'This Building Will Be Ingrained in My Memory Forever'

Fairfax Surf Shop manager reminisces about the business.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

For 43 years, customers have flocked to the Fairfax Surf Shop along Old Lee Highway in downtown Fairfax – long before anyone dreamed of creating Old Town Square next to it. But now – partly because of the synergy between that entertainment venue and the shop's valuable site – that well-known, red building and local landmark will be razed and replaced by a restaurant.

And while the Surf Shop will be peacefully moving to a new location in Courtyard Plaza, just down the street, it's not easy to leave a place so full of memories for so many residents. Indeed, a Sept. 10 Facebook post from the shop to its customers made it clear.

"No official move date, yet," it read. "We'll be in this original building until Sept. 30. You guys have touched our hearts with the support you've shown, and we are so grateful to feel the love. Stop by any time before then. We'll be here for you."

And it's that feeling of mutual caring that has made the Fairfax Surf Shop such a successful business for so many years. Just ask Manager Adam Chase Turrisi.

"I've worked here 10 years, five as manager; and 20 years ago, I got my first skateboard here," he said. "So this transition is bittersweet. We're the longest-running, surf, skate and snowboarding shop in the DMV, and we have a lot of support from the Fairfax citizens."

One of them is City resident Chuck De Mouche, who was there last week with his teenage son, "I've been coming to this location since it opened here in 1976 – and before that, at their old location on Main Street," he said. "It's familiar and a hometown favorite. This store was my introduction to action sports."

Regarding the move, De Mouche said, "It's evolution – this property is worth so much. People coming from the skateboard area at Van Dyck Park will now be in walking distance of the new store, and we'll absolutely continue being customers there, too."

THE COURTYARD PLAZA SITE will also have more parking for the customers, and Turrisi said that's one of the best things about it. "The only complaint we've gotten about this location [at the busy intersection of North Street and Old Lee Highway] is that we didn't have enough parking," he said. "And we might even have better busi-

Restaurant to Replace Fairfax Surf Shop

Iconic building by Old Town Square will be demolished.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

It's the end of an era for the iconic building that housed the Fairfax Surf Shop for more than four decades. Located at 3936 Old Lee Hwy., beside Old Town Square in the City of Fairfax, the well-known, bright-red building will be demolished to make way for a new restaurant.

The Surf Shop leased the building, but Fairfax City's Economic Development Authority (EDA) owns the Park View property on which it sits. And that property has now become part of a larger vision to further strengthen the dining and entertainment options in the City's historic downtown.

Accordingly, the EDA recently finalized an agreement with the Parry Restaurant Group to redevelop that site. And the Surf Shop will relocate to Courthouse Plaza, a few blocks away.

"This is a tremendous project for this site and the city," said Fairfax City Economic Development Director Christopher Bruno. "The EDA is a strong partner in leveraging the city's assets, and this project maximizes the best use of this property, which is in a prime location."

The building is scheduled for demolition in October, followed by six to seven months of construction. As the developer, Parry will pay for the project, with completion of the new venue anticipated for the second quarter of 2020. Fairfax City's EDA will retain ownership of the property and will be the landlord, with Parry operating the restaurant under a long-term lease with the EDA.

"The new use will contribute to an active streetscape and bolster a sense of place for the greater Old Town activity center," said

Bruno. "Parry Restaurant Group also brings an exceptional, restaurant-development portfolio, with successful ventures in places like Charlottesville, Richmond, Lynchburg and even just beyond our City border in Fairfax County."

The building currently on site needs costly repair and renovations, so the EDA sees this project as a positive move forward. "This is a win-win, as the agreement relieves the City of undertaking significant renovation costs," said EDA Chairman Michael O'Brien. "The EDA retains ownership and gets a brand-new, modern building. We also forge a new relationship with a successful restaurant group in a setting that will enhance the downtown and serve as a year-round destination."

Fairfax City Mayor David Meyer is also pleased. "With the increasing popularity of Old Town Square – whether for concerts, family outings, special events and more – a dining destination with outdoor seating raises the bar for hospitality in the heart of Old Town," he explained. "I know residents and others in the region will appreciate the new dining option and make a day or night of it in our beloved downtown."

Similarly, Aaron McDade, a development partner with Parry, said, "We're excited to be coming to the City of Fairfax. We'll leverage our diverse portfolio in creating a unique atmosphere with fresh cuisine right in the heart of Old Town Square. The park will provide the perfect scene for the best outdoor dining in the City."

As for the Surf Shop, Bruno said the EDA has been "extremely supportive" of the popular business and has provided it with a relocation-assistance grant. "We've worked diligently to keep this longstanding business in the City," he said. "We're always focused on the health and profitability of small businesses like Fairfax Surf Shop, as they represent the depth of retail options for residents."

County Announces Plan to Save Lake Accotink

BY JOHN COOK
SUPERVISOR (BRADDOCK DISTRICT)

Two years of advocacy and resident involvement paid off big time when I, Supervisor Jeff McKay, and Park Authority staff announced last week our plan to save Lake Accotink forever. It was a great day for the community.

This plan costs less than the original forecast, dredges the lake, provides for regular continued maintenance dredging, and will not require any large trucks to drive through neighborhood streets.

The Park Authority announced two years ago that Lake Accotink was in danger of disappearing absent new dredging. Since then my office and the Park Authority have held multiple community meetings to inform the public and listen to the community's preferences for the future of the lake. Community input was and remains vital in deciding how to move forward. A community survey initially found an overwhelming majority wanted to save the lake. Thousands of residents signed petitions with the same position. Of the five lake management options presented by the Park Authority, the most popular one called for the installation of a sediment forebay and the full dredging of the lake. Supervisor Jeff McKay and I and the Park Authority held a final community meeting on Sept. 19, 2019 to review the Park Authority's final recommendations for lake management.

The Park Authority's recommendation is to do an initial wet dredge of the lake to an average 8-foot depth. Regular dredging on a much smaller scale would continue in future years. The initial dredge would cost a total of $30.5 million to complete and $2.013 million annually to maintain. This is much less than the $50 million we expected last year. The sediment collected in the dredging would be brought by pipe to an unused area of Wakefield Park under the power lines for dewatering. Once it dries, the dirt would be trucked out of the county via the I-495 beltway. No truck would need to use neighborhood roads. The Wakefield dewatering area gives direct access to Braddock Road, and a minimal impact on wetlands in the area. Further study found trucking was the best way to move the final dirt.

The dewatering system recommended by the Park Authority is known as the Geotextile Fabric Dewatering System. This reusable system easily accommodates large volumes of sediment. It reduces dewatering time versus the traditional basin method and does not disturb the ground at the installation site. It will require trucking sediment to a permanent disposal location at the end of the process.

The sediment field is recommended to be placed north of Braddock Road. This location is ideal due to its proximity to the Braddock Road access route. The sites considered south of Braddock Road would cause an increase in construction and trucking activities near residential communities. By building the dewatering site north of Braddock Road the site would have access to on-site dewatering and quick access to I-495 to truck to the final disposal site. Lastly, it would have the least impact to streams and wetlands compared to sites below Braddock Road.

The Board of Supervisors will vote on this proposal on Oct. 29. There is still time to voice your opinions to my office. You can email us at Braddock@FairfaxCounty.gov or call us at 703-425-9300.

Climate Action: A Top Priority

To the Editor:

I was very interested to read about public participation in Fairfax County's strategic planning process ("Fairfax County Long Term Plan Enters the Think Tank"). As I read through the nine areas of discussion, I noticed that every one of those areas will be impacted by climate change. For example, economic opportunity: clean energy infrastructure and emerging carbon capture technologies are just a couple of the ways that climate action can benefit our economy. Mobility and transportation: As transportation contributes to climate change, incentivizing and facilitating the use of efficient public transportation can massively affect Fairfax County's carbon footprint.

And the most obvious, health and environment: without action, extreme weather and other environmental changes will continue to make us sicker and take more lives — of our own species and many others.

I sincerely hope that as Fairfax County continues with its strategic planning process, climate change is top of mind for the planners. It's an issue that transcends all others, and we have an opportunity to ensure that the county is on the forefront of climate mitigation and adaptation.

One way that both our elected representatives and citizens alike can do this is to learn about and support the Energy Innovation & Carbon Dividend Act (HR 763). This bill, which has been introduced in the House of Representatives, would put a price on the use of fossil fuels while returning all revenues to American families. It is an important step, toward making sure that Fairfax County remains a place where all citizens can live healthy, safe, rewarding lives.

Black Bear Visits Great Falls Home

Cindy Gersony of Great Falls sent us this picture of a bear on her deck. On Sept. 14. Gersony writes: "I heard a noise as I was sitting in my kitchen in the early afternoon, and imagine my surprise to see a bear on our deck — he had to climb up the stairs — casually tipping our bird feeder so he could eat the bird seed. He looks to be a juvenile black bear. He stayed a good 20 minutes, and then ambled off down the deck steps out to the woods in the general direction of the river. We live on Black Riffles Court, in the neighborhood where River Bend and Beach Mill roads meet, not too far from Riverbend Park."

Exploring Art in Retirement

Seniors get a chance to pursue their passion.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

It was in third grade when Barb Cram first discovered her artistic talent. Her teacher asked to use one of her drawings as an example to teach a technique to other students.

Though she was lauded for her artistic talent from elementary school through high school, upon graduation, she says she put that interest on hold and engaged in educational pursuits that she was told were practical.

“When my generation as growing up it was all about getting skills like typing, bookkeeping and stenography so that you could get a job after you graduate said Cram, now 72.

After a long career, which included a stint in the White House, Cram has reengaged with her creative side. Now as President of Falls Church Arts, she is helping other retirees live out their passion, discover their talent or simply learn to appreciate art.

“Art can do so much for seniors. It’s like a vacation for the mind,” she said. “Whether as an artist, a teacher, a docent or an art student, there’s place for everyone.”

Retired clinical psychologist, Carolyn Jackson Sahni, spent her career practicing in settings ranging from state universities to non-profit organizations. Retirement has offered her the opportunity to explore her creative interests.

“I have never been employed as an artist or in a specific art related field, [but] art has always been my first love, said Jackson Sahni, who lives in Vienna. “I see art as our ultimate means of personal expression. I have an overwhelming preference for beauty and nature. Art has been my way of indulging this preference.”

Sahni says that art has given her the gift of living out her dedication to life-long learning. “I believe in ... growing, expressing and discovering, she said. “While I am not quite ready to accept the definition of senior that I am, I cherish every day of my seventy-one years.”

Though she spent 32 years as a government employee working in a variety of agencies including the National Institutes of Health and The Department of Homeland Security, Cynthia Miller had always wanted to explore visual arts. A few discouraging childhood experiences left her afraid to try.

“I have been interested in art my whole life, but my hands were frozen until I found my courage” she said. “I decided at age 70 that it was my time to learn and explore my desires as an artist.”

Not only is Miller an artist, but she volunteers her time as a docent, sharing her passion with others. “I often speak with others who are seniors with few outside interests,” she said. “They think I am brave in approaching my art as another career. I have a love of life, and feel I have a gift yet to develop and offer to others.”

McLean resident Sallie Evans once worked as a recreation therapist, in retirement she works as an art instructor at Falls Church Arts teaching. “I love teaching because it allows me to be an active participant when students experience the joy and absolute empowerment of making art. Teaching not only children, but she leads art projects for Fall Church Art’s Memory Café, a social and recreational gathering of individuals with memory loss and their caregivers, friends, and family.

Deborah Conn, 70, retired from a career in marketing and began taking lessons in watercolor at the Art League in Alexandria. These days she’s an active and prolific artist. Her medium is watercolor, frequently on textured paper that she makes by crinkling tissue paper and gluing it on the painting surface. Humans are the subjects of most of her work, but as one of the resident artists at Palette2 restaurant in Shirlington, she sketches dogs for patrons while they eat.

“I’ve been experimenting with making parts of my paintings less defined so viewers can fill in with their own mind,” said Conn, who teaches art out of her home studio and works as an art curator. “In the last ten years or so, painting and art have become enmeshed in nearly every area of my life. Many of my closest friends are artists.”

ness at the new space because of the easier in-and-out.”

In addition, said Turrisi, “We’re thinking about the potential of the new place. All we ever wanted is the best for the City and our customers, and we’re leaving this spot with our heads held high.”

Still, he said wistfully, “The past two months have been hard. I’ve spoken with over 100 people, face-to-face, about the move. And as the manager, I love the place and don’t want to leave. I feel the same way the customers do.”

Initially, said Turrisi, “A lot of people were mad at the City and confused about what was happening. It was hard breaking the news to our loyal customers and seeing their sad faces. But they were relieved to know we’ll still be in business and will stay in the City.”

Noting that the building was constructed in the 1800s, he said, “It’s given people a lot. Whether they’ve shopped here or just driven by it for years, it’s a reminder to them of Fairfax’s past. As skateboarders, we care about things that can’t speak. But if this building could talk, it would tell epic stories about the thousands and thousands of kids who’ve gotten their first skateboards here. So people are bummed out and very much in mourning – it’s like sending off a friend.”

Turrisi said the City’s changed a great deal over his 32 years of life. But, he added, “I love the City of Fairfax, and I’m fortunate to be part of this business and to have seen it grow. We’re doing very well, and I’m happy about it.”

FAIRFAX SURF SHOP sells skateboards, surfboards, snowboards and their associated apparel and equipment. And Turrisi said the staff always does right by the customers. “I put a lot of extra effort into it, and we treat people well,” he said. “It just requires caring – and that’s what made this building feel like home. We genuinely try our best.”

He also said the store always carries brands the customers can’t get anywhere else but in the City. “I pride myself in offering nice, quality merchandise,” said Turrisi. And it’s paid off. “I’ve been here 10 years, and this is the strongest our business has ever been,” he said. “We’ve gotten more new customers, and people have figured out that we’re a surf shop that really cares.”

On Sept. 19, Fairfax Surf Shop posted this message on Facebook to its customers.

Generations of families have come through the store, as well. Turrisi recalled waiting on people as children and then having them return years later, with their own children. And since the upcoming move has become known, many of the original employees have contacted him, asking to have some of the bricks from the shop’s main walkway off Old Lee Highway. So, said Turrisi, “We’re going to try to do that because they helped make this shop what it is today.”

Actually, he added, “Skateboarding is bigger than ever today. It’s even in the 2020 Olympics, and we’re the only local shop that can help people get there. I’m grateful we’ll have a spot nearby, and the space will be a little bit bigger, so there’s more potential for sales.”

Turrisi said the staff is excited about the new location and will get to have input into how the shop is laid out and the way it looks. “We’re just going to look at this with positivity,” he said. “We’ve assured the customers we’ll keep our old-school vibe and still be as genuine and with the same merchandise – just in a different building.”

He said some of the recent Facebook posts about the shop have really touched his heart. “This building will be ingrained in my memory forever,” said Turrisi. “If not for it, I wouldn’t have gotten to meet some of the people I have.” He then related a heartwarming story about one of the customers that illustrates why people love the Fairfax Surf Shop so much.

“The other day, a middle-school kid came in with a skateboard that wasn’t very good quality, and the bearings were worn out,” said Turrisi. “So we gathered up all the parts we had here and created him a whole, new skateboard. We didn’t charge him anything; we just told him to enjoy the ride. That’s what makes us special – and this kid will remember us for the rest of his life.”

Agatha Christie Mystery from Providence Players

Pre-Halloween treat on the James Lee Theatre stage.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

A theatrical murder mystery for these pre-Halloween nights is what the Providence Players have in store for audiences. The Players will open its new mainstage theater season with Agatha Christie's "And Then There Were None."

Christie is the best-selling novelist of all time. Her books have sold more than a billion copies.

Producing Christie's "And Then There Were None" was an easy decision. The play, as adapted by Christie herself, is about ten strangers, apparently with little in common, who have been lured to an island mansion by a mysterious couple. Over dinner, a record begins to play, and the voice of an unseen host accuses each person of hiding a guilty secret. That evening, one of the guests is found murdered by a deadly dose of cyanide. Tension begin to escalate over the murder of one of the ten strangers. Will the killer strike again?

Tina Thronson directs "And Then There Were None" for the Providence Players. "I am a fan of murder mysteries and Agatha Christie is at the top of her game in this one. Ten people trapped on an isolated Providence Players presents "And Then There Were None" at James Lee Community Center Theater, 2855 Annandale Road, Falls Church. Performances: Oct. 4 to 19, 2019. Thursday, Friday and Saturday 7:30 p.m. with Sunday 2 p.m. Matinees on Oct. 6 & 13. Ticket Prices: Adults $20, Seniors (62+) $17. Students (w/ID) $17. island with a murderer on the loose – you can't beat it."

Where and When

Making directorial choices, Thronson switched "the genders of several characters" and still they "are from different walks of life, and different ages."

"The action moves forward at a tight clip," noted Thronson. Audiences can expect "a superlative cast, a gorgeous set and costumes, and terrific technical touches."

"With such a dark premise, I wanted to create as much contrast as possible with the locale and the ensuing mayhem. So, although the play still takes place just before the start of World War II, it is no longer placed off the dreary Devon coast. It will take place off the coast of Santa Barbara," said Thronson. "Such a lovely locale cannot possibly be the scene of a crime É can it?"

The "And Then There Were None" cast includes Providence Players veterans and newer members. The eleven member cast includes Sara Bennett, Arianna Colligan, Craig Geoffrion, Amy Griffin, Christopher Persil, James McDaniel, Allen McRae, David Ranowsky, Jaclyn Robertson, Scott Stofko and Roxanne Waite.

"This is Agatha Christie at her best," said David Whitehead, Providence Players Board member. "This is 'right up our alley,' as they say. A complex, ensemble production with high production values and a seasoned and talented director and cast. You won't want to miss this show."

Engineering a Solution

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Though not exactly "The Continuing Story of Bungalow Bill," ("The Beatles," 1968) but for those of you regular readers still interested in the presumptive outcome - in my lifetime, of my 250 year-old home's "structural integrity" - as it relates to my pending refinance application, we may now have lift off, so to speak. (Hopefully Houston, we don't have a problem.) A structural engineer came by the house yesterday at my request and examined and measured the cracks in the concrete slab which "porches" the front of my house. After which he offered his professional opinion, a more detailed version of which will be emailed to me in a few days (copies of which I will forward to all the interested parties). According to this engineer, there is a concrete solution which, cost notwithstanding (or even known yet) will secure my home's structural foundation and assuage the appraiser.

The problem, as I understand it, concerns the possibility of my house falling down, from back to front. On my porch there are five wood pillars which stand floor to ceiling equidistant across the porch. They are not embedded in the concrete (nor are they cracked or rotting). They are supporting the weight of the house, but apparently are on shaky ground. What has happened is, due to the improper preparation of the soil onto which this concrete slab was originally poured (100 years ago - or whenever), the concrete has buckled under the pressure, and the house is tilting, sort of (and/or has the potential to slip further and fall). And if this happens, neither my wife nor I will be able to get up, whether we're owners of Life Alert medallions or not.

There is a solution however, which doesn't require "a pick and shovel and 20 men" (to invoke a Three Stooges reference). Nor will it require any heavy equipment and/or cabling of my house in some way to lift it off the ground in order to break up all the length, width and depth of approximately 150 square feet of concrete (I don't know about the cubic exactly). The plan seems to be for the house to be temporarily supported by wood beams as it is raised up a bit and then one foot square sections of the concrete surrounding each of the pillars will be broken up. According to the engineer, not a major undertaking. Then piers, which are structural engineering jargon for whatever I need to have supporting the pillars, will be placed on the ground/ foundation beneath each pillar and then back-filled with concrete and Bob's your uncle: structural integrity. At least that's as much as I can understand/explain, anyway. Orthotics for the house you might say.

Now whether my description of the repair is at all accurate, the engineer was clear. Though the repair is delicate, he agreed, nobody is reinventing the wheel here, and the solution as proposed is not that complicated. (As for the "structural integrity" of our 100 year-old stable, another concern of the appraiser, the engineer said "We don't certify the structural integrity of 100 year-old buildings." Now whether this out-building situation becomes a deal-breaker, I can only hope that reasonable minds prevail. Check back to this space for future updates.)

At present, I fear there will be fits (by me) and starts (by the various external parties lining up to solve my homes structural problems) to get me to the refinance finish line with some financial integrity still intact. I won't lie, there's a bit at stake here, and I can't afford (literally and figuratively) any slip ups. As I approach my 65th birthday, my goal is to simplify my life and secure my future, not complicate my life and "insecure" my future. I had hoped this refinance would accomplish the former. I had no idea that it would lead to the latter.
