional purpose. And though I can certainly appreciate how getting into thousands/millions of personal email accounts with one keystroke has an appeal, you risk squandering a previously hard-earned resource: goodwill.

You want me as a customer? Don't email me feelings. Email me facts and figures. You really want me as a customer? Then speak to me, really. Save your greetings; and not for next year either.
