Social Distance Without Social Isolation

Options for staying connected while maintaining safety.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Social distancing is now the new normal as COVID-19 barrels its way through communities, with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommending that those age 60 and older avoid crowds and stay home as much as possible.

This safety measure can also create social isolation.

“This is a huge concern for our elder population on many different levels,” said Phyllis Miller Palombi, Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist with the Fairfax Commission on Aging. “Creating activity and maintaining social contact with others is crucial to avoid depression. Loneliness especially if sudden, creates a high level of stress as one tries to cope.”

Like stress, loneliness and fear can compromise one’s immune system, advises Palombi. “A physical activity can boost immune functioning,” she said. “Going for a walk, doing yoga, lifting very light weights, will help reduce the negative effects on the body.”

A group of family members and close friends can offer support and prevent feelings of desolation. “People should know that social distancing doesn’t have to mean social isolation,” said Bethesda psychologist Holly McNamara, Ph.D. “Positive connection with others is always important, but now more than ever, we need to make sure we maintain them.”

In fact, there are a wide variety of coping mechanisms that can help seniors stay connected in ways that are safe. “Social visits with friends, say over coffee, are not recommended,” said Trina Mahan-Webb, Director, Adult and Aging Services of Fairfax County’s Department of Family Services. “However, coffee and a phone call is an option.”

Creating a buddy system is one of the recommendations made by the CDC to make sure people stay connected and get updates on new developments with the pandemic. Becoming familiar with and using new technology like FaceTime, Zoom and Skype can offer virtual social connection without posing a health risk, advises Mahan-Webb. “Video chatting is encouraged,” she said.

“In this day and age of technology many seniors are able to use computers and cell phones to access social media connectivity” added Palombi. “Those that cannot use technology, talking and sharing concerns, thoughts with others is essential for optimal health.”

Even filling time with activities that are done solo can ease the feelings of loneliness and stave off despair. “We also recommend revisiting hobbies such as reading, art and crafts or preparing new recipes and then baking and freezing your creations,” said Mahan-Webb. “You can also consider online courses or getting a head start on spring cleaning your home.”

For those with mobility issues, Palombi recommends other activities. “Practicing mindfulness is another stress reliever and can be learned on many smartphone apps,” she said. “Doing something for somebody else which gives a sense of purpose and can relieve stress.”

“The bottom line is to consider doing things to stay safe while remaining active and engaged,” said Mahan-Webb.

Global to Local: Coronavirus Defines Us

Week Two 03/15-03/21-feeding children is priority for FCPS.

By MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

The week of March 8-14 ended with an outdoor sign at Pots & Plants on Georgetown Pike in Great Falls reading, "What a week this year has been." On March 15, the CDC provided "Interim Guidance for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19)." It read: "Larger gatherings (for example, more than 250 people) offer more opportunities for person-to-person contact and therefore pose greater risk of COVID-19 transmission...Cancel gatherings of more than ten people for organizations that serve higher-risk populations."

On March 21, Johns Hopkins University of Medicine confirmed the United States now placed 3rd globally in the total number of confirmed COVID-19 cases with China and Italy preceding.

Phrases such as "wash your hands," "social distancing," and "flatten the curve," became the norm. Locals changed how they lived, learned, worked, played and worshiped. Many, but not all took proactive measures protecting themselves, their families and the community.

Fairfax County Public Schools remained closed. Parents found themselves with an unexpected job description: educator. Social distancing meant working from home. Companies directed employees to pack up, go home and telework to limit person-to-person contact and risk of COVID-19 transmission. Workers set up impromptu workspaces in their residences. For some, it didn't always work out.

A second crisis, locally, spun off from the coronavirus pandemic — food insecurity for the 55,000 school-aged children in Fairfax County who are poor enough to qualify for subsidized meals during the school year.

While those in medical, safety and military professions had long been termed first responders, a new group of individuals took to the front lines. In grocery stores, cashiers such as the one at Safeway in Great Falls rung up purchases for his neighbors but with limited protection gear, not unlike most other cashiers and shelf stockers at other stores locally, including Giant and big-box retailer Costco. Management rationed items, a word used in times of war. Nonprofit organizations, including Cornerstones in Reston, told volunteers not to show up; staff took to the frontlines.

Monday, March 16 – Food is priority #1 for school-aged children in Fairfax County.

All Fairfax County Public school buildings close. The county cancels planned laptop distribution for students. The school system announces food distribution sites.

Financial markets crater. Both the Dow Jones and the S&P 500 have their most significant one-day falls since Black Monday 1987. S&P 500 drops 11.9 percent. Nasdaq drops 12.3 percent. All three indexes are down more than 25 percent from their highs, according to Dow Jones.

Tuesday, March 17 - Virginia governor urges those over 65 to self-quarantine.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors holds an Emergency Special Meeting and declares a local state of emergency. Gov. Ralph Northam, a pediatrician, adopts federal government guidelines of limiting gatherings to 10 people. However, he does not order restaurants and bars to close; instead, he says, "We're encouraging that they use takeout ordering so that people won't be inside the confined space."

Wednesday, March 18 - Amazon donates a local $1 million for COVID-19 relief to four area nonprofit organizations, including the Community Foundation of Northern Virginia.

Thursday, March 19 - Evidence of community spread in NOVA

The number of positive tests among people tested for coronavirus in Fairfax County is 14. Fairfax County Health Department releases the words no one wants to read: "Today, public health officials noted evidence of community transmission of the COVID-19 coronavirus in parts of Northern Virginia." It urges, "vigilant social distancing," staying at least six feet from others in all situations. FCPS expands grab-and-go food distribution sites, begins pop-up sites and buses deliver grab-and-go meals along select bus routes.

Friday, March 20 - New first responders. Cornerstones in Reston, self-described as an "advocate for those struggling to make ends meet in northwestern Fairfax County and the Dulles corridor," requests shelter volunteers, including meal servers, front desk staffers, donations assistants, childcare providers and others refrain from coming in for the next two weeks. The staff performs the work.

Saturday, March 21 - U.S. ranks 4th worldwide
At 4:43 p.m., Johns Hopkins reports 156 confirmed cases of coronavirus COVID-19 for Virginia with two deaths: That afternoon, the United States ranks 4th worldwide - 24,148 confirmed cases. By evening, the United States skyrockets to 3rd place.

Locally, Pia Agostini of Italy and owner of Pots & Plants in Great Falls says, "Another sad day for Italy, 793 deaths... All around the D.C. metro area, we are still seeing outdoor gatherings, mostly of young adults, this must stop...If we follow distancing, we might be safe from a lockdown, and businesses might be safe from a shutdown."

Pia Agostini is Italian and the owner of Pots & Plants LLC on Georgetown Pike in Great Falls.

At home, Pia Agostini checks the numbers of COVID-19 deaths and confirmed cases in Bergamo, one of Italy's hardest hit cities where residents have been on lockdown since March 8.

Friday, March 20 - I am heartbroken by watching my beautiful Italy during this tragic situation. Distance from my family and friends has never been more difficult and painful. Today, I am asking for your help to support the health workers and volunteers of the Italian Red Cross of Bergamo and San Donato Milanese, the epicenter of (the) COVID-19 outbreak in Italy, where only today, 475 people died. I am personally in contact with Mrs. Paola Pesenti Bolognini, the Development Area Delegate of the Red Cross of Bergamo. The resources will be used immediately to purchase medical equipment for health workers in the front line who are working around the clock to save lives. This effort is synergistic and complementary to the campaign by the Italian Cultural Society of Washington #WESTANDWITHITALY... Visit <https://www.cribergamo.it> and click on "DONAZIONE" on the homepage banner. The donation will go directly to Croce Rossa Italiana of Bergamo, the Italian city, which was the hardest hit by the coronavirus where Mrs. Paola Pesenti Bolognini is working.

Saturday, March 21 - Here we are, another sad day for Italy, 793 deaths. About 2 hours ago, Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte announced the decision to stop all productions considered "not necessary," through April 1. Italy has not experienced something like this since the aftermath of WW2...Based on what I have learned by following the situation in Italy, I can strongly recommend to "Enforce Distancing" (here). All around the D.C. metro area, we are still seeing outdoor gatherings, mostly of young adults. This must stop. Do we need authorities to enforce it? Maybe! Distancing will help "flatten the curve," preventing overwhelming of the health care system and more. If we follow distancing, we might be safe from lockdown, and business might be safe from a shutdown.

Now, if we are too late for that option? Well, that's all another story.

'Our Priority Is to Save Lives'

Governor Northam orders statewide closure of certain non-essential businesses: all public and private schools K-12 closed for the rest of the academic year.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

“COVID-19 is serious, and we must act. Unfortunately, the virus does not respect national borders or state borders. It is now everywhere, or it will be soon. That is what happens when a global pandemic hits a nation. With this pandemic, states have been left to figure out this on our own, and I’m acting to protect Virginians,” said Virginia Governor Ralph Northam who issued statewide Executive Order Number Fifty-Three (2020) in response to the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic on Monday, March 23. It ordered the closure of certain non-essential businesses, bans all gatherings of more than 10 people, and closes all K-12 schools for the remainder of the academic year. The Order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. on Tuesday, March 24, 2020. It remains in place until 11:59 p.m. on Thursday, April 23, 2020.

Northam said, “Nonessential retail establishments can remain open if they allow 10 or fewer patrons and adhere to social distancing and increase sanitizing procedures. Essential services like grocery stores, health services and businesses in our supply chain will remain open, but they must adhere to social distancing and increased sanitizing procedures. Gatherings of more than 10 are banned. We do not make these decisions lightly.” He stressed there would be expectations for essential businesses that remained open. Social distancing mattered, and businesses that remained open had a responsibility to adhere to social distancing recommendations. “You need to step up sanitizing practices on common service surfaces...Make no mistake. If you are essential and open, you have a special responsibility to do the right thing,” he said.

As for schools, Northam said that closures were necessary to minimize the speed at which COVID-19 spread and protect the capacity of the healthcare system. Northam said, “By tomorrow, our Department of Education will issue guidance to help school divisions think through those decisions and ensure that every student is served equitably. We’re already working on waivers to relieve testing requirements and ensure that our students who were on track to graduate can do so.” He added that according to a Yale study estimate, 80,000 of students statewide may be the children of health care workers and urged a public-private response. “Today I’m calling on our local communities, private daycare providers, community childcare partners, and public schools to rally together to provide childcare for the young children and school-aged children of essential personnel. Our childcare providers are also essential personnel,” Northam said.

Northam said individuals were moving into a period of sacrifice. “Most of us have already begun to experience this. Many businesses are closed already because their owners have done the responsible thing...Today, thousands, thousands of people are without work here in our Commonwealth. About 40,000 people have filed for unemployment just last week. That number will, unfortunately, go up. More families will be out of work that has serious health consequences too. It will lead to anxiety; it will lead to fear. It is difficult to live with uncertainty. We can expect to see more depression, alcoholism and domestic violence. But the sooner we all take these necessary steps to slow the spread, the sooner we will all get through this,” said Northam.

In closing, Northam acknowledged the health crisis and economic crisis and said that the sooner that we can get this health crisis under control, the sooner our economy will recover. “So I asked every Virginian to stand with me as we fight this battle. Do your part. Stay home, when you can, and social distance and wash your hands when you must go out for supplies. I know that the next several weeks, the next several months will be difficult. They will require everyone to change the way that we live and the way we interact with each other. We have not been called upon to sacrifice this in many, many years. But I am calling on you to do just that. We must put aside what we want and replace it with what we need... It will take time, but we can, and we will get through this together.”

According to the Executive Order, violation of paragraphs 1, 3, 4 and 6 of the Order shall be a Class 1 misdemeanor pursuant to § 44-146.17 of the Code of Virginia.

Paragraph 1-Effective 11:59 p.m., Tuesday, March 24, 2020 until 11:59 p.m., Thursday, April 23, 2020, all public and private in person gatherings of 10 or more individuals are prohibited.

Paragraph 3-Closure of all dining and congregation areas in restaurants, dining establishments, food courts, breweries, microbreweries, distilleries, wineries, tasting rooms, and farmers markets effective 11:59 p.m., Tuesday, March 24, 2020 until 11:59 p.m., Thursday, April 23, 2020. Restaurants, dining establishments, food courts, breweries, microbreweries, distilleries, wineries, tasting rooms, and farmers markets may continue to offer delivery and take-out services.

Paragraph 4-Closure of all public access to recreational and entertainment businesses, effective 11:59 p.m., Tuesday, March 24, 2020 until 11:59 p.m., Thursday, April 23, 2020 as set forth below:

If any such business cannot adhere to the 10 patron limit with proper social distancing requirements, it must close.

Paragraph 5

Designing, Building and Flying Rockets

Oakton High team to compete in the NASA Student Launch Initiative.

BY BERK KASIMCAN

We are part of Oakton High School in Vienna and our club consists of a diverse group of 40 talented students who design, build, and fly rockets. Our club's mission is to guide and teach young students to be STEM innovators through participating in programs that help build STEM-oriented skills and will foster them to become better communicators and leaders. We mainly compete in The Team America Rocketry Challenge (TARC), Battle of the Rockets, and the NASA Student Launch Initiative Competition. Over the past few years we have won 1st Place in the Battle of the Rockets Competition 2019, and became TARC national finalists in 2017 and 2018.

This exposure has given our members a chance to expand and apply the skills they have learned and honed for the competitions, and help them develop their problem-solving skills and teamwork capabilities.

Additionally, we have done STEM engagement events with middle school and elementary school students to teach and inspire them to pursue STEM careers and jobs.

This year, one of our teams is participating in the NASA Student Launch Initiative (NASA SLI), and we will be flying to Huntsville, Ala. in April to launch our rocket and compete with other high schools and universities. For this competition, we had to develop our experiment and mission, and establish a set of guidelines that we had to meet by the time we are launching our rocket in April. Our mission is to design, construct, and fly a sounding rocket with an electronic payload using a commercial motor to a specified altitude, which will then be recovered safely. The data collected from the payload will be used to study the effects of different approximation techniques and rocket conditions on the accuracy of altitude calculations.

Vienna Boy Scouts Hold Online Troop Meetings

Following the words of the Boy Scout motto to "Be Prepared," Troop 976 of Our Lady of Good Counsel in Vienna did just that and more this week. In this time of uncertainty and social-distancing due to the coronavirus, the leadership and scouts of Troop 976 rallied to continue with their regularly scheduled Wednesday evening Troop meetings. Instead of holding a meeting as they usually do in the Counsel Room at OLG they took it online!

On Wednesday March 11, 27 scouts of Troop 976 utilized online video teleconferencing via Zoom to participate in their meeting. This inaugural approach went extremely well keeping the Troop not only on schedule but connected with one another. Scoutmaster Abe Bacarra set up the teleconference and laid out ground rules with the scouts at the start to help the boys understand Zoom's features and to also help in keeping the meeting under control. For example, virtual handraising was one of the many areas instituted with the boys to insure a forum where each boy could follow the discussion and also participate.

As moderator, Mr. Bacarra had planned initially for a 10-15 minute virtual Troop meeting to see if the approach was even viable but their meeting lasted for 45 minutes and could have gone longer. The scouts were not only engaged but excited to be continuing in some format with their normal routines. The scouts followed a pre-set agenda that was listed on screen. An unexpected side benefit emerged in that there was even more participation than usual from the younger scouts as the format seemed to help with any hesitation to participate.

"The scouts took the virtual meeting in stride," Scoutmaster Abe Bacarra said. "I think this is indicative of their generation where they have been exposed to computing/mobile devices from an early age. The virtual meeting is in line with current distance learning efforts. The boys are so adept with this technology that they may be helping their parents set up Webex and Zoom sessions for their office meetings."

Due to the great success of the meeting last Wednesday the Troop plans to continue using the online format for their weekly Troop meetings as long as social distancing is necessary. In fact, Troop elections for scout leadership positions are scheduled for next week and will continue now online. The scouts are not the only ones going online. On the same night the Troop's adult comprised Committee meeting led by Committee Chair Pete Thiringer took place via teleconference as well. Even more, there are plans already in process to hold virtual scout Boards of Review (needed for rank advancement) next week. Troop 976 is not only remaining "Prepared" but keeping their close connections during these unprecedented times.

Pure Pasty Company Victorious Again at the World Pasty Championships

Vienna based bakery Pure Pasty Company have been awarded silver and bronze medals in the Open Savoury Category at the Eden Project on Feb. 29.

The winning pasties were the Cheese and Onion taking the bronze and the silver winner was a Lamb Jalfrezi; both brought to the competition by boss and British ex-pat Michael Burgess and his English chef Nicola Willis Jones.

To top off the experience an old friend of Burgess' from England, Jan Mathieson, won the amateur Open Savoury category with a Goat's Cheese, Pear and Walnut pasty.

The event has become an annual pilgrimage for Mike and Pure Pasty Company despite distance and the weather! As Burgess notes, "We love Cornwall having established a connection as a child, so it's great to be back amongst friends once again. I don't think I've seen a company take two of the three top spots before, so I'm incredibly proud of my team's efforts. I've often dreamed of, 'what if we take more than one spot?' and now we've done it!"

We're also chuffed to bits that one of our supporters took the title for Amateur Open Pasty. It's magnificent to see her on stage looking so happy.

This company result gives us impetus going into a year where we have ambitious plans to spread the pasty across the whole of the USA. For once this year, Lamb Jalfrezi and Cheese and Onion, were two of ours I secretly would have backed to do well."

Willis Jones adds, "travelling from Virginia to compete against all the Cornish bakeries and beyond is a privilege in itself. To place twice in the top three is an amazing achievement for Pure Pasty. We have spent years honing our craft and these results show that we are getting it right. We do our best to give all the ex-pats in the DC area a real taste of home."

Entering the competition for the fourth year running, the American bakery from Virginia won the first prize in the Company Open Savoury category two years running. Open Savoury allows for experimentation away from the traditional Cornish-style pasty. The first time they won with that ever-divisive savoury ingredient - pineapple, which served to add a touch of sweetness to the spice in Chicken BBQ. Last year they returned with seasonally inspired favourites the Turkey, Stuffing and Cranberry and were the victors again.

Risking a Reward

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

In my 11-plus years as a lung cancer “diagnossee,” I’ve done a pretty good job of facing the facts and acting/planning accordingly. I’ve accepted my reality and somehow managed to live so long beyond the original “13 month to two year” prognosis I was given by my oncologist that he has introduced me to some of his students as his “third miracle.” Unfortunately, this characterization is not the end of the story.

In retrospect, dealing with/being treated for one type of cancer (non small cell lung cancer) seemed easy enough. Soon, I’ll be getting treated for two types of cancer: papillary thyroid cancer stage 2, in addition to my pre-existing stage 4 lung cancer. And since the treatments are not identical and cannot occur simultaneously, I’ll be receiving treatment for my thyroid cancer first and deferring treatment for my lung cancer until at least mid April. That’s when I have my next scheduled appointment with my oncologist when no doubt we’ll discuss strategy and all treating me forward.

In the interim, to address the thyroid cancer, I will be spending a night at the Washington Hospital Center. This will occur after I receive a dose of radioisotopes, a type of nuclear medicine designed to target and kill any remaining thyroid cancer in my body wherever it might be located. What happens after my “overnight” and subsequent follow-up appointment with my endocrinologist has yet to be discussed. What little I know is that I’ll need a pre- and post-procedure CT scans and that upon release from the hospital, I’ll need to be quarantined for a few days (away from children and pets primarily).

Hoping my body responds as anticipated, I’ll presume there will be some kind of maintenance-type of treatment for my thyroid cancer which will likely be combined with the restart of my lung cancer treatment. But I don’t really know. But what I really do know is that doctors, generally speaking, don’t want to consider scenarios about what might happen if such and such or so and so happens, or not. Though I’m sure there’s a reasonable expectation of something or other happening, my experience has been that doctors divulging what might happen (treatment/procedure etc.) next, since there are so many variables/results yet to be considered, is unlikely. Though I will still ask my fair share of questions about my future, ultimately, all I can do is wait and see.

Ordinarily, as in how I’ve managed since my diagnosis, being uncertain about the next medical step has been no problem. I realize that answer would likely be somewhere between a house of cards and definite maybe anyway, always depending. Now add to the mix of uncertainty, the coronavirus that has “pandemicked” the country. As a result of its spread, will I be prevented/rescheduled because the hospitals are overwhelmed? After all, I am the poster child for possible victims: male, over 60, weakened immune system with a severe underlying medical condition. I’m the exact person they don’t want to see at the hospital. Yet, if I don’t go/receive approval to go, I doubt I’ll get any better at home without treatment. In my case, I don’t believe leaving well enough alone is going to work very well.

Still, my choices feel almost counterintuitive. I have to risk my life (leave my home) in order to possibly save my life (cancer treatment) away from home. I can’t do one without the other. To receive treatment, I’ll have to expose myself, potentially, to the exact complication that my lung cancer diagnosis makes me most susceptible to: breathing issues. However, if I don’t/can’t, I’ll be worse off than if I hadn’t. Nor do I feel as if I can wait until the virus is more under control. Control which seems unlikely in the near term. And in every term (short, medium or long), the cancer is not going to wait. I sure hope I won’t have to either.
