Open dialogue is key to quelling fear, say mental health professionals.

By Marilyn Campbell

Helping parents who are grappling with their children’s feelings of anger and fear following the recent Florida school shooting and subsequent fallout was a recent topic that Lisa Jackson-Cherry, Ph.D., department chair and program coordinator, Pastoral Clinical Mental Health Counseling & Pastoral and Spiritual Care programs at Marymount University, had with her graduate students. The class discussed how high profile acts of violence can frighten children who might feel as though they or someone they love could become a victim or feel themselves in danger. From mass shootings to natural disasters, an open dialogue with children is key to dealing with thoughts and feelings.

“In most instances, talking about the incident helps to gain some control over what is not controlled,” said Jackson-Cherry. “Normalizing feelings and thoughts like fear, sadness, anger, and confusion can help children know they are not abnormal in how they are feeling or thinking.”

“First ask what they heard rather than starting by telling them about it,” added Joanne Bagshaw, Ph.D., professor of psychology at Montgomery College. “I wouldn’t get too stuck on the details. Just get a sense of what they know and make sure it’s accurate.”

In fact, exploration is key. “Encourage children to express their feelings and validate them,” said Bagshaw. “You can start by saying, ‘I can understand why you’re feeling that.’”

Monitor both the amount and source of information that children receive about high profile incidents, advises Bagshaw. “I would really limit their social media and news intake about the violence,” she said. “Videos about the shooting are too traumatic, and watching them can be too traumatizing and too dramatic.”

Reviewing the family’s safety plan can help children feel secure, advises Bagshaw. It’s something she did in her own family. “At my daughter’s middle school, you can’t just walk into a building like they did in Florida,” she said. “I reminded my daughter of this and explained the safety differences between her school and the school in Florida. One thing that you don’t want to say is that ‘That will never happen here.’ You want to focus on what’s real and what’s realistic.”

Maintaining a sense of normalcy following a public display of violence can help quell fear that children might be feeling, advises Jerome Short, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology at George Mason University and a licensed clinical psychologist. “Parents play a key role by staying calm, maintaining household routines, explaining that many events we worry about seldom happen, and stating that we will cope with whatever happens,” he said. “Parents should place the highest priority on helping children stay safe.”

“I would caution against using leading questions like, ‘Are you scared?’ because this question already implies they should be scared of something and that may not be accurate,” continued Jackson-Cherry. “Depending on their answers, parents can assist in having the child integrate aspects of power and control in a situation where they may not be in control.”

While putting national events into perspective in a way that children can understand, Short also advises parents to explore emotions. “Ask children what they are feeling and empathize and validate what they say. Ask children how they feel about school,” he said. “Is there anything at school that worries them? Be reassuring that you will help protect them.”

Reviewing safety guidelines can help children feel secure, says Short. “Parents [can say that] local police are working to keep the community safe. We need to look out for each other,” he said. “Say that high-profile file violence is unlikely to happen at local schools based on circumstances. For example, there are more than 130,000 elementary and secondary schools, and we focus on relatively few schools where shootings have occurred.”

Even those children who don’t express emotions or appear unaffected by news reports of violence might still be anxious about the event. “Many children may not display outward anger or fear but that does not mean they are not fearful, angry, or sad about what they have heard or experienced,” said Jackson-Cherry. “I think in most circumstances, parents asking about a child’s knowledge of the event would be a good way to start.”

Limit a child’s exposure to media coverage of acts of violence and discuss it in an age appropriate manner, advises Jackson-Cherry. “If the parent is watching or listening to the news together with their child, try asking, ‘What are you thinking or feeling about what just happened or was reported?’” she said. “I asked my 15 year old, ‘Has the school discussed the shooting in Florida? Have you had drill in case it were to happen?’”

Mother Nature hurled a powerful windstorm at the local area Friday, March 3 through Sunday, March 5, as Winter Storm Riley wreaked havoc. The National Weather Service DC/Baltimore reported Dulles Airport had winds gusting to 50 mph or more for 16 hours, a rare occurrence created by the intense low-pressure system offshore.

The sustained wind storm downed trees and power lines in the Reston/Herndon area and beyond, leaving 192,000 Dominion customers, the majority of them in Fairfax County, without power.

Yet, Mother Nature showed her gentler side Saturday, if only for a moment. Shortly after noon, with winds still howling, twin lambs were born at Frying Pan Farm Park, Kidwell Farm in Herndon. The high winds pounded the area downing trees and power lines, but life continues.

Eric Sumner, Farm Mechanic at Frying Pan Farm Park in Herndon, holds up twin lambs born Sunday, Feb. 25. These babies, like one born Saturday, March 3 during the high-impact windstorm that hit the region, will stay indoors for a few weeks before going out to pasture.

Ewe instinctively turned and licked her newborns. Within minutes after hitting the straw, one lamb stood up on its wobbly legs, teetered a bit and made its way to the ewe. The second lamb died shortly after birth. Like twins lambs born six days earlier on the farm and doing well, the surviving lamb will stay indoors for a few weeks before going out in the pasture with its mother. Another baby lamb was born on Sunday to a third ewe.

Kidwell Farm Park is part of Frying Pan Farm Park. It is a working demonstration farm located at 2709 West Ox Road. The park offers a look at life, a step back in time to experience how farm life was during the 1920s through 1950s.

The park is open daily dawn to dusk; Kidwell Farm is open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission to the park is free. Some activities such as wagon rides, the carousel (opening mid-April) and special events have a fee. For more information about upcoming events and the farm animal births birthing schedule visit Fairfaxcounty.gov/parks/fryingpanpark.

As sustained high winds from a massive nor’ester moving up the coast pummeled the area Friday through Sunday, Mother Nature showed her gentler side. Frying Pan Farm Park’s third baby lamb was born Saturday, March 3. It is about one hour old in the photo. The photo was accepted through April 6, 2018. Son donates father’s memorabilia for display in the Herndon Depot Museum.

Angus “Gus” Schmelz, Radioman 2, served on the USS Herndon during World War II. Members of the Herndon Historical Society—headquartered in the Herndon Depot Museum at 717 Lynn Street, Herndon—will remember and thank him for a long time. On Tuesday, Feb. 27, Gus’s son, David Schmelz arrived from Florida and stopped at the museum with an assortment of boxes. On hand to greet him were Melissa Highly, president of the Herndon Historical Society, and Margaret Jamborsky, who is researching history of the Herndon. In the boxes were memorabilia Gus Schmelz, as his son recalled, “had kept in an office in his house.” Schmelz died in 2007. David Schmelz was there to share with the museum some of his father’s photographs, letters, documents, and physical artifacts he had collected while aboard the destroyer.

For more than an hour, everyone opened the boxes and looked back in time through an assortment of pictures and writings. During Schmelz’ service as Radioman 2 aboard the Herndon, the ship earned three Battle Stars. The first in July/August of 1943, during the Invasion of Sicily and the second during the Invasion of Normandy in June of 1944. This was the period of significance most important to the Herndon Historical Society and Jamborsky since the Herndon High School Band is scheduled to represent the United States at the 75th anniversary of D-Day in Normandy, France in 2019. The Herndon earned its last battle star at the Invasion of Southern France in 1944. Herndonband.org reports, “The Pride of Herndon will be honoring the brave men of the USS Herndon, the destroyer that led the Allied naval armada in the assault on France. The men of the ‘Lucky Herndon’ were given 10 to 1 odds that they wouldn’t come out of D-Day alive. Not only did they beat the odds, their bravery and courage helped win the war. The band will be marching with the American flag that flew on board the ship on D-Day, and each student will carry a photograph of one of the veterans as they march in France.” Asked in an interview when his father had signed up to serve, Schmelz said, “There were five boys in my dad’s family. Angus was only 17 years old, and his mother had to go with him and sign him up because he was underage.”

Accepting the donation on behalf of the Herndon Historical Society, Highly commented, “We are very excited about the USS Herndon collection from Mr. Schmelz, and honored that he has entrusted the Herndon Historical Society to be the caretakers of it. We look forward to sharing it with our members and visitors for years to come.”

South Lakes High School announced the Alliance for Young Artists & Writers named 14 of their students recipients of the 2018 Scholastic Art Awards, the nation’s longest-running and most prestigious scholarship and recognition initiative for creative teens in grades 7-12.

Praising the school’s art department and award winners, Kimberly Retzer, South Lakes High School principal, said, “South Lakes is incredibly proud of our amazing Art Program. We are excited to have 26 Awards/Honorable Mentions recognized in the Scholastic Art Competition this year.”

The website for the Scholastic Awards states the young artists and writers were free to explore any and all topics; there were no pre-defined prompts, and no work would ever be disqualified from the Scholastic Awards because of the nature of its content. As for judging criteria, three areas dominated: originality, technical skill, and the emergence of a personal voice or vision.

Matt Ravenstahl, Art Department Chair at South Lakes, said, “We are extremely proud of these students and the importance of arts in our school. These students utilized art making to engage experience and construct meaning in regard to a deeper self.”

The artists who received either or both Gold Key and Silver Key Awards will be celebrated in a ceremony Wednesday, Feb. 21, 2018, at the Northern Virginia Community College, Annandale Campus, Ernst Cultural Center, 8333 Little River Turnpike, Annandale. Their artwork will be on exhibition there Feb. 9-March 15, 2018.

Gun safety is an American value. By Monte F. Bourjaily, IV

In the aftermath of the horrific school shooting in Parkland, Florida, the President of the United States and the head of the National Rifle Association, have advocated arming teachers and hardening schools in other ways. These are shriveled, re-active measures that appeal to fear and rely on the false statement that “to stop a bad guy with a gun, you need a good guy with a gun.” Introducing guns into the classroom doesn’t demonstrate the virtue of the Second Amendment, it poisons the educational environment, increases the risk that innocents will be hurt and simply challenges “the bad guy” to creatively get around the armed target. We can uphold the Second Amendment, and the rule of law, and ensure Americans’ safety and sense of security with common sense measures, like repealing the Dickey Amendment, that focus on preventing unsafe and malevolent use of firearms. Arming teachers is a terrible idea. First, it changes the dynamic in a classroom, placing the weapon between the teacher and the students. Even if its purpose is to protect students, a weapon is a distraction and a barrier. Second, and more importantly, you are introducing more projectile weapons into a chaotic environment, dramatically increasing the likelihood of friendly fire killing children, other teachers and law enforcement seeking to assist. How well do police and soldiers perform in the high stress conditions of an actual confrontation? Does the opportunity and readiness for errors increase or decrease when multiple shooters (friend and foe) are added to a situation? Third, in response to the argument that a shooter will avoid schools knowing that teachers are armed, what is to prevent the shooter from wearing body armor? It is easy to buy. We need to stop reacting and problem-solve and innovate, which is our true nature. Guns are tools, like cars, that can cause serious injury or death when used improperly or with ill-intent. I also am a hunter who grew up respecting guns. Why is there a “gag rule” (the Dickey Amendment of 1996) on Centers for Disease Control research into the effects of gun violence? Are guns different than cars? The National Highway Transportation Safety Commission collects data on motor vehicle fatalities through the Fatality Analysis Reporting System (FARS). Gun owners have a Second Amendment right to own and use guns responsibly, not unconditionally. All Americans have a right to gain a better understanding of how guns are used in ways that harm other Americans and in ways that can pose a risk to all of us. We must respect the Second Amendment, like we uphold all of the Constitution as the rule of law. However, there are few absolutes under the Constitution, including how far we interpret the right to bear arms. Freedom of Religion does not permit the practice of human sacrifice and Freedom of Speech does not permit fighting words. In short, my right to swing my arms ends at the tip of your nose.

OPINION

No Guns in the Classroom

Not Paying Attention in Logic Class

To the Editor:

I was very surprised at the honesty of the headline on your Feb. 21-27 editorial, but then someone pointed out to me that “Another Assault on Common Sense” probably wasn’t referring to the content of your editorial. My mistake. Since I was wrong about that, maybe I don’t understand the cartoon either. As I understand it, a deranged individual murdered 17 people in a school in Florida; many of that person’s peers “knew” that he was dangerous, but apparently did not mention that to school authorities until after the shooting; school authorities considered him dangerous, but apparently didn’t do anything about it; as a result, he was joined by other Broward deputies who also did not enter the building – and so the NRA was right.

Conversation Stopper

To the Editor:

If I hear the word “conversation” in the media one more time, in relation to another massacre of humans, I might be driven to violence. “Conversation” is not a solution to any of our social diseases. It is particularly unnerving when the calls for a “conversation” usually relate to gun control, and come from folks who don’t even know the meaning of the words they are using. “Automatic Rifles” have already been banned for decades. “Assault Rifles” have the same capability as many other guns, but they are just designed to look cool. They are a legal version of a rifle that a veteran can own as a reminder of the automatic rifle he carried while risking his life for his country. But the demands for a “conversation” or, for the President to do something rather than nothing, keep getting louder and louder. The hysteria usually includes mantras about the NRA having too much influence. Yet no one seems to grasp the idea that maybe it’s the influence of the National Education Association (NEA) that is too weak and misguided regarding the interests of teachers who can easily identify kids, as early as first grade, who should never have access to a gun. Maybe the NEA should lobby harder for increased regulation of dysfunctional kids, and the parents that are irresponsible. Even without access to guns, these kids can eventually get a driver’s license, and propel a car or a truck into their schoolmates during a fire drill.

Cowardice and Complicity

To the Editor:

I’m one of the lucky parents. Like most parents, I worked hard during the 18 to 20 or so years it takes to raise my children, educate them, instill values, help them become productive adults and, hopefully, parents themselves. All those playdates, sports practices, trips to the library, school events, college visits, illnesses, successes, and disappointments we gladly work through, enjoy, suffer through, and, if we’re lucky, our children actually survive and move on. I can think of nothing worse for parents than to have their child, their gift to the future and image of themselves, taken horribly before his or her time.

A parent should never outlive his child. Even a nuclear holocaust is preferable, because then we’d all die, and the parent would not have to pretend to celebrate the memory of what might have been had the promise of this nation been kept. That’s right, the core promise of this nation is embodied in our elected representative’s oath of office to protect its citizens from enemies, both foreign and domestic. I call out every Republican in Congress and the President and Vice President for violating their oath, sworn on a bible. If they had any integrity, they would resign. There is a moral duty to act to save a life. Abandoning an opportunity, ability and means. Failing to act is cowardice, and worse, complicity.
