Disney’s Beauty and the Beast on Stage in Herndon

The Herndon High School Drama Boosters Club production of Disney’s Beauty and the Beast is in its last days of rehearsal. Summer Grand students present three performances of the family-friendly, musical adventure that follows Belle as she discovers friendship and love in unexpected places.

Samba Pathak, camp counselor and publicity for the event that involves 70 campers, said, “Working on a typical high school musical takes roughly four-to-five months to execute. However, these hard working students have one month to get this ‘tale as old as time’ together.”

Faith Hargadon, who plays Belle, described the play as “a beautiful story of love and acceptance.”

Emma Harris, who plays Mrs. Potts, called it “a magical experience to see.” She encouraged young children to sign up for the “Princess Tea” event before the matinees. Meanwhile, in set and design, other students such as Patrick Cluff, 16 of Herndon, and William Malyszka, 13 of Herndon, worked on props. “The prop doesn’t have to do anything; it just needs to look like it does.” Other students worked on sound and lighting.

Held at Herndon Middle School, 901 Locust Street, the Saturday and Sunday matinee performances are July 27 and 28 at 2 p.m. The only evening performance is Saturday, July 27 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12 at www.herndondrama.org.

No Workforce Housing in the Town of Herndon?

Look again.

By Mercia Hobson
The Connection

The Town of Herndon is about to ride the rails of the Silver Line expansion. Not only are there no designated workforce housing units currently in the Town of Herndon, but also none are in the pipeline, and the town’s population is about to explode.

Fairfax County Department of Management and Budget forecasts Town of Herndon increasing from 7,735 housing units in 2018, to 8,826 in 2025, and to 9,794 in 2035. Meanwhile, the towns of Clifton and Vienna increase only slightly, Clifton from 88 housing units in 2018 to 89 housing units in 2035, and Vienna from 5,628 housing units in 2018 to 5,685 housing units in 2035.

CORNERSTONES, a nonprofit organization that serves neighbors in need in northwestern Fairfax County, “an already high cost-of-living region” which includes the Town of Herndon.

“The Town of Herndon has a fair share of market-affordable housing – that is housing that is market-priced but meets the definition of housing that would be affordable based on household income,” said Kerrie Wilson, CEO of Cornerstones. “In addition, there are private landlords who accept housing choice vouchers or developers like Cornerstones who have preserved and rent permanently affordable units in neighborhoods in Herndon, Reston and the Dulles corridor.”

“With nearly 70 percent of Herndon’s housing built before 1980 and the arrival of the two Silver Line stations, this is a critical time for the Town and Fairfax County to solicit creative options to preserve and develop new affordable homes in this area,” Wilson said. “Given the anticipated growth in the workforce in the Herndon area, Herndon, and the Dranesville districts of Fairfax County will need to look for opportunities to maintain the diversity of housing options, including homes that are affordable for households at lower income levels,” she said.

In the Town of Herndon, there could be a mismatch between where workforce jobs are located and where affordable homes are located if consideration, education, and action are not taken by the Town in the immediate future.

According to Virginia Housing, workforce housing is housing for the occupations needed in every community-teachers, firefighters, police officers, hospital workers, restaurant workers and more. Some workforce occupations such as a foodservice and retail sales are likely to be in the lower-income range, whereas workforce occupations with education or training requirements such as teachers, police officers and nurses, generally rise to median income levels and above.

Many workforce individuals must choose between lengthy commutes to where there is more affordable housing or pay higher costs to live where they work. “The blueprint for transit-oriented developments near the Herndon and Innovation Station Metro stops offer the opportunity – and increased density – that can accommodate housing that is affordable for the workforce, including people working in jobs that don’t pay high wages but are critical to our economy,” Wilson said.

The Town of Herndon’s website shows three current residential or mixed-use development projects. They are Stanley Martin’s Metro Square under construction and steps from the Herndon Metro Station; Comstock’s Downtown Herndon Redevelopment project anticipated by the Town to break ground in late 2019 after land sale and “further agreements;” Penzance’s 555 Herndon Parkway directly at the new Herndon Metro Station in the conceptual design stage and the South Elden Street Area Plan in the early planning stages.

Asked if any of these projects had designated workforce/affordable units, the Town of Herndon spokesperson replied, “There are no designated workforce or affordable units.”

Asked if there were any means to add such housing, after the fact, meaning during the project or after the project, the Town of Herndon spokesperson replied, “No.”

Why did the Town, boards and staff not request or require partnering with Fairfax County for such housing units to be included? Herndon Harbor II constructed in 2001 within the Town limits received funding in part through the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC) program. Thus a certain number of units were and are set aside for lower-income households.

“There is no such requirement in the town’s Zoning Ordinance, nor does the town have the resources to administer and track the ongoing operations associated with designated affordable and workforce housing units,” replied the Town of Herndon.

Town is “looking into necessary local and Virginia grants to capture stormwater on their property. One stipulation is that plants be Virginia native species. We changed impervious lawn to conservation landscaping,” Fisher said.

“The native plants remind people what the ecosystem used to look like a century ago,” said Paul Murphy of Herndon Friends Meeting. “We are stewards of the land. We are just borrowing it for a short time.”

Tim McDermott added that once established, “Native plants also support native fauna and the butterflies and birds that migrate through such as the sapsuckers.” Lea Wolf said that often times, especially for small gardens like the Quakers, owners don’t appreciate the difference native plants make. “We are in the middle of another mass extinction event,” she said.

Human Trafficking Supply and Demand

By Bill Woolf
Executive Director, Just Ask Trafficking Prevention Foundation.

The recent news about Jeffrey Epstein’s arrest in New York on new sex-trafficking charges involving allegations that date to the early 2000s is alarming to many. It wasn’t for us. That’s the bad news. The Just Ask Trafficking Prevention Foundation, a global leader in combating human trafficking, is all too familiar with cases like Epstein’s.

The good news is we’re doing something about it. Our real-world experience and global knowledge about combating human trafficking enable us to do much more than sympathize with Epstein’s victims of these alleged new crimes. We know how to fight back, and we are.

To better understand what we do and why we first must understand what sex trafficking is. The federal government defines it as the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person for the purposes of a commercial sex act, in which the commercial sex act is induced by force, fraud, or coercion, or in which the person induced to perform such an act has not attained 18 years of age (22 USC § 7102).

There’s a lot more to sex trafficking than just prostitution. The sex trafficking industry is a part of the world’s second largest and most lucrative criminal enterprise grossing more than $150 billion annually.

Defeating a billion-dollar industry isn’t merely a battle. It’s a world war with the good guys significantly outgunned financially. For example, the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund, created in 2010 to provide humanitarian, legal and financial aid to victims of human trafficking to increase the number of those rescued and supported, and broaden the extent of assistance they receive, only received $6.7 million as of May 2019. Jeffrey Epstein’s proposed bail package is estimated to be as high as $77 million alone.

Winning the battle is simply a matter of understanding and then eliminating the logistics behind the world’s second largest criminal enterprise. Logistics? Yes, we need to reduce both the supply of victims for human traffickers and the demand for them. Our best weapon? Human trafficking awareness and prevention is the most effective and least expensive method to reduce and ultimately eliminate the supply and demand for the sex trafficking industry.

First, we must stop the supply of human trafficking victims by educating at-risk populations about what human trafficking is, how they can be targeted, and what to do to become immune to their tactics. Most victims fall prey to the likes of predators like Epstein because they are unaware they are being lured in by lies or false promises for things like money, prestige, power, or safety until it is too late. Then, trapped, the victims become resolved to their fate, impoverished, or worse, suicidal because of their sense of hopelessness. On average, once a person becomes involved in human trafficking, their life expectancy plummets to just seven years because of the enormous stress and physical abuse, their bodies and minds endure.

Secondly, we need to acknowledge criminals like Jeffrey Epstein exist. Our awareness of them is the first step toward defeating them. As awareness grows for potential victims, awareness grows for prospective clients of human traffickers. By educating potential sex trafficking clients about the realities of prostitution and sex trafficking as a crime, research has proven it lowers demand by swaying them not to purchase sex or tolerate or support the practice of buying sex within their peer groups.

In addition to awareness programs, the enforcement of our human trafficking laws can help deter future criminals by making it clear to the public that if you participate in human trafficking, you’re going to get caught and more importantly, you’re going to be held accountable.

The Just Ask Trafficking Prevention Foundation is a global leader in education and awareness campaigns for people of all ages, demographics, occupations and nationalities. One of our most effective programs is our school-based curriculum, which has reached more than 160,000 students worldwide and continues to grow. In northern Virginia, two counties, Fairfax and Loudoun, employ our programming directly through the school system’s Family Life Education (FLE), maximizing the opportunity to engage our children when they are most at risk. Programming in schools is critical because it’s where most of the victims are. Statistically speaking, while anyone can be a potential victim of human trafficking, the primary target for predators are girls between the ages of 14-16 years-old.

Just Ask does more than educate children, though. We educate parents, teachers, school officials, police officers, businesses, politicians, local, state, federal government employees, and even world leaders about what human trafficking is and how to combat it.

The bottom line is we have to condition communities to not only resist becoming victims of human trafficking but remove the desire to participate in it as customers as well. Criminals who are always on the prowl for successful money-making opportunities will vacate human trafficking as a business model once they see the funding potential dry up. If you want to help, eradicate human trafficking, visit our website at www.justasKtrafficking.org.

Just Ask Trafficking Prevention Foundation is based in McLean.

Pet Connection, Send Photos

The Pet Connection, a twice-yearly special edition, will publish the last week of July and photos and stories of your pets with you and your family should be submitted by Thursday, July 25.

We invite you to send stories about your pets, photos of you and your family with your cats, dogs, llamas, alpacas, ponies, hamsters, snakes, lizards, frogs, rabbits, or whatever other creatures share your life with you.

Tell us the story of a special bond between a child and a dog, the story of how you came to adopt your pet, or examples of amazing feats of your creatures.

Just a cute photo is fine too. Our favorite pictures include both pets and humans.

Please tell us a little bit about your creature, identify everyone in the photo, give a brief description of what is happening in the photo, and include address and phone number (we will not publish your address or phone number, just your town name).

Email to editors@connectionnewspapers.com or submit online at www.connectionnewspapers.com/pets.

A collection of rocks collected at Mt. Vesuvius in Naples, a souvenir from the leaning tower of Pisa, crayon-on-construction paper drawings of the beaches in Naples, Italy are all part of the travel journals that Sonia Pruneda-Hernandez preserved. These are keepsakes that her son began creating when he was in preschool. Recently she perused those journals, reliving the memories with her son who is now a 22 year-old college student.

“As a military spouse I had the opportunity to live in Naples, Italy,” said Pruneda-Hernandez, who now works as the Director of Early Childhood Education Initiatives at Montgomery College. “When we traveled in Europe, I provided my son travel journals. As a preschooler, he drew pictures of the places we visited and I would write parts of our conversations on the drawings. As he learned to write, his travel journals began to become more complex with him drawing and writing. I saved those journals and he is able to relive the memories of those experiences.”

Journals created during summer vacations allow families to maintain the experience of their trips long after they’ve returned home. Whether one’s plans include a safari in Kenya or a staycation among the monuments along the National Mall, keeping detailed records gives children who are living in the age of selfies and social media posts, a thoughtful option for holding onto memories.

“Travel journals are important because they [allow children], to have those memories of those experiences,” said Pruneda-Hernandez.

Advanced planning leads to creative journals that are a form of self-expression, suggests Wendy Rowe, a writing tutor and art teacher. “Before you leave for your trip, ask your child to think about what they’re most excited about and the type of journal they’d like to keep,” she said. “For example, my daughter likes to paint watercolor pictures of things that she sees. Other children might make a journal that’s a written narrative. What’s important is that parents allow children to choose the type of journal they want to make and then purchasing and packing the supplies that they might need, whether it’s colored pencils and craft paper or a simple notebook and a pen.”

Such diaries can spark family conversations and create opportunities to practice writing skills, advises Michelle Villano, a fourth grade teacher who encourages her students to write accounts of their summer adventures. “Children can enjoy a vacation and learn from the scenes around them,” Villano said. “A child’s travel journal shouldn’t just be a list of things that they did or saw. Parents should encourage them to engage all of their senses like sound, touch, taste and feel. For example, if you’re on a vacation in Paris, did you smell freshly baked baguettes when you walked into a restaurant for lunch? If you ate a croissant, could you taste the butter or feel the flakes on your tongue?”

The options for both the format of journals and the way that a child chooses to describe their experiences are abundant, says Rowe. “Children can include museum tickets, airplane boarding passes, leaves they collected from a park they visited,” she said. “Parents should encourage them to think long-term about things they might enjoy remembering later.”

“Travel journals allow young children to be actively involved in the experience of their journey.” — Sonia Pruneda-Hernandez, Director of Early Childhood Education Initiatives at Montgomery College

“Travel journals allow young children to be actively involved in the experience of their journey,” added Pruneda-Hernandez. “They do not have to be written. Children that are not able to write yet, should be provided opportunities and materials such as a simple notebook, markers, crayons, or pencils to draw what they see and their experiences.”

Prompts can be used to encourage those who are resistant to keeping a record of their vacations, says Villano. “Start by asking them to write about something they saw by describing its color or shape,” she said. “They can describe the shape and color of a rock they saw while hiking in the Grand Canyon.”

“Parents can sit and ask open-ended questions at the end of the day,” said Pruneda-Hernandez. “This provides a [them] an opportunity to express themselves orally and provides opportunities for them to think about the experience.”
The Music at Arrowbrook Park Concert Series kicked off on July 13 after weather canceled the July 6 performance with Roomful of Blues. However, even with great weather, shade and a cool breeze off the nearby pond, a challenge existed.

“The challenge is attracting crowds. They don’t know we’re here,” said Jeffery Fairfield, Executive Director of The Ruth and Hal Launders Charitable Trust as the first concert of the season was underway at Arrowbrook Centre Park. Located one block off Centreville Road in Herndon and two blocks from the Dulles Toll Road at 2351 Field Point Road, Herndon, the location made an easy drive.

The Ruth and Hal Launders Charitable Trust presented the concert sponsored by Arrowbrook Centre, LLC and Arrowbrook Management Corporation through a unique partnership with the Fairfax County Park Authority (FCPA) according to Fairfield. Part of the FCPA Summer Entertainment Series, headliners for the July 6- Aug. 31, 2019 season for Music at Arrowbrook Park, included acclaimed musicians from New York to the West Coast and back to Herndon according to Sousan Frankeberger, Performing Arts Production Manager, Fairfax County Park Authority. Frankeberger described this year’s nine Saturday evening concerts as an eclectic blend of music from British Invasion Rock on July 27 to Klezmer Folk and Jazz on July 10 to Pop/Rock Cover on July 31.

Saturday evening July 13 featured singer-songwriter, prolific lyricist and composer, Crys Matthews who played at the Sundance Film Festival, The Birchmere and The Hamilton. After performing at Lincoln Center on Nov. 30, Mathews was named grand-prize winner. According to her website, Mathews is known for her thoughtful songs, many tackling social justice themes. “I’m looking forward to playing in Herndon,” said Mathews who hails from southeastern North Carolina but now calls the Town of Herndon home.

Veteran concertgoers Denise Marques of Herndon attended the Summer Entertainment Series at Arrowbrook Centre last year. “We couldn’t wait for the concerts to start again. It’s great to be able to come out to this,” Marques said.

Rosangel Marques of Brazil who accompanied Denise Marques said that in Brazil they didn’t have music like this. “It’s marvelous to listen to,” she said.

Town of Herndon residents, Karen and Michael Falkner usually make the rounds of summer concerts according to Karen. “We’ve been coming here for the last couple of years,” she said. “This year, we celebrate the facility’s eight seasons of public service; the concert series started in 2012 with three dates. This year we’ve gone to nine dates with 90-minute sets. Last year was our first season with wine sales through a new policy with the Park. On alternate weeks, we will feature the two wineries in Fairfax County, Bull Run out of Centreville and Paradise out of Clifton. New this year on Aug. 10, is beer sales with Caboose Brewery,” said Fairfield.

Stamp of Disapproval

By Kenneth B. Lourie

For those of you still going to the post office and buying/stamping, this column is for you and for others too with a memory of such tasks.

Since I am among a dwindling number of those who actually allow free post stamps and mail their own correspondence, bills, birthday cards and miscellaneous other such hard copy, either by going online, print electronically or test necessarily, I may be writing upfield here. (Remember readers, parking is almost always included with office services). Nevertheless, I will continue troubling you.

Like many of my generation, I have been accustomed to buying stamps. The hands would grip and be placed in possession to that which I’m seeking, writing or Identiﬁcation sticker you might say. Aided by my father’s “stamp book” and “collection” being two of his favorites offerings. However, I am not “philatelic,” in the least. In the most, I am a buyer and a sticker. Not a collector at all.

So that end, I am merely at the post office to justify my efforts, mailing my correspondence parcels in a timely and efﬁcient manner. Other than Christmas stamps my wife, Diane, will request that I buy. I care very little about the particular stampbook that I purchase.

In fact, you could call me a stamp-enthusiast among other descriptions, I’m sure.

What I typically say is response to the post ofﬁce clerk’s question about my stamp preference is: “Give me the stamps on top as they ﬂip through their stamp booklets.” Or whatever you’re tired of looking/sticking to get rid of.” And generally, speaking, they’re happy to comply, as you might imagine, gifting a bit as they hand over whatever.

When I’m given the stamps, often I’ll make a casual comment about their look and then “I’ll take that one.” Or the question about my stamp preference is: “Give me the stamps on top as they ﬂip through their stamp booklets.” Or whatever you’re tired of looking/sticking to get rid of.” And generally, speaking, they’re happy to comply, as you might imagine, gifting a bit as they hand over whatever.
