At Dog Parks, the Clean-Up Bag is a Must

Walks are important for the family dog, but so is scooping the poop.

The Connection

A t the Old Mill Dog Park in Mount Vernon, Apollo, a light-colored Great Pyrenees, met another dog named Apollo, a Rhodesian Ridgeback, and they ran around until Penny, a collie-mix, showed up, and then all three were in a game of chase. The deck at this dog park was small-stone gravel, and clean-up bags were available, but the trees took in all the scent-marking leg lift the dogs had to dish out. That's the way it is in 10 county “off leash,” dog parks across the area.

This dog park is well used, but there wasn't an “accident” to be seen inside the park. “People are pretty responsible,” said Susan, the owner of the Ridgeback. On the trail to the park, someone forgot to bring a bag, and the dog waste is not one of those things that just goes away with the next storm.

JUDY PEDersen at the Fairfax County Park Authority is in tune with what's going on at the parks, and has not experienced many problems. “We have not noticed any significant impact to the vegetation surrounding a dog park. Dog owners are required to pick up after the dogs, so we believe any potential impacts that there might be, are mitigated by that practice,” Pedersen said.

Since a dog's diet is not a plant-based diet like cows and horses, dog waste is not ideal for use as a fertilizer and “unsuitable for soil enrichment,” said Doody Calls a pet waste clean-up service that started in Northern Virginia in 2000 by Jacob and Susan D'Aniello. Obviously the size of the dog determines the amount of waste, but on average, Doody Calls says that a dog produces about 274 pounds of waste a year. If left on the ground, particularly in a fenced in yard, that could end up as a stinky mess that might take a while to absorb into the ground, and then it's not good for the grass or trees, Doody Calls said.

Gardeners may go out and buy a bag of manure for the garden, but not all waste is made equal. Whether a specific animal's waste is beneficial to the soil depends primarily upon the animal's diet. As a rule of thumb, in order for waste to be used as an effective fertiliz-

Virginia Is for Pet Lovers Too

Cosmetics testing, research dogs/cats, dangerous dogs, pet store employees come under scrutiny.

he 2021 Virginia General Assembly had only six companion animal-related bills before it this session; a small number compared to the roughly two dozen during the 2020 session, and a dozen in 2019. Virginians love their pets and legislators are different. Several frequently sponsor bills aimed to better the lives of animal companions, although the short session this year led to a restriction in the number of bills legislators were permitted to file.

Northern Virginia’s Senator Jennifer Boyasko (D-33) and Del. Kaye Kory (D-38) sponsored bills in their respective legislative houses to restrict cosmetic testing on animals. The Humane Cosmetic Act (SB1379 and HB2250), which has passed both houses, will prohibit testing of cosmetics on animals in the Commonwealth, and prohibit the sale of any cosmetic that was developed or manufactured using animal testing by any cosmetic manufacturer. If signed by the Governor, the testing provision of the Act will go into effect on July 1, 2021, and the ban on sales on Jan. 1, 2022. Unsuccessful with similar bills last year, both legislators found success this time with the federal law.

Sen. William Stanley (R-20), a member of the Senate Agriculture, Conservation and Natural Resources Committee, also is a frequent sponsor of animal bills. He sponsored two bills this session, SB1412 to keep those convicted of animal cruelty from working in the pet industry, and SB1417 to give research dogs and cats an opportunity for an adopted home when no longer needed at a research testing facility, including our institutes of higher education.

Stanley’s SB1412 will mirror some restrictions for pet stores and dog breeders that public and private shelters and rescue have operated under for many years. Northern Virginia has had multiple examples of pet store manager convictions, where pet stores were closed, only to have the manager move and open at another location. The bill restricts those with animal cruelty, neglect or abandonment convictions from working as owners, managers, employees of pet store or breeders. The bill also requires pet stores to obtain a statement from purchasers or adopters, that the person has not had an animal related conviction, as shelters and rescues are now required to do.

The testing facility dog adoption bill (B1417), requires that a dog or cat, no longer needed for testing, be given an opportunity for adoption prior to euthanasia, providing that the animal does not pose a health or safety risk to the public. The testing facility may enter into agreements with a shelter or rescue, or research arms of high education research facilities, such as Virginia Tech, may institute their own adoption programs. Senator Stanley himself adopted a beagle breed for research after visiting a Cumberland medical research breeder with Sen. Dave Marsden (D-37) to inspect the facility. The two Senators wanted to know more about the only medical research dog breeder located in Virginia after discussion of a 2020 General Assembly bill that would have restricted the business, but did not pass. Stanley named his adopted dog Marsy in commemoration of his trip with Sen. Marsden.

Rescuing Annie and Sophie

Mary Kay Claas of Oakton writes: “My husband Jim Sweeney and I have rescued 4 lab/lab mixes over the years. Attached are photos of our newest two. The first photo shows Annie (2 year old lab mix from HART - adopted in December 2020) and Sophie (6 year old lab/rottweiler mix from LRCP - adopted in December 2020). This photo was taken 6 weeks after Annie joined our home. The second photo shows Annie in her foster home awaiting her forever home. Notice the difference? This is why we rescue dogs.

Annie started her life in Alabama and was shuffled from shelter to shelter since September of 2020 until she made it to HART Rescue in December. We were fortunate to be looking for another lab/lab mix. Annie (as many strays) enter rescue organizations heartworm positive. Ironically, so was Sophie. This is a deadly but treatable disease if you catch it soon. Annie successfully made it through the month long treatment and is now enjoying life in the manner in which she deserves. Daily walks in the woods and weekly weekend visits to the Vienna Dog Park.”

Celebrating Black History

There are ample reasons to be celebrating Black history in Virginia this month and throughout the year.

By Kenneth R. “Ken” Plum
State Delegate (D-36)

One of the meaningful traditions that has evolved in the Virginia House of Delegates over the last couple of decades has been the celebration of Black History Month by having a speech each day on the House floor about famous Black persons and their struggles and accomplishments in the Commonwealth. According to History magazine, Black History Month is an annual celebration of achievements by African Americans and a time for recognizing their central role in U.S. history. Also known as African American History Month, the event grew out of “Negro History Week,” the brainchild of noted historian Carter G. Woodson and other prominent African Americans. Since 1976 the month of February has been designated as Black History Month and is celebrated around the world, including in Canada and the United Kingdom.

Virginia has a unique role in Black history. Virginia has a unique role in Black history.

High School Students Receive Peace Awards

Students from 24 Fairfax County public schools have been named recipients of the 2021 Student Peace Awards of Fairfax County, designed to recognize young people who work as peacemakers. Recipients will be recognized at a virtual reception in March.

The Student Peace Awards of Fairfax County were begun in 2006 to encourage people to think more about peace as both a means and an end, and to recognize young people who work as peacemakers. Every year, the high schools in Fairfax County are asked to select one junior or senior, or a group of students, whose work has promoted peace. The project is organized by volunteers and funded by donations from 17 secular and religious sponsoring organizations.

The 2021 recipients include the following students from our area:

Aamirah “Molly” Malik, Herndon High School – As part of a group of students, she gave gifts through Heifer International of a cow and chickens to a family in Africa in honor of their geography teacher. The animals have enabled the family to become self-sustaining entrepreneurs through the sale of milk and eggs. She is a member of When We All Vote, registering people to vote and taking an organizational role.

Shreya Papneja, Langley High School established the nonprofit CHAPS - Children's Health Awareness Program in Schools to help enable school children to make health-conscious decisions. The organization has provided information to students and parents about health and nutrition and provided them with information on local resources and healthy food drives. During the COVID pandemic, the program raised more than $5,000 for the charity Real Food for Kids through outreach and a GoFundMe account.

Katie Monacella, Madison High School organized a regional hub of the Sunrise Movement, a youth movement to combat climate change. She coordinated a climate strike to express the importance of the climate crisis and, with the group, asked FCPS to establish a Green New Deal, outlining changes the school system could make to become more environmentally sustainable. They proposed more energy-efficient windows, solar panels, and electric school buses. She was honored by the Fairfax Board of Supervisors for her efforts.

Loredana Munteanu, Marshall High School – Originally from Moldavia, Munteanu had a formative experience at the U.S. Institute of Peace in Washington, D.C., that reinforced her commitment to improving diplomatic relations on the international level, as well as within her former country. She and her brother were invited to talk about their own experiences growing up in Moldova and the U.S., from the perspectives of insiders and outsiders to both cultures.

Brittany Peng, McLean High School is the chief executive officer of LeadPeace, a Fairfax County student organization that empowers young people to become community leaders and peacebuilders. Peng currently manages two new initiatives: Lead Talks, a series of monthly speaker events to share the stories of youth leaders, especially those who identify as people of color, female, or other minorities; and Art Peace, that hosts monthly art challenges and dialogues to foster discussions about social inequity and to promote unity.

Diana Ho, South Lakes High School is a mental health advocate, working to get more services in FCPS. As a member of Virginians Organized for Interfaith Community Engagement (VOICE), she spoke in support of VOICE’s budget proposal to Governor Ralph Northam for funding mental health services in schools. She and other students founded the VOICE Teen Team and lobbied the Virginia General Assembly in 2019 about their proposals. Based on her own experiences, Diana offers advice to those new to mental health self-care and awareness through her Take Care website.

TJHSST Assistive Technology Club, Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology Students in T.J.’s Assistive Technology Club (ATC) use their technology skills to provide support for younger students with limited mobility, speech, or hearing abilities. Over more than 12 years, members of the ATC have designed books, enhanced instructional materials, invented games and implemented specially designed software programs for use with the children’s specialized communication devices.

Club members meet weekly with the younger children via video conferencing, sharing colorful, educational online games and other materials they created to meet specific needs of the children.
Town Hall to Discuss Springvale Road Bridge Replacement

The Great Falls Citizens Association is sponsoring a community-wide Town Hall to discuss a proposal to replace the Springvale Road Bridge. This Virtual Meeting will be held this Thursday, Feb. 25, 2021 at 7 p.m. The outreach effort will afford GFCA members at a Great Falls residents with an opportunity to speak to the issue, and hear presentations by GFCA and VDOT planners. Dranesville Supervisor, John Foust, will be in attendance.

To register for this event and sign up to speak, click Town Hall Registration. You will then receive an invitation via email containing the Meeting link on the day of the event.

The VDOT proposes to replace the existing one-lane Springvale Road Bridge with a two-lane structure. GFCA conducted a limited survey of the community on this topic, late last year, and communicated the results to Dranesville Supervisor Foust providing him with feedback that 62 percent of the survey respondents opposed the two-lane concept. Now, the GFCA needs broader community feedback to gauge the community’s viewpoint to present Supervisor Foust a more comprehensive picture, as he has requested.

Submit civic/community announcements at ConnectionNewspapers.com/Calendar. Photos and artwork welcome. Deadline is Thursday at noon, at least two weeks before the event.

For us lucky ones, pets are part of our lives. Most pets, regardless if they’re furry, feathered, finned, or otherwise, elicit our unconditional love. It doesn’t matter the responsibilities and expenses. We are there for them every day, from their cute wide-eyed early weeks of life and for many during their last car ride, our hearts aching. Unknown to pets, they are the best of human mood-boosters, most of the time. Pets increase our physical levels, even when we growl, crawling out of our warm beds in the predawn darkness and schlumping outside with them or filling their dishes with food and water before making our cups of coffee. And we take pictures of our pets because their faces are friendly, their lives generally short, and they are our adopted family members, welcomed into our homes and cherished in our hearts.

Citizens Association Opposes Flag Restrictions

By Mercia Hobson
The Connection

Long-time Great Falls resident and Great Falls Citizens Association Board member Ruth Carver says she finds it “highly offensive” that Fairfax County advertisement of the Zoning Ordinance Modernization (zMOD) program is equating the American flag to a commercial banner.

“While it, (zMOD) was intended to streamline the Zoning Ordinance to make it easier for citizens to read and interpret its content, the County has taken it several steps further by including changes to contents of the current regulation and adding new requirements,” said a spokesperson for GFCA.

On Thursday, Feb. 18, William Canis, President of the Great Falls Citizens Association issued a letter to Commissioner Peter Murphy, Chairman of the Fairfax County Planning Commission, on behalf of the GFCA Board. He conveyed a resolution adopted by the Great Falls Citizens Association on Feb. 16.

Resolution of the Executive Board of the Great Falls Citizens Association objected to the proposed “overly restrictive” treatment of flags in the zMOD amendments to the Zoning Ordinance. Canis copied Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville District) and Vice Chairman John Lufelder, appointed to the Planning Commission by the Board of Supervisors to represent the Dranesville District.

“GFCA believes that the display of the United States flag should be exempt from this Ordinance, and we have attached a resolution in support of that position that was adopted by our board on February 16,” Canis said in the letter.

The Executive Board of the Great Falls Citizens Association said in the Resolution that the National Flag of the United States deserved special recognition within the Zoning Ordinance due to its historic and patriotic significance.

“The United States Flag, as the symbol of America, has been described in a history published by Drexel University Today as a “…vibrant symbol of the American principles of democracy, justice, and freedom, and the everlasting memory of those who have sacrificed their lives defending these intrinsic principles of the United States of America,” stated the Resolution.

According to the Executive Board, the amendment would create a new compliance burden because it set new limits on the total square footage and the number of displayed flags, including that of the United States, unless an exemption is offered in the proposed amendment. The Executive Board called on the Planning Committee to reject a flag’s proposed definition and insert new language exempting the United States Flag from the proposed rules.

The County Zoning Ordinance previously allowed up to three flags, provided the flags were limited to U.S., State, and corporate flags. In 2019, that provision was amended to address “issues with content-neutrality.” County staff have cited 2015 Supreme Court decision (Reed v. Town of Gilbert, AZ) as the basis for changing the Ordinance,” cited a GFCA spokesperson.

SIGNATORIES on the cover letter: William Canis, President, Edward Phillips, Vice President, Elizabeth Huebner, Secretary, James Trent, Treasurer, and Board Members Michael Barclay, Ruth Carver, Jennifer Falcone, Peter Falcone, Pam Grosvenor, Dawn MacPhee, and Fadi Shaddad.

After delivery of the letter and the Resolution, Canis said, “With thousands of U.S. servicemen and women serving overseas under the National flag, and in the midst of a devastating pandemic, Fairfax County has more important issues it should be focused on.”

Langley High Play Explores Impact of Isolation

‘Hey Stranger’ tackles the question everyone struggles with during pandemic

By Lila York
Chantilly High School

n a time where the pandemic has isolated humanity, how does one find solace? In perfect Zoom fashion, Langley High School’s production of “Hey Stranger” tackled the question with which everyone has struggled.

Written by Steph Del Rosso, the play revolved around two high school sweethearts reconnecting after many years apart. From their initial awkwardness and, of course, technical difficulties, both Eve and Gideon reflected on the different paths their lives have taken since the end of their relationship. When the call is crashed by the vocal tape recorded message, Eve (Hannah Toronto) was eager to reconnect with her presumably divorced ex-boyfriend. When the screen focused on just her for monologues, Toronto’s expressions and pacing put meaning behind every line, highlighting the “kind of lonely that’s infuriatingly mediocre” her character was experiencing. Yet, as an argument ensues, Toronto gracefully demonstrated how one’s view of isolation can shift. At the beginning, through Toronto’s realistic nervousness and inner monologues, she revealed how Eve, like many individuals, struggled with isolation. But as the story progressed, Toronto perfectly encapsulated Eve’s shifting view of how isolation acted as an opportunity to reflect, relax, and find comfort in the peace found in being alone.

On the other side of the screen leaning back in his chair was Gideon (Cole Sitilides). While leading Eve on through his flirtatious manner and supposed divorce, Sitilides portrayed a successful chiropractor yearning to reconnect; yet throughout the play, Sitilides revealed Gideon’s selfish acts to benefit his business and his belittling words to boost his ego. When the intelligent teenager Zoe (Claire Stephenson) joins the Zoom call for a tutoring session, the two clash, forcing Eve to be stuck in the middle. With her slight slouch and mannerisms, Stephenson embodied an outspoken teenager who does not tolerate sexist and demeaning remarks. Altogether, the three actors’ pacing, witty remarks, and dynamics allowed for the production to be very realistic.

In addition to compelling performances, the technical aspects were equally amazing. Whether it was Zoe’s practical bedroom setting, where most teenagers are doing their schoolwork, or Gideon’s abstract painting hung on his wall, the set and props in each frame fully depicted each character. Moreover, the subtle technical elements highlighted their characters. At the start, Sitilides’ camera was lower while Toronto’s camera was higher, already signaling the power Gideon had over Zoe. Additionally, the contrasting lighting, Eve’s cooler light and Gideon’s warm lighting tone, furthered their dynamic. Along with accurate costumes, the technical elements added to the reality of the production.

Truly making the best of the app that everyone has become a little too familiar with during quarantine, Langley High School’s production of “Hey Stranger” revealed that once one comes to terms with isolation, one can find the good in it. In isolation, one can observe the majestic trees of the woods, smell the moss, hear the thump of a tree falling, and feel the solace of finding oneself.

Trust and Transparency Enhance Public Safety

Supervisor Alcorn hosts Hunter Mill Town Hall With FCPD.

L eadership at the Fairfax County Police Department, Reston District Station are “very proud” of their work but acknowledge there is more work to come. “We want to ensure we are completely transparent and ensure the community’s trust,” said Station Commander Thea Pirnat during the Virtual Town Hall hosted by Hunter Mill District Supervisor Walter Alcorn (D) on Tuesday, Feb. 16. The hour-long event featured Alcorn’s introduction focused on proposed County policing options, followed by Pirnat’s review of trends and statistics and Assistant Commander Lieutenant Marc Mitchell’s overview of officer training. It ended with a question-and-answer period. Alcorn said that there had been much in the news about policing over the past year, and a number of issues related to policing had come to the Board of Supervisors for consideration. Alcorn described his Joint Board Matter: Request to Review the 9-1-1 Dispatch and Response System to Enhance Division First Strategies that he and Lee District Supervisor Rodney Lusk (D) introduced. Alcorn shared that some calls to 9-1-1 did not necessarily involve criminal activity but were instances of mental and behavioral health crises.

Alcorn said, “Should we be sending… folks who are experienced to deal with these types of mental health or behavioral crisis or perhaps be able to approach them in a little bit different way other than Fire and Rescue or our uniformed police.”

PIRNAT described Reston District Station’s 56 square mile coverage, an area consisting of Reston and parts of Great Falls, Vienna, Oak Hill, and Herndon. The District contained varied elements, Reston Town Center, Lake Fairfax Park, Great Falls National Park, Frying Pan Park, Riverbend County Park, and Metro Stations. The area also exhibited vertical population growth, and thus the Station needed to have a healthy, collaborative working relationship with surrounding jurisdictions and other law enforcement agencies. Pirnat added the Station expected it would be experiencing changes in its types of calls and police responsibilities.

“Fairfax County is one of the safest communities in the entire nation to live,” said Pirnat. “Our crime rate is three times below the national average… (and) we have one of the lowest ratios of police officers to the general population.”

According to Pirnat, there had been a downturn for most crimes in the County. There was a decrease in criminal nature calls; traffic enforcement went down overall, and specific to the Reston District Station, there was a decrease in DWI facilities in 2020.

Pirnat noted a drop in the number of robberies and burglaries. Robberies decreased from a reported 344 in 2019 to 314 in 2020.

While there were decreases, a number of increases occurred. According to Pirnat, in 2019, the County cited 455 weapon law violation calls compared to the upsurge of 518 in 2020. Motor vehicle thefts jumped from 863 in 2019 to 1,273 in 2020. “I believe that is related to the pandemic,” Pirnat said. Mental health calls ticked upwards slightly in 2020, to a total of 5000 calls compared to the previous year’s count at 4,715.

“I do think some of those extra calls for service were related to the fact that individuals weren’t able to get their normal service provider, contact that they had prior years, due to the pandemic (and) due to telehealth being implemented.”

The Value of Intergenerational Relationships

The lives of both youth and seniors are enhanced by meaningful connections.

By Marilyn Campbell
The Connection

Bringing seniors and youth together for meaningful relationships can be mutually beneficial. From structured and pleasurable programs that help foster such connections to regular telephone calls with a grandparent, the advantages that these interactions offer are many.

“Because of their life experiences, older adults can be a source of stability and emotional support and serve as mentors for children, particularly those who have a difficult home environment,” said Kenneth Bell, LCSW, a Burke, Va., therapist who specializes in gerontology. “Older adults can gain a sense of purpose and fulfillment in knowing that they’re impacting and nurturing those who will be adults in the future.”

“Intergenerational relationships are very important because they allow youth and seniors to appreciate the entire lifespan,” added Arlington marriage and family therapist Katie Ziskind. “Often, these intergenerational relationships need to be consciously constructed or well organized.”

Among the programs that offer opportunities for developing such relationships is The Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at George Mason University. The organization regularly facilitates intergenerational programs between OLLI Members and traditional university students.

“These programs benefit both groups to create community, foster valued learning, and eliminate mutual stereotypes,” said Jennifer Disano, Executive Director, Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at George Mason University. “Over the years, our organization has collaborated with several departments at the university for in-class projects, lectures, theatrical performances, research studies, mentoring, and career guidance.”

Youth Movement Against Alzheimer’s, (YMAA) a non-profit organization with a chapter at Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology, is made up of high school and college students who visit and spend time with seniors who are living with Alzheimer’s. While the visits have been postponed due to Covid-19, students use video conferencing and telephone calls to share meals with the elderly.

“This provides youth and older adults with a platform to connect to other generations in this time of crisis,” said Katherine Rose, Chief Executive Officer, YMAA.

Even without being part of a formal organization, consider having a regular, set time to have Zoom or phone calls with elderly friends and family members, suggests Stanley Eisenberg, Psy.D., a psychologist based in Bethesda. “Most kids understand the value of their relationships with seniors, and that holds true for seniors as well,” she said. “Therefore, both feel a special competence and pride in the special role they fill for each other.

One option for cultivating intergenerational relationships is through programs like those at the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) at George Mason University which include both OLLI members and traditional university students.

IN RESPONSE to a recent community meeting, Pirnat said the Station launched (on Jan. 4) its RESET initiative, the Reston Engagement and Safety Enforcement Team. Pirnat described it as a blended team composed of officers from patrol and bike, a detective and a community engagement officer to communicate with community members, building rapport and trust while increasing visibility and suppressing crime.

Pirnat recognized that police work is a changing profession. “We will continue to evolve. There’s always room for growth and improvement. Fairfax County prides itself on being a role model on how to do it right…Our goal has always been to use voluntary compliance and not use force.” Pirnat said chokeholds had not been used for 20 years and are prohibited. Their pursuit policy had been revisited.

Assistant Commander Lt. Mitchell provided an overview on the process to become a Fairfax County police officer, a position he described leading to “public trust” for individuals whose backgrounds are honorable, law-abiding and ethical. The Academy is a 6-month training period where individuals are taken from recruits to sworn police officers. They then serve in a probationary capacity under the direction of an FTI (Field Training Instructor), where the newly learned skills are given real-life experience in the community. Once they pass that, they become a senior officer.

The hour-long meeting is recorded and posted on Alcorn’s YouTube channel for public viewing.
