Exhibit Honoring Asian Pacific Americans at the Fairfax Museum

An innovative exhibit, considered a first of its kind, "I Want the Wide American Earth: An Asian Pacific Story," will be at the Fairfax Museum and Visitor Center through Dec. 31, 2018. Created in 2013 by the Smithsonian Asian Pacific American Center and the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES), the exhibit is on its 13-city national tour. The exhibit uses Filipino-American writer Carlos Bulosan's poem, "I Want the Wide American Earth" as the backdrop to share the complex story of Asian Pacific American history. It explains how Asian and Pacific Americans have influenced history in the United

THE CONNECTION

On Saturday, Oct. 6 around 4:30 a.m., a vandal spray-painted 19 swastikas on the exterior walls of the Jewish Community Center of Northern Virginia in Fairfax — sending shock waves that reverberated throughout the tight-knit community and beyond. In the week that has passed, the graffiti has been removed from the building on Little River Turnpike, and the outpouring of support from neighbors, elected officials, clergy and people from around the country has been overwhelming.

Undaunted by the hatred, the incident caused the community to unite. On Sunday, Oct. 14, about 400 people packed the “J” (JCCNV) at a “comm-UNITY” gathering to affirm peace and unity. A dozen Federal, state and local elected officials as well as religious leaders offered messages of love; musicians sang inspirational songs, and the attendees collaborated on a group art project. It was a tree trunk and branches and people traced their hands, cut them out, and placed them on the tree.

“We felt violated,” said David Yaffe, president of the Board of JCCNV. “This was not the first time; the JCC had been violated before. This vandalism is a reminder that there are people in this area who share neither community values nor the American dream of opportunity and diversity and inclusion.”

As a result of the vandalism, for four days he said they received phone calls from all over the country; as well as Facebook and other social media posts, which were “overwhelmingly supportive.”

Also offering words of support at the service were Pastor Dan Roschke of Bethlehem Lutheran Church; Hurunnessa Fariad of the ADAMS Center; Rabbi Brett Isserow of Beth El Hebrew Congregation; and Gil Preuss of the Jewish Federation of Greater Washington. Gov. Ralph Northam and U.S. Sen. Mark Warner sent messages of support as well.

According to Sharon Bulova, chairman of the Board of Supervisors: “I love it that so many faiths are here to express support, and really that is what defines us in Fairfax County,” she said. “We are a community that supports each other. We are a community that appreciates and celebrates each other — our different faiths, our different cultures; and we come together when one of us has been hurt. When one of us has been hurt or damaged, you’re damaging all of us ... This only makes us stronger.”

Added U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly (D-11): “I’m proud of our community today because one hater is not going to divide this community,” he said. “In this community (hatred) will never prevail ... Today all of us say ‘I am a Jew’; all of us say ‘I am a Muslim. I am an immigrant.’ Because I will not let you divide us — your hatred, your bigotry, your fear must go back where they came from.”

He continued: “So, as we look with horror and disdain at the 19 swastikas that were painted on this building or the defilement at the United Church of Christ, we know that this community has risen up in its revulsion and in its desire to express communion with those who were affected — because we were all affected. So, fear won’t ever prevail in this community as long as we stand as one. Nobody will divide us. And ultimately, love and compassion and caring and community will overtake hatred and fear.”

Del. Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41), who read a statement from U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine, said it was shocking and very disturbing seeing 19 swastikas across the “J.” “It’s a center in our community that’s welcoming and inclusive and all about diversity,” she said. “The hate that we saw was not representative of our community.”

Police Reform: More to Be Done

Five years after an officer shot and killed John Geer in Springfield, Implementation Group offers look at successful reforms, and recommends action in other areas.

BY KEN MOORE
THE CONNECTION

Despite police departments not being “known for embracing change,” said Phillip Niedzielski-Eichner, “we’ve seen Fairfax County and its Police Department achieve substantial and meaningful reform.”

Since the county’s Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission formed after a county officer shot and killed John Geer in 2013, the county has implemented 88 percent (179 of 202) of the actions recommended by the Commission.

“The report of the commission could have remained on the shelf since its release three years ago,” said Niedzielski-Eichner, chair.

Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova encouraged seven commission members to continue to assist and advise the county and police department as commission recommendations were assessed and implemented.

The informal implementation group issued a Final Report on Fairfax County Police Reform on Oct. 10. The report was undertaken by the group on its own initiative, believing that the community might benefit from an independent discussion of progress.

POLICE REFORMS will increase police accountability, divert those with mental illnesses into treatment instead of incarceration, reduce use of force injuries and death, open public access to incident information, and maintain public confidence in the police department, according to the Implementation Group.

Implemented highlights, according to the Final Report, issued last week, include:

- ❖ Diversion First, alternatives to incarceration for people with mental illnesses or developmental disabilities

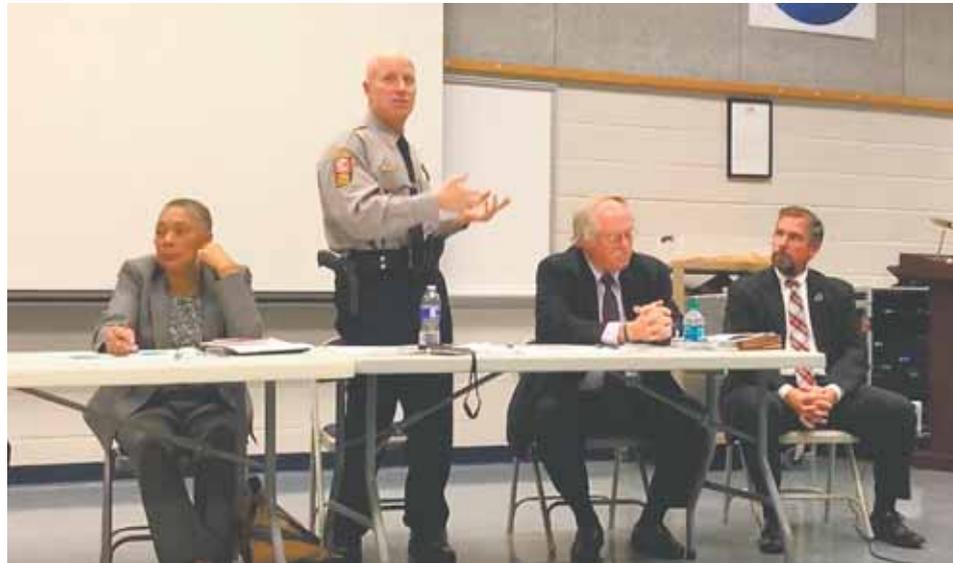

- ❖ Revisions to the police department’s Use of Force General Order, with de-escalation as the strategy of first resort when confronted with a threat rather than the use of deadly force

- ❖ An Independent Police Auditor who reviews investigations of death or serious injury cases

- ❖ A Civilian Review Panel to review investigations of civilian complaints regarding “abuse of authority” or “serious misconduct” by an officer

- ❖ A Media Relations Bureau led by a civilian professional who reports directly to the Police Chief

- ❖ A predisposition to disclose information by making revisions to information-related general orders in order to increase

Police Chief Ed Roessler speaks last November in Mount Vernon about the new Civilian Review Panel and Independent Police Auditor. New report credits police with “substantial and meaningful reform.”

public visibility of the department’s daily activities and performance,

- ❖ Revisions to policies governing vehicle pursuit that constrains their use and strengthens supervisory oversight

- ❖ Recruitment of high-caliber personnel that reflects the county’s diverse population

SOME RECOMMENDATIONS have been approved, but are still in the process of being implemented, including a call for full deployment of body-worn cameras and each patrol officer being equipped with “tasers” as less-lethal alternatives to the use of a firearm.

“Still, we believe more is possible to further build and maintain community trust,” said Niedzielski-Eichner.

The Implementation Group recommends the Board of Supervisors direct the police department to formally respond to findings of an Independent Police Auditor and a Civilian Panel, and to give the public an opportunity to comment on the findings and recommendations. As the group understands, the Chief of Police has chosen not to respond because the Board of Supervisors did not specifically direct him to do so.

The Chief of Police and his command leadership should maintain a “neutral public posture pending an investigation of a police-involved use of force incident,” the report recommends.

THE INDEPENDENT POLICE Auditor’s responsibilities could expand in several areas. The implementation group advocates for: monitoring and reviewing investigations of Sheriff Deputies involved in shootings, in-custody deaths, and any use of force incident resulting in serious injury or death; auditing police use of body worn cameras, providing an annual report to the Board and the public with findings and recommendations; and participation on two internal police review committees, the Use of Force Technical Review Committee and the Vehicle Pursuit Review Committee.

“The Implementation Group urges Chief Roessler and his commanders to sustain FCPD’s reform efforts and, in particular, to unflinchingly meet the ‘predisposition to release information’ standard with regard to openness and transparency, and to commit to respond to findings from the Independent Police Auditor and the Civilian Review Panel.”

The report also calls for a data-driven monitoring program that fully leverages data on police use-of-force and other data now being collected in response to the Commission’s recommendations.

Continued public involvement will be key to continuing to build trust with the community, the report says.

“Continued successes and improvements will depend on Chief Roessler, his commanders and continued meaningful collaboration with citizens engaged in implementation,” said group member Randy Sayles.

OPINION

Yes, America, Religious Freedom Began in Fairfax County

BY CHAP PETERSEN
STATE SENATOR (D-34)

The Vienna Metro station is the epicenter of suburban northern Virginia. Thousands of commuters come and go every morning, dropping off loved ones or catching the Orange Line into the urban core of the DMV. None of them are aware that just a few hundred yards away one of the most significant (and least known) Americans lived 250 years ago on a modest farm.

Jeremiah Moore was typical of English settlers who migrated to rural Fairfax County in the colonial era to clear fields and establish farms. Unlike most of his neighbors in Anglo-dominated Tidewater Virginia, he was a religious dissenter who found inspiration in the "Baptist" movement that spread through Great Britain in the mid-18th century.

The Baptists were not welcome in colonial Virginia. Its political and economic structure was based upon allegiance to the Church of England, which was the only permitted church. Indeed, a pastor could not open a church or preach without a license from the Church. Regardless, Moore in the early 1770s became an itinerant preacher fearlessly promoting the Gospel, without a license, to the farmers and tradesmen in northern Virginia.

When the Fairfax County Sheriff found out about Moore, he confined him in the County jail, then located at the County seat of Alexandria. According to family lore, Moore continued to preach through the cell bars, thereby undoubtedly driving his captors to distraction.

This incident would have been forgotten but for one remarkable fact – colonial Virginia in 1773 was changing rapidly and Moore's neighbors did not agree with his imprisonment. Indeed, when the case came to trial, a Fairfax County jury acquitted Moore and sent him back to farm and presumably his speaking engagements.

A movement was starting. Inspired by Moore's notorious case, another Fairfax County landowner and attorney, George Mason, added "freedom of religion" to his "Fairfax County Resolves" which was read to the Fairfax County militia when they mustered to join General Washington in May 1775. A member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, Mason added the same language to his Virginia Declaration of Rights, which later became part of the Virginia Constitution.

During the Revolutionary War, as the cause of liberty became national, Moore re-emerged as a spokesman for religious minorities. In 1779, he presented a petition signed by 10,000 Virginia freeholders – an impressive number in an era without mass media or big cities – to Gov. Thomas Jefferson asking Virginia to adopt Jefferson's Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom. In 1786, after years of Moore's lobbying, the Assembly finally did so.

Moore never backed off. In his senior years, he was still writing letters to now-President Jefferson decrying the "the most glaring violation of Rights that has ever disgraced a Free People," namely Virginia's requirement that eligible voters own at least 50 acres.

Moore died in 1814 at his farm. His grandson Thomas became a prominent attorney in the town of Fairfax and his great-grandson Walton Moore served in the U.S. Congress. Descendants continue to live in the area as attorneys, Virginia lawmakers and even as Anglican clergy.

Jeremiah Moore's real legacy, of course, has been the idea of religious freedom which has been enshrined in the U.S. Constitution since 1791, when Mason's "Fairfax County Resolves" found their home in the Federal Bill of Rights. Indeed, the "establishment of religion" prohibition in the First Amendment directly harkens back to Moore's imprisonment in 1773.

Today, the American ideal of freedom of religion is still a work in progress. Yet it also provides a beacon to billions around the globe who seek to practice their faith in peace. And it all begins in Fairfax County.

A Warning Too Dire to Ignore

BY KENNETH R.
"KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

For those who like to plan where you will be and what you will be doing in twenty years a complicating factor that has for too long been ignored must be considered: climate change. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change brought together by the United Nations issued a report earlier this month, written and edited by 91 scientists from 40 countries and based on a review of more than 6,000 scientific reports, predicting much more dire consequences of climate change much earlier than previously had been expected.

Conditions that have been visibly happening with much more regularity in recent years of intense rains and hurricanes, droughts, excessive heat, flooding, and wildfires will be getting worse. Forget retirement to that beach house you have been fixing up; there is a high probability it may be under water as the beach disappears. Rising costs of living may eat into our retirement savings yielding them inadequate.

What about life for our children and grandchildren? What will it be like? The evidence presented is too compelling to ignore. To sustain a future quality of life for our posterity we must take aggressive action now.

As reported in The New York Times, the authors found that if greenhouse gas emissions continue at the current rate, the atmosphere will warm up by as much as 2.7 degrees Fahrenheit above preindustrial levels by 2040 inundating coastlines and intensifying droughts and poverty. The new report shows that many of the most serious changes will come much earlier than expected.

The report said to prevent 2.7 degrees of warming, greenhouse pollution must be reduced by 45 percent from 2010 levels by 2030 and 100 percent by 2050.

The use of coal as an electricity source would have to drop from nearly 40 percent today to less than 7 percent. Renewable energy such as wind and solar, which makes up about 20 percent of electricity generation, would have to increase to as much as 67 percent.

While the report talks about the science involved, the politics of the issue present the greatest challenge. With a federal administration filled with climate-change deniers and with a pledge to bring back coal for greater energy production, there seems to be a great likelihood that the United States will indeed withdraw from the Paris Climate Agreement. (Under the terms of the agreement, the U.S. wouldn't actually be able to withdraw until November 2020.)

The administration also may eliminate more regulations that were put in place to reduce climate change if those regulations stand in the way of greater business profits.

Until sanity returns at the national level, it is important that actions — as small as they may seem — be taken at state, local, community and family levels to preserve our climate and our planet. We have a responsibility to our children and others to live our lives in a way that recognizes the clear and present dangers our planet faces. The warning is too dire to ignore.

Wolf Trap Park Camp Out

Fifth and sixth graders learn camping skills and experience the great outdoors.

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

The ninth edition of the First Time Campers Program at Wolf Trap Park is officially in the books. Held between Sunday, Oct. 7 and Monday, Oct. 8 at Wolf Trap Park — with a special permit in the otherwise no-camping, no-fires park — some 40 campers from schools around the region and a small army of adult and youth volunteer leaders, enjoyed pitching tents, setting up camp, cooking their own meals using dutch ovens, and activities like fishing, archery, hiking, bird watching, rock wall climbing and more.

Sponsored by the Friends of Wolf Trap and Wolf Trap National Park for the Performing Arts and organized and supervised by Scout Leader Gary Pan and his experienced Troop 55 Scouts, the program was piloted in 2014 as a way to help local youngsters, some from Title I schools and lower income families, enjoy a fun-filled overnighter right in their own backyard.

The 30-plus hour outing is not strictly for camping “newbies” only, said Pan, Scoutmaster of Troop 55 of Great Falls. “Kids who came to the first Camp Out are here today and we love that they want to keep coming back.”

Pan is thrilled that quite a few return to the bi-annual adventure as volunteers, helping the first timers to make the most of the experience, like Herndon Middle Schooler Tommy Maxson, who started as a camper 3 years ago, and is now a patrol leader.

“I like this,” said Maxson. “Our job is to help out the Senior Leaders whenever we are needed, and to set a good example at all times, and help others learn how to do all the tasks properly and just make sure that everyone has a great time, safely.”

Pan may be the camp director, but it’s youngsters like Maxson, and Senior Youth Patrol Leaders and other young volunteers who are really in charge of the action.

Nick Hodge, of Great Falls and a Langley High School student, who’s been attending the event since the first outing, heads the male campers’ section. His fellow Langley school mate, MaryEllen Keating, does the honors as the female Senior Youth Leader.

“It’s really cool,” said Keating. “I especially love seeing the kids who are experiencing this for the first time, watching them as they find out what they can really do.”

Just as being a First Timer isn’t a requirement for participation, neither is being a Boy or Girl Scout. “Kids come here, they may or may not want to get involved with Scouting afterward, but all are welcome,” said Pan. “It’s still an opportunity to learn new things, gain confidence, make friends and just be outdoors for a bit.”

Campers like Maddie Musetti from Herndon Elementary School, and Peter Popenko from Forestville Elementary agree.

“It’s been a great experience,” was Maddie’s take on the camp out. Peter seemed most interested in the rock climbing wall. Watching his father, who was also on hand, shimmy up to the top of the wall leaves little doubt where the son gets his climbing abilities.

“It’s also an opportunity to discover that there is amazing, and accessible natural resources and activities right here, without having to travel far away,” added Alan Day, chair of the Friends of Wolf Trap, and one of the original organizers of the Camp Out. With his knowledge of the park and its wonders, Day also leads the campers on hiking adventures on trails built by the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club — another collaborator in the camping event and an organization of which Day is the year for the local economy. “The campus has been the catalyst for regional economic growth and development,” Spece said, as she headed up to her office on the second floor of one of the former prison buildings Saturday evening.

In addition to his Troop 55 and Venture Crew 364 of Great Falls, The Friends of Wolf Trap, the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, Wolf Trap Park and the Park Service, Pan, and Day say that the assistance and participation of The Great Falls Rotary Club, Orvis of Tysons, Paxton Companies, Ranger Surplus, Panacea Consulting, BOWA, Meadowlark Gardens Master Gardener, the Audubon Society of Northern Virginia and Sara Holtz, of Scouting BSA with her Master Certification in “Leave No Trace” with many other unsung heroes, makes this adventure not only possible, “but a true learning experience all while having fun.”

The lights were on in the other buildings also, as artists talked with prospective customers and fellow artists. Featured artist for the evening was Marilyn Harrington, a Leesburg resident that displayed scarfs she weaved with wool, silk and Tencel, a material that is made from trees. “I’m a weaver, if its woven, that’s what I do,” she said.

Katie and Ashley Thornton, sisters that recently moved to Lorton, went from building to building, checking out the sculptures, and paintings. They heard about the art event and were intrigued by the prison aspect of it. “We found it interesting that it was a jail,” said Katie Thornton.

A portion of the Cross-County Trail was recently modified through the Workhouse grounds, and the restoration of a former prisoner baseball field is a project being taken on by the Workhouse. “It was for use by the prisoners,” said Spece.

In one of the buildings, pottery wheels were turning as ceramic students learned to make cups and bowls. Fairfax resident Anna Hjelmroos has taken a few ceramics classes. “It’s relaxing, very fun,” she said. Her works don’t just sit on a shelf either. “I do eat ice cream out of my bowls I made,” she said.

In another building, a museum is coming together that has information and exhibits surrounding the suffragists imprisonment in the early 1900’s, and former prisoner artwork is on display. Former prison guard Joe Rodriguez gave art descriptions as one of the docents, and Christine Zinger was dressed like Kate Heffelfinger, one of the women suffragists that was imprisoned in 1917 at the Occoquan Workhouse Prison. Zinger lives in one of the apartments that were created in the prison buildings.

Carving Made Easy

Creating a front porch worthy Halloween pumpkin.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

“Ick, this is so gross,” said one 11-year-old girl with shoulder length blonde hair. “Those are the guts,” said her classmate, a 12-year-old, white apron-clad boy, as he pulled a handful of stringy, orange pulp out of a fat pumpkin.

“It’s part of the process. You have to clean out the messy insides before you can start carving a beautiful design,” said Lisa Searby, who was offering an in-home lesson in carving Halloween pumpkins to a group of middle school students and their parents.

A drive around most neighborhoods during this, the spookiest season of the year, will likely reveal the efforts of many to carve a sophisticated pumpkin. From frightening to fanciful, the art of pumpkin carving is a skill that eludes many. So on a chilly Sunday afternoon, Searby, who lives in Bethesda, Md. trekked to the Fairfax home of Katie and Luke Gunther to offer a class in pumpkin carving. With a few tricks and the right tools, Searby says that almost anyone can create a front-porch worthy gourd.

After the parent-child duos have donned aprons and the pumpkins are placed atop tables covered with plastic and topped with newspaper, the instruction begins. A set of carving tools is something that Searby recommends to anyone who wants to create an impressive design.

“You don’t have to break the bank, but you need to get a set of tools that are sturdy enough to stand up the the heft of a thick-skinned pumpkin,” she said. “You can usually find them online pretty easily. Choose a set that has a tool for each step of the process, like a little serrated saw to cut a hole in the top and a scooper to clean out the flesh. It makes carving so much easier.”

It appears that parents agree. “I didn’t realize that there was such a thing, but these little tools are awesome,” said Luke Gunther, the father of 12-year-old twins. “We usually use a kitchen knife and it’s hard to cut through and the edges of the designs are always jagged, but the tools make a much smoother cut.”

Once the tops of the pumpkins are removed and the pulp, flesh and seeds area cleared, the artistry begins. “Use a dry-erase marker to to sketch the design that you want to carve on the front of your pumpkin,” said Searby. “Does anyone know why we’re using a dry-erase marker instead of a Sharpie? Because if you make a mistake or don’t like your drawing, you can wipe off a dry-erase marker and start over. Sharpies are permanent.”

Three hearts are what Theresa Holt and her 12-year-old son and 11-year-old daughter choose for the front of their pumpkin. “This is such a fun thing to do, even if you don’t care about the outcome, it’s a great way to spend time together as a family,” she said.

Those who choose to use one of Searby’s pre-designed templates are instructed to attach the template to the pumpkin and use the spike tool to trace the design onto the gourd, leaving tiny pinholes in its thick flesh. Next, the class uses one of the carving tools to cut out the facial features or other designs and, voila, in less than 30 minutes the group produces six pumpkins that are ready for Halloween.

“If you’re going to use candles illuminate your pumpkins at night, make sure you put the candles in a glass candle holder first,” said Searby. “Now the clean-up begins. It’s a messy process after all.”

Season Opening with Mozart and Beethoven

Virginia Chamber Orchestra features renowned soloist Brian Ganz.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

The all-professional, Fairfax County-based Virginia Chamber Orchestra (VCO) opens its 47th season, with “Music of the Masters.” The evening showcases the distinguished pianist Brian Ganz as the featured soloist. The award-winning Ganz is regarded as a leading pianists of his generation. He has performed at The Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Led by music director David Grandis, the VCO performs not only at the Ernst Community Cultural Center at Northern Virginia Community College, but is an “Ensemble in Residence” at George Mason University. The VCO also regularly performs creative ensemble presentations at Tysons’ intimate 1st Stage theatre.

“We are excited and looking forward to having a pianist of the stature of Brian Ganz perform as our guest soloist at our ‘home’ concert hall in the center of Fairfax County,” said Doug Lovejoy, Virginia Chamber Orchestra Board President.

The VCO program will include Mozart: Piano Concerto in D minor, K. 466 which is full of dark storms, sunny romance and a jubilant finish. The Mozart concerto has also been played used as a pop accompaniment. A movement from the concerto was played in the Oscar winning film “Amadeus,” while another movement was heard in “Mr. Robot,” a recent television series.

The upcoming VCO program will also include a performance of Beethoven: Symphony No. 4 in B-flat major, Op. 60; a less often heard symphony. In an interview, Ganz described the Mozart con-

Where and When

Performance: Sunday, Oct. 28, 2018 at 4 p.m. Tickets: $30 (discount tickets online), $35 at the door. Students (fourth grade through college) are free. Note: Free parking. Beethoven within the same work! I look forward immensely to collaborating with the VCO and David Grandis on this masterpiece...my very favorite symphony!”

VCO music director, David Grandis, noted that the Beethoven: Symphony No. 4 “is a special universe of its own, one which resonates intimately with me.

“It is the only symphony which was commissioned. No draft survived, but we know Beethoven composed it in a few weeks,” added Grandis. “The fact that this symphony is probably the least loved and the least known of Beethoven’s output, makes it even more lovable to me...But it is just as perfect as any other of Beethoven’s symphonies. It has always seemed strange to me that it is less performed than the others. It might very well be my favorite Beethoven symphony.”

Helping with ‘Baby Blues’

Shelane’s Run raises funds and awareness for maternal mental health.

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

A woman suffering a bout of the “baby blues” during pregnancy or after childbirth isn’t uncommon — in fact, it’s reported that about 80 percent of moms experience sadness, mood swings and just feeling “out of sorts,” particularly after the birth of their child. If there are no other significant stress factors or traumas involved, those feelings often dissipate within a few weeks.

In June of 2015, for Shelane Gaydos, a Fairfax County police officer, a wife, a mother of three young daughters, and a member of a close-by, close-knit family, those feelings escalated after learning that the fourth child she was expecting had died in utero. Two weeks after hearing the devastating news, Gaydos died of suicide.

Eventually, after the initial haze of their loss and through extensive research, her family came to believe that Gaydos was suffering from the rarer form of this maternal depression — postpartum psychosis — which can cause delusions and paranoia.

“We just didn’t know how much she was suffering, and holding in,” said her sister Sarah Bryant, echoing what so many loved ones of maternal depression sufferers have said before. “Shelane was such a vibrant and confident woman, so full of life and love for her family.” Bryant acknowledges that even now, there is guilt mixed in with the emotions of loss.

GAYDOS’ FATHER, retired Army Officer Steve Bryant agrees with his daughter Sarah. “Shelane was always so independent, so tough — maybe too much so on herself.” As a career military man, Bryant admits he was never much on sharing feelings and emotions. Losing Shelane the way they did has changed that.

“I am pretty sure that there are a few women out there that wonder about me,” he said. “Nowadays, whenever I see a pregnant woman or a mom with her kids, I have to smile, say ‘hello,’ and just make a connection. You never know who may need just that.”

The Bryant and Gaydos families, along with Shelane’s many friends, took their grief and turned it into a positive — Shelane’s Fun Run/Walk — partnering first with Postpartum Support International and now with Postpartum Support Virginia, to raise awareness and funds to combat this too-often overlooked condition that can ruin lives and tear families apart at a time when many expect happiness should be at its peak.

In the fall of 2016, more than a year after losing Shelane, the first “Shelane’s 1K Walk and 5K Run” (and the first and only maternal mental health-focused charity road race) took off from the starting line at Fairfax County Government Center.

This year, on Saturday, Oct. 13, more than 500 adults and children on foot and in strollers, showed up at Government Center, braving a spot of rain and the arrival of autumnal temperatures, to take off once again to honor a life lost too soon, and to help prevent further loss and suffering.

Shelane’s sister Sarah Bryant poses with the winners of the kids’ category, Siyeh Bartlett from Chantilly, and James Fink from Fairfax. Bryant came up with the idea for the charity race to honor her sister’s three passions “family, community, and running” while raising funds for maternal mental health resources.

Adrienne Griffen founded Postpartum Support Virginia some 10 years ago wanting to bring maternal mental health issues “into the light” where women can get help.

But “this isn’t the time for sadness. It’s a time to celebrate, to have fun together,” Sarah Bryant told the crowd just before the 5Kers were called to the line-up. “We are here to keep the memory of the three things most important to my sister — family, community, and running, being physically active.”

Adrienne Griffen is the founder of Postpartum Support Virginia (PPVA), based in Arlington. The nonprofit is the beneficiary of the funds raised through Shelane’s Run. She started the group 10 years ago, to bring more resources and assistance to the women of Virginia.

“I, too have been there, with the birth of my second child,” said Griffen. “The first was a breeze, everything you heard and read about, so the problems I experienced with the second were completely unexpected and bewildering.”

It took Griffen more than 6 months to find the help that she needed. “For the longest time, the answers I got were ‘which kind of anti-anxiety pills do you want?’ That was it.”

Griffen’s group have helped bring maternal mental health services to 23 hospitals around the Commonwealth. “We’re halfway to our goal of seeing these services, and trained medical professionals to screen, diagnose, treat, and offer support available in every hospital in Virginia that provides maternal care.”

Surrounded by fun activities for the younger set, as well as booths that provided information, support and resources for moms and their families, the 1K started the action. Lining up front and center were Gaydos’ daughter Sofia, and her two nieces (Sarah Bryant’s daughters) Emma and Madilyn. Some of the individual participants were so young that serious hand-holding was required, along with a lot of directing by race marshals, and there was the occasional “escape” as youngsters decided that running was a lot more exciting than walking.

James Fink, an 8-year-old from Fairfax and a first time racer, took first place in the kid’s category. Siyeh Bartlett, 8, of Chantilly was the first young girl to cross the finish line.

Thomas Johnson with the Fit4Mom team was the overall winner of the 5K, while Marissa Jambor Shipe was the top finisher for the women.

SHELANE’S FAMILY and the folks at Postpartum Support Virginia want women and their families to know that there is caring, professional and confidential support out there for them. “It’s not just about feeling bad,” insists Sarah Bryant. “There are powerful hormonal changes at work and they can have a terrible impact. Women need help to treat these conditions.”

“Postpartum mental health issues are the number one complications of pregnancy and childbirth,” said Griffen, “but they are so undiagnosed or undertreated and women suffer from the added stress of societal expectations and the stigma of ‘not being a supermom.’”

“Please connect with us, and let us help,” said Griffen. Visit www.postpartumva.org. One can also connect with trained volunteers with personal experience with maternal mental health issues by calling 703-829-7152.

ArtsFairfax to Present Arts Awards

Event recognizes extraordinary contributions of artists and arts organization and those who support the arts.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

For the past seven years ARTSFAIRFAX has recognized both individuals and organizations that have made significant contributions to the creative economy in Fairfax County, the City of Fairfax, and the City of Falls Church. Beyond entertainment, cultural and educational activities for local residents, the arts strengthen the local economy with jobs and with taxes paid.

ARTSFAIRFAX is the organization that helps support the arts and provides a voice for the arts. A study developed by Americans for the Arts in collaboration with ARTSFAIRFAX indicated that more than $270 million is generated annually in economic activity from the arts and culture industry in Fairfax. Additionally, more than $9 million of local government revenue is generated as patrons at nonprofit arts events spend close to $25 per person, per event, beyond the cost of admission on items such as meals, parking, and even babysitters.

This year's ARTSFAIRFAX's honorees have exhibited "individual and collective dedication to the arts, helping grow the cultural and economic economy in Fairfax County," said Linda Sullivan, ARTSFAIRFAX president & CEO.

The 2018 award recipients include Claude Moore Charitable Foundation, American Youth Philharmonic Orchestras, Wolf Trap Foundation for the Performing Arts, and Virginia McGehee Friend. The awardees were selected by ARTSFAIRFAX and community representatives. Nominations were received from the public.

"We are delighted to honor our 2018 Arts Awards recipients for their extraordinary contributions to Fairfax County and beyond," said Sullivan. "Our honorees have enabled thousands of arts programs and services, benefiting millions of people."

"Movin' On Up"

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not "to the east side" and not "to a deluxe apartment in the sky," but if fictional New York City cleaning business icon George Jefferson had been diagnosed with lung cancer as I was, I would bet he'd be happy making progress: the feeling of moving forward. And that's exactly what I feel now. With the "news" of last week's column, progress/movement is at hand. With two CT scans in the last three months and some tumors "progressing" - and then not, while a previously insignificant tumor burst (not literally) onto the scene, I am happy now to be onward and hopefully upward as I infuse every three weeks during the next quarter ahead of an early January 2019 scan. The future is now and I'm grateful to have choices as I navigate the road ahead.

Having a plan matters. Though I am still waiting and seeing, and evaluating after that next scan, I do feel as if I'm back on track. I know what my next three months will be about (about three months) and I'm clear what my schedule will be (subject to change due to lab results, an altogether normal/expected blip): urine, lab, infusion, post-chemo week of difficulty eating and physical and psychological challenges, followed by two weeks of relative normalcy, then infusion again and rinse and repeat every three weeks until early January 2019. Twelve weeks in total. Through Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years. I won't say it will be pretty but it will be predictable and hopefully on a path to a positive result. (Remember, I'm life long member of Red Sox Nation so hope always springs eternal.)

This column is certainly not meant to minimize the possible discouraging results of my January scan but I see no advantage in anticipating and/or overreacting to unknown results and/or dire consequences months ahead of actual facts not yet in evidence. This is what being diagnosed with cancer is all about: a series of ups and downs and all-arounds; and the sooner the patient assimilates this unpredictable variability into their algorithm for living with the disease, the more manageable their lives will be. Moreover, "If you," to quote Rudyard Kipling, "can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs," it will likely contribute to the preferred calm that every cancer patient diagnosed as "terminal" needs to feel every second of every day (and night, too) as they struggle to deal with the internal demons brought about by this terrible affliction. As my friend Lynne, a cancer survivor herself, said to me when I was first diagnosed: "This will be the most difficult thing you'll ever have to do." Of course, she was right. It's been beyond my wildest nightmares.

Being stuck in a pattern with no clear direction does not help. For the past three months, I have been so entangled. Now I am not. Now I am on a path of less resistance and what resistance there is - to disappoint "The Borg," is not futile. It is all part of an agreed-upon pursuit of truth and hopefully justice - for me, anyhow. I haven't exactly abused the privilege of living (although while attending college in the seventies, occasionally there may have been the odd self-destructive-type behavior common to the times, none of which concerned my oncologist in the least by the way) and given my parents' long cancer-free lives, I would have expected better than a stage IV, non-small lung cancer diagnosis at age 54 and a half. But here I am, still, nearly 10 years post diagnosis. (There aren't that many of us, unfortunately.)

And though I am definitely not happy about my cancer circumstances, I can be positive about the negative. And what I am most positive about is that at least for the next quarter anyway, I know what I'm doing and why. I certainly can't say what I'll be feeling after my next scan; hopefully elation and relief, but in the interim, life will go on as per usual, and for a cancer patient/survivor, life going on is as good as it gets; almost as if I "finally got a piece of the pie."
