This year marks the 50th anniversary of the death of Martin Luther King, Jr., civil rights activist who was assassinated April 4, 1968.

On Monday, some Montgomery County citizens celebrated his life and legacy with a Day of Service, volunteering throughout the area, collecting food for Manna Food Center, making bag lunches for homeless shelters, and cleaning up the environment by picking up trash along stream beds and pulling invasive species from parkland.

Most of those who volunteered at Locust Grove Nature Center in nearby Cabin John Regional Park only know of King's work second-hand but were happy to brave the cold weather to make their corner of the world a better place.

"My mother said [Dr. King] was all about service and serving people no matter what race, creed or gender," said Martine Cardichon, 15, of Potomac.

Martine, her sister Gaby, 13, and their mother Carlyne, volunteered at the nature center for several hours Monday. Together they cleaned trash along the stream separating the nature center from Democracy Boulevard.

"We found lots of tennis balls and plastic bottles and lots and lots of Styrofoam," Martine said. "I even found a plastic water gun."

Much of the trash, she said was frozen to the ground and they could not get it, still, they, along with other volunteers collected a dozen large trash bags full of debris.

Though collecting trash on a very cold day is not a glamorous job, Martine said it was an important one.

"The Earth belongs to everybody and trash can kill wildlife, that would disrupt the food chain which will disrupt the whole," Martine said.

Carlyne Cardichon said she and her daughter helped at the nature center because it was a day of service but also because they live nearby and enjoy the park.

"We enjoy the park so much, we want to keep it clean, not just for our family but for everyone," she said.

Inside the nature center, Scarlet Mann, 12, of Carderock Springs, helped naturalist Calvin Sweeney, clean a turtle cage and spray moisture in the home of Prince Charming, the center's resident toad.

About Martin Luther King, Jr., Scarlet said that King helped his world and that is the point of the Day of Service.

"I think mostly what they are trying to do is incorporate those who help the world connect it to the environment," she said. "We are helping the environment, where Martin Luther King was helping people."

Another trash collector for the day was Anderson Campellow, 8, from Potomac. He seemed excited about his trash haul, holding up an almost full trash bag and recounting the various things he found.

"I found a brick, a shoe, soccer ball and a calendar for 2018," he said.

Anderson and his parent, Alida Anderson and Lenny Campellow, said they help at Locust Grove every year for the Day of Service.

‘Fulfilling the Dream’ County celebrates King’s legacy.

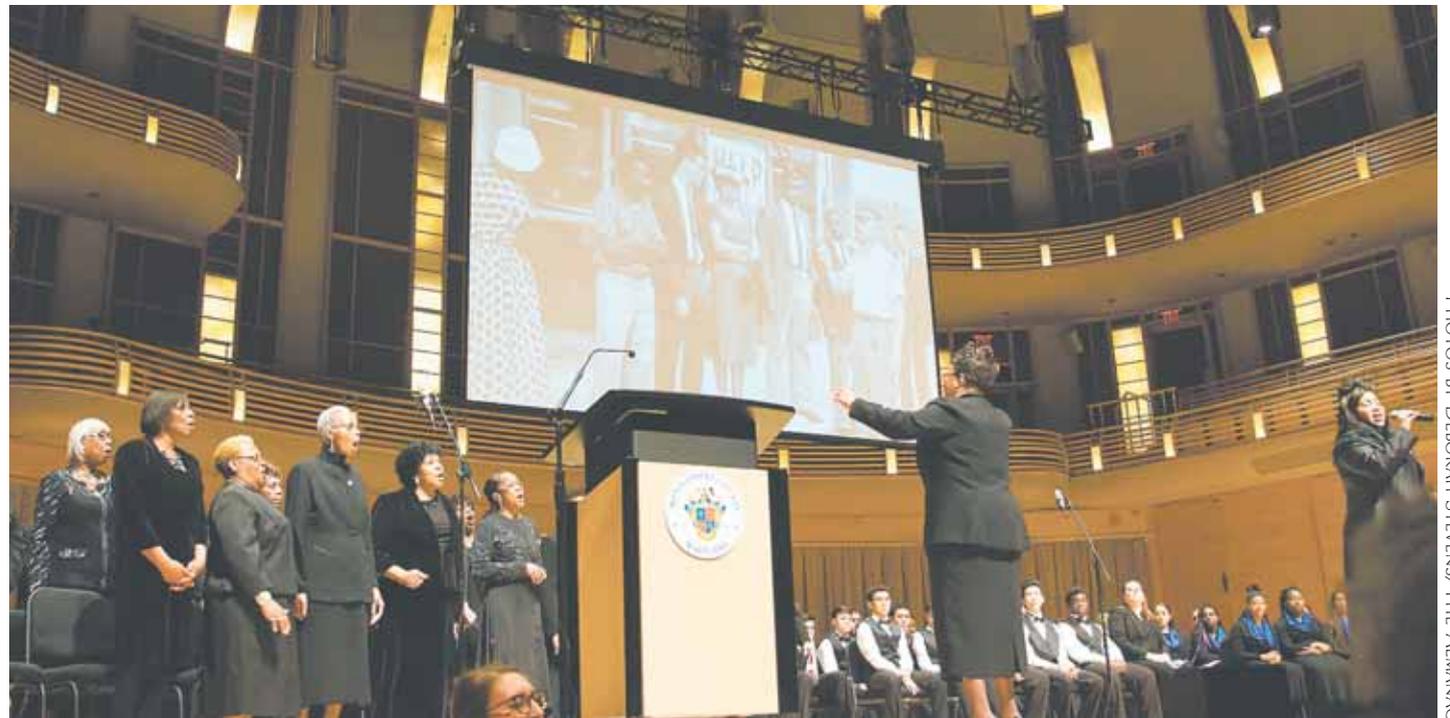

This year’s theme for Montgomery County’s annual Martin Luther King Jr. celebration was “Fulfilling the Dream: A Celebration of Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow.” The ceremony, held on Monday, Jan. 15 at the Music Center at Strathmore, was produced by the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Commemorative Committee and the Montgomery County Office of Human Rights.

The event celebrated Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.’s life through dramatic readings, music, dance performances and a special choral performance by the Carlton Reese Memorial Unity Choir from Birmingham, Ala.

The Carlton Reese Memorial Unity Choir began in 1959 singing in the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church in Birmingham. The group offered music and inspiration during the Birmingham Civil Rights Movement.

Musical performances were also provided by student groups from Albert Einstein High School; Clarksburg High School; Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Middle School; Gaithersburg High School; Montgomery Blair High School; Northwest High School and Ritchie Park Elementary School.

The event was hosted by NBC News 4 Anchor Leon Harris. Scheduled presenters

Clean up at Locust Grove seemed like a big success, naturalist Rebecca Wadler said. “We had a lot of people who signed up and we had a lot of people who just showed up. We are a very small nature center so we really do depend upon the public to help us,” Wadler said. “When we do these days it [develops] ownership of the nature center and helps us grow.”

Holiday Feasts

For the fourth year, TPC Potomac Executive Chef David Trevelino prepared holiday feasts for sailors aboard the USS Chicago submarine. Initially inspired by his son's enlistment in the U.S. Navy, Trevelino and his wife have since made it a holiday tradition. Thanks to contributions from the members and friends of TPC Potomac, the duo's travel was covered, along with costs for food supplies and cargo shipping.

New Year, New Order Local organizers teach methods for streamlining a space.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

With the holidays now a memory, local organizers are getting requests from those with overflowing buckets of ambition to create and maintain a clutter-free space.

“One of the first things to learn is that a few minutes spent on a few tasks each day can go a long way in maintaining order,” said Jodie Jacobs of SOUPerior Organizing. “Decide how important a clean, clutter-free space is to you and follow through on keeping it that way. Prioritize it like other important things in your life.”

One habit that Susan Unger of ClutterSOS teaches her clients to focus on simple things that can be done easily and frequently. “In general, I recommend keeping up with household duties on a daily basis so none of them become a bigger project,” said Unger. “For example, don’t leave dishes in the sink. Load the dishwasher after every meal and put all cooking and food prep items away so the counters are clear.”

Establishing a daily routine so that tidying becomes second nature is a technique that Unger uses in her own life and teaches to her clients. “I always make my bed first thing in the morning,” she said. “Having a neat bedroom is a great way to start the

Also on her recommended list of daily tasks: apparel. “Be sure to put all clothes away on a daily basis rather than leaving them on a chair or the floor,” said Unger. “Clean clothes should be hung up or put in drawers and dirty clothes in the laundry basket.”

In fact, Unger tells clients to gather the entire family at the end of each day and spend 10 minutes tidying as a group. “Make a sweep of your house and determine which items need to be put in their proper place,” she said. “It makes for a less stressful and more pleasant morning when you’re not waking up to clutter sitting around,” said Unger.

Deal with mail on a daily basis so it doesn’t pile up, advises Unger. “Immediately recycle or shred the junk mail and put bills, items to file and reading in an appropriate place.”

Whether it’s a small basket by the front door or storage boxes placed under a bed, one technique for tidiness is having a designated space for items. “Kids’ homework should have a landing place like a backpack,” said Jacobs. “The backpack should go in a particular place, like on a hook. You have to figure out what works for your family.”

Keep bathrooms in order by adding over-the-door hooks to hold towels, suggested Todd Martz, Home on Cameron in Alexandria. “This might make the room appear smaller, but it [offers] a place to put towels,” he said. “Include a decorative bag on the door hook for toiletries so they’re out of the way.”

“Add an ottoman or coffee table with storage,” continued Martz. “Maximize the space next to a utility or laundry room by adding a ... shelf to hold blankets.”

Whether it’s once a week or once a month, schedule time to spend on organization projects and record it on a calendar, advises Jacobs. “Tie it to something that you already do and select a time that won’t be overrun by other events, she said. “If you know that every Sunday at nine o’clock, you always watch a television show, set aside that time to go through mail, pay bills and respond to invitations while you’re watching. That way, your time won’t get bumped for a soccer game or business meeting.”

One caveat that Jacobs offers her clients is, “Maintaining a routine doesn’t mean that you won’t slip up at times,” she said. “You have to hold yourself to realistic standards or you’ll get discouraged.”

Officially Filing For Congress

Congressional candidate David Trone officially filed paperwork on Tuesday, Jan 9 to appear on the Democratic primary ballot. Trone announced his candidacy in early August and has since then traveled through the 6th District talking with voters about his agenda to create jobs all throughout the district, improve the district's infrastructure including I-81 and I-270, doubling the funding for the National Institutes of Health, and fighting the Opioid Crisis. Trone is the founder and owner of Total Wine & More. He started the company with one store and grew it into 172 stores in 22 states. They currently employ 6,000 people. More information about David Trone and his campaign for Congress can be found at www.davidtrone.com.

Initiative's Grant Supports Center at St. Andrew's

The Center for Transformative Teaching & Learning at St. Andrew's (CTTL) in Potomac has received a grant to fund a pilot program of Neuroteach Global, an online professional development platform that delivers research-informed strategies in Mind, Brain, and Education Science.

The initiative is intended to expand the CTTL's capacity to meet international demand for services. Neuroteach Global will expand both the scale and scope of the CTTLs work to bridge neuro-educational research and classroom practice. This project has been made possible in part by a grant from the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative DAF, an advised fund of the Silicon Valley Community Foundation.

Created by Priscilla Chan, M.D. and Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg, the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative (CZI) looks "for bold ideas - regardless of structure and stage - and helps them scale... to build tools that accelerate the pace of social progress."

"The Chan Zuckerberg Initiative's mission is the same as every educator," said Glenn Whitman, director of the CTTL. "To advance human potential. We're delighted to have earned their support in the early phase of this important innovation in the personalized professional development of teachers in all school settings."

The CTTL is the only pre-collegiate school-based research center in the United States designing and providing MBE Science research-informed professional development programming to public, charter and private schools as well as Teach For America (Washington, D.C., region). Since its founding in 2011, the CTTL has attracted foundational funding from organizations including the Crimsonbridge Foundation, the Omidyar Group, E.E. Ford Foundation, CityBridge Foundation, and Windover Foundation. The CTTL has trained teachers at more than 100 schools in 20 states and five countries.

St. Andrew's Episcopal School serves as the CTTL's incubator for new programming, resources, and educational tools. Participants in the pilot phase of MBE Global will include Northeast High School (Pasadena, Md.) Mead High School (Fort Meade), Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School (Chevy Chase), Breck School (Golden Valley, Minn.) and St. Andrew's Episcopal School (Potomac).

Seasons Gratings

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As a baby-boomer, I've transitioned from black and white television to color to "H.D" - and of course now to "Smart Television;" and within that evolution, so too has the variety, content and number of channels- and the "demand" that we consumers can make - from home, transitioned as well. And I don't suppose much of it could have happened without advertising and the revenue it has generated. Promoted by people, places and things. From sports heroes to celebrities to news makers to cartoon characters to puppets and on to anthropomorphic agents/avatars and other creative mouthpieces.

I grew up watching television - without a remote, not listening to the radio. I remember seeing "Mr. Clean," "The Jolly Green Giant," "Mr. Magoo," "Speedy" - from Alka Seltzer - among other iconic creatures of the creative, all of whom sent so many messages to so many consumers, ripe for the plucking. A brand new medium had arrived: television, and its audience was extra large and extra eager.

And even though these spokes-things were not exactly speaking from the heart (what heart?), they were speaking/symbolizing with conviction - and repetition. The impressions made on impressionable future consumers were incalculable. It launched a generation. Not the "Greatest Generation," mind you, but a generation nonetheless, prepped and ready to make its mark: in the drug store, the convenience store, the supermarket, the box store and now the on-line store. We are not merely what we buy, we are what and how we are advertised to.

Previously I had written a column about how I loathe the computer-generated characters which have been utilized on television in an attempt to capture consumers' interest. As soon as they appear on television, I switch rather than fight. For me, it's an immediate turn off, literally and figuratively. I am not listening to inanimate objects/creations tell an "animate" (yours truly) object what to do. And though I understand the humanity behind the message, as far as I'm concerned, the delivery system does not compute (an old-fashioned usage). Artificial spokes-things are not worth the computer screens they're drawn on.

What has brought this rant on is a new element in the artificially-intelligent world in which many of us are subjected: holiday greetings from a computer. Mass emails sent by manufacturers from whom as a consumer we've emailed, inquired, bought, sold, etc., wishing me a "happy, healthy, prosperous holiday/New Year," yada, yada, yada; click/delete. As fast as I can. Are you kidding me? It's not bad enough that as consumers we are regularly watching/listening to fake spokes-things on television, I am now being directly interacted with through my personal emails too. No. That's where I draw the line/terminate my attention span.

However well-conceived, I am not getting involved with what is in effect, a thing. Pre-programmed messages of this kind are the unkindest cut of all; "Et tu, Brute?" If you/your company can only treat me like a number - and not as a person, don't treat me at all. Don't think for a nanosecond that a holiday missive to a massive holiday audience carries any substantial weight. It doesn't. It provides the exact opposite: a greater wait until I respond. It's akin to be weightless in outer space. It's for bemusement. It serves no functional purpose. And though I can certainly appreciate how getting into thousands/millions of personal email accounts with one keystroke has an appeal, you risk squandering a previously hard-earned resource: goodwill.

You want me as a customer? Don't email me feelings. Email me facts and figures. You really want me as a customer? Then speak to me, really. Save your greetings; and not for next year either.
