Congress resumes, local protestors stand with immigrants.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

On Monday, Sept. 9, members of Congress returned from recess. Four days later, on Sept. 13 in a doubleheader near their home turf, members of Herndon-Reston Indivisible (HRI) took to the streets of Virginia and the District of Columbia in a force of activism. HRI members from Reston — Carrie Bruns, Joanne Collins, Diana Smith, Sally Misenick and Leah Findlay; Herndon residents — Sharon Wunder and Sherry Blanton; and Vienna resident Meredith Haines; - stood with immigrants in a national day of action, part of the Defund Hate Coalition to fight detention, raids and family separation by defunding them through the congressional appropriations process.

At their first stop, HRI members met in front of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services building at 2675 Prosperity Drive in Fairfax. There they held their distinctive illuminated letters that spelled out the words, "DEFUND HATE."

Del. Kenneth R. "Ken" Plum (D-36) joined the protestors and held up a sign announcing for himself, "DEFUND HATE."

HRI member Diane Smith of Reston who took part in the protest explained the meaning of "Defund Hate" as "a nationwide action initiated by Indivisible to demand Congress stop the administration's un-American and inhumane policies against asylum seekers and immigrants, including separation of children from parents, mass incarceration, profiling, and other abuses." Smith added: "The goal is for Congress to ensure the FY20 Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Bill reduces funding for U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and ensures these two agencies cannot misuse funds."

AFTER AN HOUR OF PROTESTING, HRI members traveled to their next site, the U.S. Capitol in Washington D.C. where they stood once again in protest with their letters spelling out, Defund Hate. Car horns sounded in support of the protestors; verbal remarks sounded against the support of the protestors. Through it all, the demonstrators remained firmly planted for their second hour.

Standing in their yellow t-shirts, the phrase, "It's a "Marathon, Not a Sprint," showed when members turned around. "We knew, even in the early days of the Trump administration, that our fight would not be accomplished quickly. We are in for the long haul, to defeat policies against immigration. ... This motto reminds us not to become discouraged and to never give up in our efforts," said Carrie Bruns of Reston.

Shortly after 3 p.m, HRI members lowered their letters, bagged them and walked to the offices of U.S. Rep. Jennifer Wexton (D-10) and U.S. Rep. Gerald Connolly (D-11). HRI members left letters addressed to Wexton and Connolly demanding they and other members of Congress defund hate.

MEREDITH HAINES OF VIENNA is a member of HRI. Haines is also an immigrant and participated in the #DefundHate campaign. Asked why she attended, Haines stated, "The #DefundHate campaign speaks

Police Reform in Fairfax—Four Years Later

BY JOHN LOVAAS
RESTON IMPACT PRODUCER/HOST

It's hard to believe it's been four years since the Ad Hoc Commission to Review Police Practices submitted its final report to Fairfax County's Board of Supervisors. The 202 unanimously agreed recommendations contained therein, if fully implemented as intended by the 40-member Commission, would be transformative of our Fairfax County Police Department (FCPD). While transformation would be an exaggeration of what has been accomplished so far, the progress to date is remarkable, thanks in no small measure to the leadership of Police Chief Edwin Roessler.

The Commission created by the Board of Supervisors in early 2015, fifteen months after an officer's fatal shooting of unarmed John Geer, divided its report into five areas: Communications, Recruitment & Diversity, Mental Health, Use of Force, and Independent Oversight & Investigations. In the 75 years since the Police Department was created, the men in blue controlled all that went on behind the steel blue curtain. Transparency and civilian review were foreign concepts. So, there was tension on a Commission made up of one-third police, including heavy hitters. Our unanimous decisions reflect their presence.

What has been accomplished? Nearly all recommendations to improve Communications, i.e., public information on police operations, have been implemented, including installing a civilian chief of communications. At times getting out information on police shootings still is delayed, but it gets out. Transparency does not come easily in a Department with five would-be police unions, but forward movement to date is impressive.

Diversity, however, is the one area where there has been almost zero progress. The Police Department is not representative of the County it serves — especially in hiring and promoting Latinos and African Americans. The county is nearly 10 percent black and 16 percent Latino, but the Force is just over 7 percent black and 4 percent Latino, and worse higher up. It's hard to believe minorities don't apply for and cannot qualify for entry level positions paying $55,000. The Chief says bad press for cops these days is a main obstacle. That may be, but institutional resistance also certainly plays a role.

Mental Health - a success! Persons with mental illness frequently conflict with police officers, usually involving minor offenses (e.g., disorderly conduct), sometimes with tragic consequences. Half of all fatal shootings by law enforcement involve people with mental illness. Officers are ill prepared to identify persons in crisis much less manage encounters with them.

Their only option for resolution is arrest and incarceration in the county jail, a lockup filled with people in crisis.

Crisis Intervention Training for all officers and a Diversion First program providing facilities to assess and treat (vs. jail) the mentally ill were adopted and are underway.

Use Of Force. Appropriately, 87 of 202 Commission recommendations involve use of force. They include adopting a new philosophy—the Sanctity of Life as the guiding principle for new police policy and practices.

Policies and practices were reviewed and have been overhauled to include de-escalation in confrontations, prompt reporting stressing transparency, emphasis of less lethal techniques, and employing new technologies (e.g., late model tasers and body cameras for all officers). Implementation is nearly complete.

New tasers are now on the way, and long-delayed body cameras are expected to be approved for funding by County Supervisors this month. FCPD could be a topnotch, more humane force if these Use of Force reforms fully sink in. Perhaps John Geer did not die in vain!

A final area, Independent Oversight and Investigation, has met strong resistance from police. Three activities were proposed. A recommendation to build independent investigative capacity with the Commonwealth Attorney was killed by the Supervisors.

However, the Independent Police Auditor (IPA) is in place and reviewing all officer involved shootings, deaths and serious injury investigations conducted by the Internal Affairs Bureau.

Last, the proposed Civilian Review Panel is in place to accept public complaints about police abuse of authority, hear them and review police investigations of them. CRP's power was diluted in the approval process. Still, the creation of the CRP and the IPA mark truly historical turning points in drawing back the steel blue curtain.

Legislating by Skulduggery

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

Last week while Democrats in the North Carolina House of Representatives were attending a 9/11 remembrance service, Republicans called a surprise vote to overturn the Democratic governor's veto of the state budget. While Democrats and media were told that there would be no voting during the morning session, Democrats' attendance at the vigil allowed Republicans to get the three-fifths vote needed to override the veto.

Reaction to the maneuver has been harsh. The Charlotte Observer in an editorial said that "the verdict is now plain. North Carolina's Republican legislative leaders — not actually leaders, but connivers — are beyond shame." The paper described what happened as a "stunning display of contempt for democracy ... but this isn't a case simply of hardball politics and sly legislative maneuvering. This is a case of breaking faith with the people..." The Senate must concur on the override before it becomes effective.

COMMENTARY

Before Virginians get too smug about what happened in North Carolina we must remember what happened in the Virginia General Assembly about a month ago.

With the continuing string of mass murders in the country — beginning about the time of the massacre at Virginia Tech that for a while was the largest ever and continuing through a mass shooting at a Virginia Beach municipal building — Gov. Ralph Northam called a special session of the General Assembly to consider several bills intended to reduce gun violence.

The special session convened on July 9 to take up bills related to gun violence but without notice to Democrats or media the Republican majority adjourned 90 minutes later without taking up any of the bills and with a return date scheduled after the elections.

There were no bills among those introduced to respond to gun violence that would have confiscated guns or altered the Second Amendment.

They were common-sense bills that according to all public opinion polls I have seen are supported by more than 80 percent and some by more than 90 percent of the public.

The experience in Virginia can be described by the same terms of that in North Carolina: contempt for democracy, a travesty of the process, legislative deceit. You may have seen news reports that the Republican floor leader in the Virginia House received a $200,000 campaign contribution from the NRA several weeks later.

Partisan control of the Virginia House and Senate are on the line this Nov. 5 as all 140 seats are on the ballot.

There are numerous critically important issues on the ballot that it would take several columns to enumerate.

I do want to add one that gets too little discussion and that is legislative reform. Such reform includes independent drawing of legislative district lines, or getting rid of gerrymandering, that allows the abuses of legislative power in North Carolina and Virginia that are discussed here. As the Charlotte Observer said of the situation in North Carolina, "It was an illegitimate majority acting in an unethical way."

What happened in both states demonstrates once again that the speakership be defined not as the head of the majority party but as an impartial and fair leader. In both instances the speakers of their respective houses should have stopped these episodes of legislating by skulduggery.

Normal Adolescent Moods Swings or Depression?

Making a distinction between the two can be difficult.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Stephanie Pironne says her daughter Lila was always a child who was well behaved. From preschool through elementary school, she was described by her teachers as having a kind and cheerful nature. When her daughter, now 13 years old and in eighth grade, began middle school, something changed.

"She now goes from goes from happy to grumpy to sad all within 15 minutes and with nothing around her having changed," said Pironne. "I'm always on edge when she comes down for breakfast in the morning because I never know what I'm going to get. She might be yelling at me for something I didn't know I'd done, giving me the silent treatment or happy and chatty or combination of all three.

Such emotional roller coasters are often a part of puberty. Hormonal changes that happen when puberty begins can cause not only bodily physical changes but mood swings that can feel out of control, say mental health professionals. It's often difficult for parents and those close to teens learn to distinguish normal changes in mood from a more serious mental health issue.

"It's really, really hard to do, because they can present in very much the same way, and aren't always two distinct categories," said psychologist Stacie Isenberg, Psy.D. "Also, sometimes [puberty-driven mood swings], do get treated with medication. I've had patients who were prescribed birth control and some who were prescribed antidepressants."

The severity of the symptoms, says Carol Barnaby, MSW, LCSW-C can help make the distinction," said therapist Carol Barnaby, MSW, LCSW-C. "Crying spells or deep sadness for no apparent reason is a sign. Displaying a loss of energy or isolating themselves from others and persistent low self-esteem are also signals."

"If your child's mood seems off with regularity or they are withdrawing or increasingly irritable, I would advise parents to get a professional assessment," added Isenberg. "You can start with you pediatrician, and based on their recommendation, you may want to have your child see a psychologist or psychiatrist."

The amount of time the symptoms last could also be a clue that professional help is needed. "Teen depression is normally indicated by a persistent change in mood that lasts two weeks or more," said Barnaby. "The change in mood seems to cause significant distress and problems that show up at home, school, during extra-curricular activities, and in social areas of life."

A desire to hurt oneself is an indicator of a mental health issue that is more serious than normal teen mood swings, said Barnaby.

"If your child ever talks about self-harm like cutting themselves, refusing to attend school or other activities they previously enjoyed those are sign that you should seek help immediately.

If your child talks ...or has thoughts about suicide or not wanting to be around, seek professional help immediately," added Isenberg.

Changing Lives. Saving Lives.

"PRS is a non profit providing mental health, crisis intervention and suicide prevention services in Northern Virginia and Washington, D.C. We seek to change and save lives in our community by empowering hope, safety, recovery, wellness, independence and community integration."

"She goes from goes from happy to grumpy to sad all within 15 minutes and with nothing around her having changed. I'm always on edge when she comes down for breakfast in the morning because I never know what I'm going to get."

Virginia Schools Rank Third in Nation with B-minus

A leading education journal ranked Virginia's public schools as third in the nation in student achievement based on the performance of students on national assessments in reading and mathematics, graduation rates and achievement on Advanced Placement examinations.

Education Week's Quality Counts 2019 report awarded the commonwealth a letter grade of B- for K-12 achievement. Only Massachusetts, with a B+, and New Jersey, with a B, earned higher grades. Superintendent of Public Instruction James Lane said: "I look forward to visiting as many schools as I can during the coming weeks and months and personally congratulating teachers, principals, administrators and support professionals for all they do as we strive to make the commonwealth's schools the best in the nation."

K-12 achievement comprises one third of Education Week's three-part Quality Counts rating system. Earlier this year, the publication awarded Virginia a B on its "Chance for Success Index" and a C for school finance. Today's grade for K-12 achievement resulted in Virginia earning an overall grade of B- from Education Week for 2019.

Medicare Is In The House

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

More like in my wallet. After worrying for the past 18 months about possibly losing my health insurance, I finally hit pay dirt – and it didn't hit back.

I have received my Medicare card and after I "disenroll" from my interim "Obama Care" within the next week or so, I will officially join the ranks of the millions who have insured their health – so to speak, with the Federal Government.

No more will I if-and-or-but about hospitals, doctors ("medical" actually) and prescription drugs (parts "A", "B" and "D" for those of you unfamiliar with the alphabet soup). Dental and vision coverage I'm not so sure about, but at present, I can live with the coverage that I know I have now because the worst case scenarios have been addressed.

And, as a former insurance broker, solving and/or protecting against worst case scenarios was always my main concern.

To invoke "Speedy" from those long-ago Alka Seltzer commercials: "Plop, Plop, Fizz, Fizz. Oh, what a relief it is." And even though I'm not plopping or fizzing, I am effervescent nonetheless at my arrival.

Reaching milestones (even destinations, sort of) is a way I've measured and evaluated my cancer experience. Not that I keep a chart or even a calendar with Xs marking the days but "I've looked at life from both sides now" (heck, I've looked at life from all sides now – and in between, too) and my glass is still half full. I remain positive about my negative and despite having never having seen Joni Mitchell in concert (although I did have tickets to see her at Cole Field House in the '70s – once on stage however, she realized she was too sick to perform and stage right she went) occasionally her songs have spoken to me.

Right now, The United States Government is speaking to me in the form of a red, white and blue card. They are telling me that I have made it to the promised land, a land whose existence was proposed in 1965 and which became law in 1966 fulfilling promises made to all Americans who reach age 65 that health insurance is their right and not because they were privileged.

Nevertheless, I feel privileged to be "Medichere." For 10 years, 10 months and 20 days, dating back to late December 2008 when I first experienced the pain in my rib cage which precipitated my visit to the Emergency Room, I have been under the proverbial gun.

Sometimes, it's been holstered. Other times, it's been locked and loaded. So far, no shots have been fired, even though occasionally I've been in very close range.

I can't say for sure whether I thought I'd actually get here, but let's be realistic, we all had our doubts. But now it's time to gear up.

A tremendous weight has been lifted from my shoulders. All I have to do now is live with the fact that I have stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer, an incurable disease if there ever was one. But here I am, alive and reasonably well.

No more will I have to worry about who, what and where I'm going to be treated. From now on, I'm in charge. (Like Charles.) As a result, I feel as if I've regained a little control of my life.

And for a cancer patient originally diagnosed as "terminal," this control is an extraordinarily wonderful feeling.

I wish I could bottle it like "Brighto." "Brighto, Brighto, makes old bodies new. We'll sell a million bottles, woo, woo, woo, woo, woo, woo." (The Three Stooges in "Dizzy Doctors," 1937.) And that's just the kind of silly enthusiasm I'll need living forward.

Hardly is the lung cancer I have on the run. I wouldn't even say I have it on the walk. A stagger, maybe. (Or maybe that's me who's staggering when I lose my balance because of the neuropathy in my feet.)

Cancer is an adversary unlike any other. It's going to do what it does. I doubt Medicare is going to scare it into remission.

Moreover, my not worrying about having health insurance anymore probably isn't going to have much effect on "the cancer" ("Forrest, Forrest Gump") either. The biggest effect will be on me, emotionally.

I just hope that's enough. Because I'm going to need all the ammunition I can muster.

DINING

Creating a 'Hit Menu' in Vienna

Review: Blend 111, Food and Wine, Vienna.

BY ALEXANDRA GREELEY
THE CONNECTION

As locals must know, the town of Vienna has become a serious dining destination. Just about every ethnic and local taste, menu, and yummy goodies have popped up in this now restaurant-dense area. Want Greek, Mexican, Thai, Japanese, American, or Vietnamese, plus so much more? Come on over to this snappy town!

Now, a new dining star has hit the streets of Vienna—Blend 111, Food and Wine, located at 111 Church Street.

Blend? You may wonder. What's going on? According to founder Michael Biddick, one of the owners of this non-chain destination, "We really wanted to create a restaurant in Vienna that offers high-quality food, wine and coffee," he said. "We wanted sustainability, and a responsible way to dispose of waste. We tested out some of our theories, and were supported by the community." (Note: Biddick is both sommelier and head coffee roaster at Blend 111, tasks he must surely enjoy.)

Since its soft opening in May, he said, the owners and chef have revamped the menu. "The original menu," he said, "was somewhat exotic with duck and quail dishes, and others that people might not try again. These were not approachable. The new menu has been a hit."

That is thanks to the culinary skills of the head chef, Nicolas Terrassin, a native of France who admits this: "I love to cook." He went to one culinary school for several years in the Loire Valley, and also worked in a French catering company before moving to Canada and then to the United States. After moving to D.C., Terrassin worked in a local restaurant and realized, "I can do much more than make salads."

And that he does. He has created a menu that pairs Venezuelan, French, and Spanish flavors. As he said, "I talk to the owner, and we talk about the wine and the wine pairings. He puts out the best wine." And, Terrassin said he can change the menu often and feature seasonal dishes. "I talk with fish markets, for example, and can make a nice halibut dish with a lemon-caper wine sauce."

A new dining star in Vienna—Blend 111, Food and Wine, located at 111 Church Street.

(Note: As Biddick said, Terrassin has a platform here and he has freedom. "It is a good collaboration.")

Lunch and dinner menus have similar offerings, and if you spot tequeños, an offering of cheese wrapped in phyllo dough and baked, be sure to order at least one, if not two, servings. These come crispy hot with a dipping sauce, and are sublimely delicious. Another creation is the unusual Venezuelan pabellon criollo that is a carefully stacked composition of shredded beef, with rice, black beans, and accompanied by pieces of hot plantains. And another stunner: sautéed garlic shrimp served with house-made fresh pasta and flambéed with cognac.

Listed on the luncheon "main plates," the flaxseed arepas (cornmeal flatbread) filled either with shredded beef or shrimp, baked, and served with sliced avocado and cheese are sensational.

Don't skip desserts, created by pastry chef Marion Lancial. Choices are minimal, but the arroz con leche (rice pudding) and the creamy, ultra-rich mousse au chocolat wrap up your meal with brilliance. Eat often, eat well. Enjoy!

Blend 111, 111 Church St., Vienna, 571-363-3613. Hours: Tues., 4:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.; Wed., 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.; Thurs., Fri., 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Sat., 4:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. Sun., 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Carmen Hendricks and Chad Akers.
