Mention a date monumentally important to a certain generation, and people can tell you where they were when, for example, President Kennedy or Beatle John Lennon were shot and killed. For Fairfax County residents—and its Police Department, in particular—that date is May 8, 2006.

That's because it's when MPO Mike “Gabby” Garbarino and Det. Vicky Armel were fatally shot in the back parking-lot of the Sully District Police Station. And for those who knew, loved or worked with them, that date is forever seared in their hearts.

Last Tuesday, May 8, they gathered at the station—as they have each year since the tragedy—to remember these two officers with a special ceremony. The station commander, Capt. Dean Lay, began it by saying, “We’re here to honor two heroes.”

On May 8, 2006, around 3:40 p.m., 18-year-old Michael Kenneth carjacked a van. Responding to the call, Armel went outside to the police station’s rear lot. But as she reached her cruiser, Kennedy—armed with five handguns, an assault weapon and a high-powered rifle—drove into that lot.

There, an unarmed Garbarino was tending to things inside his cruiser before leaving on vacation. Staring just a few yards away, Kennedy ambushed him, firing more than 20 rounds at the officer with an AK-47-type rifle.

When the shooting began, Armel, a 17-year police veteran, made her presence known. Kennedy to draw fire away from Garbarino. She and Kennedy exchanged gunfire, and a bullet from his 30-06 rifle pierced her ballistic vest and entered her chest.

She made it back inside her cruiser, but was shot again in the legs. Yet even though mortally wounded, she still fired four more rounds, trying to stop the assailant. Armel was later pronounced dead at Inova Fairfax Hospital.

Garbarino also displayed bravery under fire that day. Although he’d been shot five times and was gravely wounded and in pain, the 23-year police veteran used his cruiser’s radio to alert other officers to the danger. He provided suspect information, told the police helicopter where to land and warned other officers to approach from the front of the building so they wouldn’t walk straight into harm’s way.

He also prayed to God and told his fellow officers, “I’m not going to die here.” True to his word, Garbarino held on in the hospital for nine more days, but succumbed to his injuries May 17, 2006.

Last Tuesday’s remembrance ceremony took place in that same parking lot, at the same time the tragedy happened. Attendees included Deputy County Executive Dave Rohrer, county Police Chief Ed Roessler, former county fire and rescue Assistant Chief of Operations Dave Roht, former Sully District Station Commander Susan Culin, family members and colleagues of Armel and Garbarino—including Armel’s former partner, Mike Motafches, and former Sully District Supervisor Michael Frey, whose office was in that police station. Capt. Shawn Perkins, a county police chaplain, gave the invocation.

“Thank you for the opportunity of honoring the lives Vicky and Mike lived and their public service, and bless each public servant,” he prayed. “These were two of my friends. And in these times in which we live—in honor of the lives they gave—I challenge you to continue to do your best, despite the atmosphere where you often don’t feel appreciated.”

“The hope is that, when you’re out on the street, you’ll do things, not because of what you’ll get in return,” continued Perkins. “You’re giving in good measure, as God promises to give to us. Thank you for all you do for so many who won’t thank you. Be safe out there.”

Recalling May 8, 2006, Lay said, “I was standing just a few yards away, [at] the [parking-lot] gate, I remember that.”

Some of the attendees at the remembrance ceremony for the two, fallen officers.

with the National Capital Regional Intelligence Center, and I responded here that day. I saw men and women at their best, and I saw valor. Vicky and Vicky are those examples of valor, and every day I go through that [parking-lot] gate, I remember that.”

Next came a moment of silence in their memory, followed by a tone sounding and a police helicopter flyover. Then Lay said he’d be returning to their families the memorials people had given the Police Department in Garbarino’s and Armel’s honor, over the years.

Stepping next to the podium was the assistant station commander, Lt. Ryan Morgan. “This always touched me deep inside and, every year, it hurts,” he said. “They say time’s supposed to heal, but we won’t forget. We’ll always preserve the memory of Mike and Vicky. I consider all of you family, and I just wanted to say thank you. Mike and Vicky will never be forgotten by anyone here.”

Then Armel’s and Garbarino’s families laid flowers on their own and on each other’s memorials there. Afterward, Garbarino’s widow, Sue Garbarino Woods (who remarried last September) said, “It was tough,” but also stressed how much she appreciated the event.

“I was at the McLean District Station earlier today, and they had a service today, too.”

‘It Restores Your Faith in Humanity’

Injured police officer receives money raised for her.

By Bonnie Hobbs

ne minute, McLean Police Officer Ashley Block was helping out during the March 2 windstorm; and the next, she was pinned to the ground by a tree that crashed down on her. She sustained severe injuries; and when a Sully District police officer mentioned her accident to the general manager of a Greenbriar pizza place, it spurred a fundraiser for her.

It was held March 20 at MOD Pizza, and police and firefighters from throughout Fairfax County, plus area residents, braved freezing temperatures, sleet and ice to get there. A month later, on April 26 – although still on crutches – Block was able to be at the restaurant, herself, to receive a check for the $3,000 raised in her name.

“I’m lucky to be alive,” she said. “I came close to being paralyzed. I just took my first steps today.”

When the windstorm struck, Block was a new patrol officer. Trees were down everywhere and, while one officer cut them up, she cleared away the debris. But the wind was so strong that the top of a tree broke off and fell on her, knocking her onto the ground and impaling her left leg. She broke her femur, shoulder, elbow, four ribs and some vertebrae.

“Tired of trees now,” she said. “When it happened, I heard a crack and started running – and all of a sudden, I was down and blacked out. The other officer called for help; then Dispatch called me, and I answered so they’d know I was alert and could respond. The next day, in the hospital, the ladies of Dispatch came to see me and brought me flowers. They said, ‘We’re so glad you responded; we didn’t know if you were conscious.’”

Block spent five days in the hospital and was then in a rehabilitation hospital for two-and-a-half weeks. Meanwhile, her mom, Janet Winner, packed up and moved here from Michigan to take care of her daughter while she convalesced.

She now undergoes physical therapy, five days a week, both at the Police Academy and with a private physical therapist. “I want to get back to where I need to be,” she said. “But it’ll be four to six months until I’m back at work on full duty.”

On April 26, Block and her family and boyfriend, PFC Sharif Issa, of the McLean District Station, were treated to a pizza-and-salad dinner by Dean Ladson, general manager of MOD Pizza in the Greenbriar Town Center. Then Ladson and MOD District Manager Dirk Huber presented her with the check.

Before the check presentation, Ladson told Winner how happy they were to hold the fundraiser for her daughter, and she replied, “This was for taking care of my baby; I think it’s awesome.”

Block said she became a police officer because “I always had a passion to serve the community; I just had a calling for it. I hope to work federally someday, but I wanted to see what law enforcement was like on the streets, first. This accident is a hurdle, but it could have been a lot worse.”

As for the pizza fundraiser, she said, “It was amazing; I’m very grateful. Not many communities come together like that for an officer.”

But, said Ladson, “It’s always important that people know there are others outside [of their immediate circle] who care. It restores your faith in humanity.”

Batting Cage Temporarily Closing Sparks an Uprising

Park Authority looking for new management.

By Mike Salmon

outside the beltway midst the rolling hills, trees and Little League baseball teams, the Dugout batting cage in Centreville is a center of attention for some, and a source of Fairfax County Park Authority jobs for others, but that all came to a halt on May 1 when the Park Authority closed the facility. There was something in the lease, and Bernard C. Voyten, Jr. didn’t feel the closure was warranted rallying against the closure.

Voyten is the president of the engineer- ing firm Voyten and Associates, Inc. that financed and built the batting cage 25 years ago, he said, and was never reimbursed for the design and equipment, he said.

“We have paid FCPA hundreds of thou- sands of dollars in rent, but more impor- tantly, provided a recreational facility which FCPA was unable to provide,” he said in a release.

Voyten compared the batting cage closure to the closure of the “Islands in the Park,” mini golf closure five years ago, which was done “in the best interest of the FCPA and the residents of Fairfax County,” as stated in the release, and Fairfax County spent $180,000 in legal fees, and $170,000 re- moving the “Islands in the Park.” It was next to the Dugout batting cage in Braddock Park.

Others came out to support the batting cage and in the end, the Dugout Batting Cage will soon live on to see another line drive. District Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield) talked to some of his constitu- ents about the closure. “We have heard from some of the regular users of the batting cages and I have let it be known that per- manent closure will not happen,” he said. “The decision to terminate the lease agree- ment was the Park Authority’s due to long standing issues that the parties have not been able to resolve. Fortunately, the bat- ting cages will again be open in approxi- mately 2-3 weeks after the necessary staff is hired and/or rehired, which I know is important to the community.”

According to information released by FCPA spokesperson Judy Pedersen on Fri- day, May 11, “We are in the midst of a changeover from past management and hope to have the site operational soon. We recognize that this closure is inconvenient and intend to begin operations again as soon as reasonably possible,” she said.

Voyten is skeptical from past dealings with the FCPA, and has heard they are opening this coming Saturday, May 19, but he’ll believe it when he sees it. The equipment has been confiscated, Voyten is owed some money, he says, and he feels they have not been supportive. Is he happy that it’s reop- ening? “If it provides pleasure and the same level of service, yes I’m happy,” he said. But he is skeptical the FCPA can come through. “It’s a tough one,” he said. With the money owed to Voyten, his future plans fall in the ‘can’t comment,’ category, he said.

Any dispute with tokens that have already been purchased will be resolved by the FCPA, or batters can just hold on to them and use them again when the Dugout re-opens.

“We ask for your patience in this matter. For more information please contact Park Services Director Barbara Nugent at 703-324-8585 or the Public Information Office at 703-324-8662,” according to the FCPA.

Help Assist Fire Victims

BY KATHY SMITH
SULLY DISTRICT SUPERVISOR

As we continue to assess the needs of the residents displaced by the fires on May 2, we have identified two additional needs:

MONETARY DONATIONS

While gift cards continue to be a great resource, cash will work best for addressing housing needs, including application costs, deposits, rent, etc. Please consider designating a cash donation to Western Fairfax Christian Ministries, the organization taking the lead to work directly with the county and the affected residents, for this immediate need.

You can contact Elisa Johnson with Western Fairfax Christian Ministries (WFCM); 4511 Daly Drive, Suite J, Chantilly, VA. WFCM can receive donations in person from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and from 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. WFCM is also accepting online cash donations at wfcvmva.org. To donate online, first click the ‘Donate’ button on the main page. You can then direct your funds to fire victims by scrolling down to the “Select a Designation” section and choosing the ‘Support Fund – Victims of Centreville Fire May 2018’ option. For additional information, call 703-988-9656 or email rklowe@wfcvmva.org.

HOUSING

Long-term affordable housing options for those displaced by the fire, particularly our older adult residents, is a primary focus right now. We are looking for tax-credit affordable housing level and accessibility (ADA) among other criteria.

For offers or information on housing criteria, contact the County Department of Housing and Community Development at 703-279-7302, TTY 711. In addition, Volunteer Fairfax continues to receive donations of generic gift cards on behalf of the coordinating community-based organizations serving the residents. Denominations of $20 or less are preferred. Gift cards can be dropped off during normal business hours or mailed to their office at 10530 Page Ave, Fairfax, VA 22030. Alternatively, call Volunteer Fairfax at 703-246-3460 or email volunteers@volunteerfairfax.org to coordinate your gift. After hours, leave a message and someone will contact you to coordinate your donation.

GO FUND ME CAMPAIGNS

You may have noticed several Go Fund Me accounts created online related to the Forest Glen and Sully Station fires. Please note that these are not official Fairfax County-sponsored fundraising efforts. Fairfax County, through its donations management plan within the county’s emergency operations plan, has at this time identified Western Fairfax Christian Ministries and Volunteer Fairfax as the official custodians of donations to residents affected by the fires.

For residents affected by the fires

People impacted by the Centreville fires may contact the county’s Coordinated Services Planning at 703-222-0880, TTY 711 for short-term or long-term needs.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Let Every Day Be Mother’s Day

To the Editor:

Mother’s Day this year was Sunday, May 13. Usually on this day we give our mom a gift to show how much we appreciate her. Many tend to buy flowers, cards, and chocolate. However, as a Muslim girl, my love for my mother is not even equal to those gifts and is not limited to one day. I believe that every day should be Mother’s Day because our mothers are very important. Once a person came to the Prophet Muhammad (Peace and blessings be upon him) and asked, ‘O Holy Messenger of God who is the most deserving person to get nice treatment from me?’ He replied, ‘Your mother’. He asked, ‘Who next?’ To this, he got the same reply. When he repeated this question for the fourth time, he was told by the Prophet (PBUH), ‘Your father’. This shows how much the Prophet (PBUH) and the whole of an importance Islam gives to mothers.

I appreciate all the hard work my mom does for me and I thank her for loving me and being there for me. When I am sick, my mother takes care of me and helps me get better. She drives me to school when I miss the bus and packs my lunch. Instead of making her favorite dish she will make mine to see me happy. When she buys things, she thinks about what I want instead of what she wants. My mom helps me with my homework because she wants to see me succeed. Even when she is busy she will go out of her way to tend to my needs. There are many more things I can write about my mother but that will take many years to finish. I believe that we should thank our moms every day and should show her appreciation. Just take a couple of minutes out of your day and call your mother and thank her and tell her how much she means to you.

On Her Way to Miss Teen USA Pageant

Himanvi Panidepu, Centreville High senior, in national competition.

By Ashley Claire Simpson

Senioritis: A colloquial term for the general burnout suffered by seniors in high school, most acutely in the few months leading up to graduation. With post-grad plans solidified and celebrations in full swing, the idea of participating in a national competition would be unthinkable for most 18-year-olds. This, however, is not the case for Centreville High School senior Himanvi Panidepu, who will represent the state of Virginia at the Miss Teen USA pageant in Shreveport, La. next week.

Panidepu will arrive at Miss Teen USA by way of Miss Virginia Teen USA, the pageant she won last October against 35 other highly-motivated young women. The crown finally graced her head after nearly a lifetime of dreaming about that precise moment.

“As cliché as this sounds, I used to watch the Miss USA pageants on live TV with my mom when I was a little kid,” Panidepu said. “I looked up to all the contestants and wanted to be one of them one day. Then, for many years, it just seemed unrealistic, so I pushed it out of my mind. What really got me into the game was when, about three years ago, I started competing in pageants specifically for Indian American girls. Ultimately winning a title. I did really well and got a lot of opportunities. After that, I decided to go for it and compete in the pageants that put me on the road to Miss Teen USA.”

Although she’s clearly good under pressure, Panidepu shouldn’t encounter any logistical surprises next week in Louisiana. The Miss Teen USA pageant follows the same model as does the Miss Virginia Teen USA pageant: in-depth backstage interviews with a select panel of judges, and both evening gown and fitness wear competitions. That’s just the preliminary round.

From there, only a fraction of young women advance to the second and final day of pageantry.

“I don’t know if I’ll win next week, but I never thought I’d be the titleholder for Virginia, either,” Panidepu said. “It’s all about footwork on why I always wanted to do pageants in the first place.”

Panidepu was a junior in high school in the fall of 2016 when she plunged into the mainstream pageant circuit. Her eyes were on the prize during her Miss Virginia Teen USA debut, but she didn’t exactly land the finish she had in mind.

“I thought, it’s time to do what I wanted to do all these years ago, and that was Miss Virginia Teen USA,” she said. “And then, after all that, I didn’t even make it to the Top 15. I had worked hard to be ready that year, and all the while I had people putting me down for doing it. Pageants come with a certain stereotype, and even though I know it’s false, good friends of mine would talk behind my back, saying I cared too much about vain things. But, it all gave me a chance to take a step back and self-reflect. The whole process helped me figure out exactly who I was. It helped me spiritually, mentally, and physically. So I made a commitment to try again the next year.”

And try again, she did.

With a year of experience beneath her sash, Panidepu cinched the 2018 Miss Virginia Teen USA title and became the first Indian American to do so. And she stands to make more history, because, if she is crowned Miss Teen USA next week, she’ll become the first Indian American Miss Teen USA.

If that’s not enough pressure for a girl who isn’t legally old enough to celebrate victory with a sip of champagne, a win next week would make her the first Miss Virginia Teen USA to step into the role of Miss Teen USA.

Kim Nicewonder, the longtime executive director and producer of the Miss Virginia Teen USA pageant, said she won’t be surprised if Panidepu makes this kind of history next week.

“She has a great chance of winning Miss Teen USA, which is the largest and most prestigious pageant that there is for girls between the ages of 14 and 19,” Nicewonder said. “What is so incredible about Himanvi’s success story is how far she came in just one year. She’s a great example of what these girls can learn and gain through the process of a pageant. In vying for the state title, they make decisions about how they want to live their lives. After 2016, for example, Himanvi was determined to make her lifestyle healthier, and to make an even bigger difference in her community, and she came back to the pageant just one year later and won it all. I’ve never seen a harder working young lady in my life. We’re all so proud she’s representing us.”

Nicewonder has overseen Miss Virginia Teen USA for 25 years and is herself former Miss Virginia USA — the grandniece counterpart to the Miss Virginia Teen USA. The Miss Universe Organization has been crowning Miss Teen USAs since 1983, and is the same organization that puts on both the Miss USA and Miss Universe events.

“As being a state titleholder is a big commitment,” Panidepu said. “I have appearance every weekend and many during the week even though I’m still in school. After winning a state pageant, part of the process is getting to further a cause you champion. I got to start my own platform, Happy Choices, which is an initiative to target mental health issues and to work toward the prevention of drug and alcohol abuse. For Happy Choices, I talk to groups of students and different schools. For middle school students, I talk about the dangers of drug and alcohol and the effects that come along with giving into the pressures. I encourage these kids to focus on their energy on a hobby that will give them an adrenaline rush — or some other kind of satisfaction — so they don’t have to chase a dangerous high.”

When her audience is on the younger side and not ready for direct references to drugs or alcohol, Panidepu teaches kids all about the simple yet transformative art of goal setting.

“Just recently, I spoke to a fourth grade class and walked them through how to set goals and how to make a plan for accomplishing them,” Panidepu said. “These girls go further in competition — and of course in their overall lives — when they stand for something and have productive thoughts about the world around them. It’s not just physical beauty; we see the contestants as ambassadors for states and schools they attend.”

As for tangible benefits, pageants at the state level award winners and runners up with prize packages that often include life-changing college scholarships.

“As executive director, I’ve been able to incorporate significant college scholarships into the Virginia state pageant,” Nicewonder said. “Every year, we award more than $2 million for schooling opportunities. It’s an incredible feeling, knowing that some of these girls can further their education by participating in a pageant. I keep getting more and more private state universities on board as contributors, so our impact is just getting bigger. We have so many universities — including Hollins University, the University of Virginia at Wise, and Emory and Henry College — that offer generous scholarships.”

While the iconic evening gown element of beauty pageants still exist, Miss Teen USA three years ago did away with the swimsuit component of competition and replaced it with an athletic wear showcase.
As the school year nears an end, it's time to thank those whose jobs run the gamut from comforting kindergartners with separation anxiety to teaching biology to hormonal teenagers. End-of-year teacher gifts are seemingly ubiquitous in June, but how does one choose a useful present that doesn't get re-gifted or donated? Local tastemakers offer their take on gifts for teachers that teachers actually want to receive.

"Teachers can always use extra supplies for their classrooms," said Courtney Thomas of the Picket Fence in Burke. "Put together a goody bag full of pencils and markers, notepads, page flags and sticky notes or anything your teacher needs to keep his or her desk stocked. Tie it all up in a reusable bag they can repurpose to carry papers and books to and from school."

Treat your teacher to a spa day at home, advises Thomas. "Get a collection of your favorite lotions, soaps and candles and give your teachers a much appreciated excuse to pamper themselves."

Flowers are a cheerful present to offer those who teach children, but fresh flowers have a limited lifespan, advises Todd Martz of Home on Cameron in Old Town Alexandria who suggests bouquets with longevity. "Felt flowers always look fresh and add a bit happiness to every day," he said.

Sometimes the most treasured gifts are those that don't come with a price tag. "My favorite handmade teacher gift is a thoughtful note of thanks," said Kathryn Horn Coneway of Art at the Center in Alexandria. "Taking the time to say thank you and be specific about how an adult has impacted your child's growth is a powerful way of affirming the work teachers do. I think it is great to encourage kids to write letters of thanks as well and to think through what specifically they can name that they have learned or gained from a teacher."

"A beautiful and thoughtful gift for all teachers are guest towels," says Cristina Chiotti of Sonoran Rose Boutique in Potomac, Md. "[We have some] that come from South Africa and are available in a variety of lovely prints and designs," she said. "Delicious wine-scented bath bombs from Napa Valley are the perfect gift for the teacher who needs a little pampering."

For teachers with a preppy spirit, Amanda Mertins, of Patina Polished Living in Alexandria, advises, "Some of the most thoughtful gifts for teachers who go above and beyond to educate our children are gift monogrammed items, gift cards and notepads."

And for teachers who enjoy spending time outdoors, Chiotti says an ideal gift includes "Pairing some local Maryland honey with our gardening tool kit for the perfect springtime gardening gift."

because Mike was there 20 years,” she said. “I talked to a police widow who lost her husband in another jurisdiction. And she said, after the funeral, that was it from the Police Department. And it made me feel how rare and blessed we are to have such a wonderful department.”

“We’ve had 12 years of services here,” continued Woods. “And I often think of how our healing would have been so much different, had we not had the support of the department.” She was there with her two, now-grown daughters and said they were her “emotional compass” when their father was killed.

“Mike always told me, ‘If anything should ever happen to me, make sure the girls are always happy and smiling, because I’m fine,’” said Woods. “And they remembered that, so I was able to move on. I’d cry a river if I could change it, but it wouldn’t help. He died when he was supposed to.” She also said talking about him and helping other survivors helped her feel better.

“During the year, I talk to the graduating cadets at the [county] Police Academy and give a 30-minute speech about our life before, what happened that day, how we survived and how the department helped,” she explained. “I also tell them that we’re survivors and we like to be approached and have people say, ‘We’re thinking of you.’ And this [memorial] ceremony is all about remembrance. It gets emotional, but it’s important.”

“It means everything to me,” added married daughter Katie Mannix. “Just the fact that, after all this time, they do things and remember my dad, is everything.”

Sister Natalie, who graduated three days earlier from Bridgewater College in the Shenandoah Valley, said, “I was so upset that we all met at the hospital. We didn’t find out she’d died until after we got there.”

“Each year, Tyler Armel goes to the county’s rose-garden ceremony in honor of MikeGarbarino’s and Vicky Armel’s family members during the ceremony.

“Remembering that time, as well, was Susan Culin, who was the station’s captain when the tragedy occurred. ‘On May 8, you flash back,’” she said. “‘This day has so much meaning for this entire department. It’s extremely important that this station remembers Mike and Vicky and the sacrifices they made.’

“‘It’s hard for everybody, but there are also a lot of good memories with both of them to focus on,” she continued. “They were both really good and dedicated officers, and good people. And that’s what we come to.

“Mike’s sister, Sandy Munday, called the annual memorial ceremony “heart-wrenching. It’s cool that they remember Vicky, but it’s also sad. It makes you remember where you were that day. I was in the grocery store when my husband called. He was a battalion chief with the Fairfax City Fire Department then, so they called him first and said, ‘We think your sister-in-law got hurt at Sully.’ Then I called her husband Tyler and we all met at the hospital. We didn’t find out she’d died until after we got there.”

“Each year, Tyler Armel goes to the county’s rose-garden ceremony in honor of all its fallen police officers. His daughter Mason was just 5 when her mother was killed. But since Mason can drive now, she attended last week’s event for the first time.

“Armel’s old squad, plus her partner Mike Morafoche, took Mason to lunch before the ceremony and told her stories about her mom. The remembrance also made a big impression on her. ‘It reminded me that she was really heroic,’” said Mason. “‘And it makes me proud that she’s my mom.’

“ar all in, added Munday, “We really appreciate all Fairfax County has done for us. They give us transportation to Police Week functions and send wreaths each Christmas to our homes and to our family members, too. And that makes me happy because my sister loved Christmas.”

“Besides that, she said, the county’s Peer Support team calls several times a year “to check on us and see if we need anything. They’re wonderful; we couldn’t have survived without them. The police really are a family.”

Free Car seat Inspections
Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections Thursday, May 24, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed.

Because of time constraints, only the first 35 vehicles arriving on each date will be inspected. That way, technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed.

In a game of word association, “musical theater” is usually followed by “The Phantom of the Opera.” With over 10,000 performances on Broadway, Andrew Lloyd Webber’s 1986 musical about an opera house haunted by an equally haunted man is easily a cultural phenomenon. As popular as it is, Phantom of the Opera poses many obstacles to those who decide to perform it, including the vocally demanding nature of the score and many technical aspects such as the crashing chandelier. The cast and crew of Westfield’s production of “The Phantom of the Opera” converted these challenges into triumphs as they put on an overall impressive show.

Leading the cast as Christine Daae was Molly Van Trees, whose performance demonstrated an enviable vocal range and endurance that far exceeded expectations. Van Trees showed that she wasn’t just a pretty voice as she also displayed a wide range of emotions during her character’s ascent from choral girl to leading soprano in songs like “Think of Me.” John Henry Stamper, playing the title character and the “angel of music” behind Christine’s success, took on the iconic role of the Phantom with a mysterious and ominous stage presence fitting of his character. Aided by impressive technical effects on the part of the sound crew, Stamper’s full voice echoed through the theater and sent chills through the audience. Van Trees and Stamper only grew stronger when they performed together in numbers such as “Phantom of the Opera” and “The Point of No Return,” skillfully capturing the complicated and unhealthy relationship of their characters.

The supporting and featured cast only added to the performance as they proved the old acting saying to be true: “There are no small roles, just small actors.” There certainly weren’t any small roles or small actors in Westfield’s performance as members of the cast, particularly the comic duos of Monsieurs Firmin and Andre (played by Braeden Anderson and Harry Schlatter) and Carlotta and Piangi (Lauren LeVine and Alan Gutierrez-Urista). Each of the actors contributed their own moments of humor through their extreme physicality, energy, and dedication to their roles, making them audience favorites. The dancers of the opera house also exhibited extreme dedication with their impressive performance in the ballet numbers, which were student choreographed by Bridgette Carey and Emily Biedinger.

The greatest achievement of the show was the combined efforts of the technical crews to make such a logistically difficult show happen. Between the intricate costumes, many of which were handmade, fast and seamless stage management, and complicated and well thought out light cues, it was easy to become invested in the story. The disfigured appearance of the Phantom is an integral part of the plot and can be a lot of pressure for any hair and makeup department, but the head of hair and makeup, Kaili Fox, transformed the Phantom from a high school student to a terrifying oddity without a hitch.

Compared to the “disasters beyond imagination” of the Opera Populaire, the cast and crew of Westfield’s “Phantom of the Opera” suffered little to no hiccups within their performance. The company of Phantom created their own complex, layered, and entertaining interpretation of a classic piece of musical theater. As long as Box 5 is left open, it seems Westfield will continue to delight audiences as they venture to unmask the Phantom.
Teen USA

“Girls like Himanvi are encouraged to prioritize healthy lifestyles instead of being concerned with body measurements,” Nizewonder said. “It’s all more about the individual girl and not as much about who best meets a standard for outer appearances.”

Panidepu proved to herself that the pride that comes from winning a beauty pageant really has nothing to do with looks at all.

“My whole mindset comes from understanding what exactly winning a pageant can mean in the end,” Panidepu said. “I know, for instance, that if I won Miss Virginia Teen USA, I’d be able to start an initiative like Happy Choices. There are of course so many great things that come from winning. But the best part of the prize is that I’ve gotten to make a difference in my community. Seeing the bigger picture, and where I fit, is what helped me win. The Miss Universe motto is to be ‘confidently beautiful.’ How much you believe in yourself, your goals, and your morals is what always shines through.”

Panidepu insists that she’s found a way to live a balanced life amid all the changes, excitement, and opportunities that lay before her as both a soon-to-be high school graduate and a Miss Teen USA contestant.

“Besides pageantry, Track and Field has been a big passion of mine all of high school,” she said. “I was Centreville’s Team Captain and I also got the Scholar Athlete Award, which meant I maintained a certain GPA while also getting to a certain level of achievement in my sport. My events were the 200- and 400-meters, and I did relays too.”

As the academic year winds down for Fairfax County Public Schools, Panidepu’s excitement builds for national competition next week. She won’t have much downtime afterward, either: in a few months, she will enter George Mason University as a college freshman.

The thing she’s most excited about, though, is that her hard work is paying off and she is in a position to help so many children suffering from misunderstood mental health disorders, including drug and alcohol addiction. Panidepu also knows that no matter what happens in Shreveport next week, she’ll continue to leverage her experiences in a way so that she can continue to help young people avoid such struggles.

“Unfortunately, classmates of mine have died because of drugs and alcohol,” she said. “Those deaths still affect me even though they were two, three years ago. But, even more recently ... my classmate was found dead on the street because of a drug deal gone wrong. It’s those incidents that drive me. One bad decision really can mean the difference between death and your dream.”

For more information on Miss Teen USA, including details on how to follow Panidepu’s progress, visit www.missuniverse.com/missusa.

Local young women aged 14 to 19 can apply for a chance to enter Miss Virginia Teen USA 2019 directly at https://www.missvirginiauusa.com/missteenusa.
