Burglaries Put Mount Vernon Business Owners on Alert

Smash and grab at three Hollin Hall places yields little for thieves.

After smashing the glass front door, the burglars that hit the Hollin Hall Shopping Center last Wednesday night decided to have a beer at the River Bend Bistro bar, and owner Caroline Ross hopes that’s their last call at her restaurant. “They drank half a beer and left it on the bar with their DNA,” she said.

The Bistro was one of three businesses the burglars robbed that night in a series of “smash and grab” style of break-ins that are rare in this neighborhood shopping center. The Hollin Hall Variety Store and The Pastry Shop were the other two places they hit in this Mount Vernon shopping center. “People have tried to break in back but never out front,” said the owner of the Variety Store.

The Fairfax County Police Department say these burglaries at the Hollin Hall Shopping Center are related to a series of overnight commercial burglaries throughout the county. In most cases, the front glass doors of the businesses have been broken, two to four people then enter the business taking cash and property before leaving in a vehicle, said FCPD. Detectives have determined the burglars mostly target restaurants, grocery stores, and minority owned businesses, although that wasn’t the case at Hollin Hall. While detectives continue to work these cases, crime prevention officers are reaching out to business owners to discuss safety tips and burglary prevention.

Cameras are one prevention measure that the Hollin Hall business owners are looking at after the burglaries. At The Variety Store, there was at least one camera, and the owner noted that he intends to install more in the future. The hardware store a couple of doors down does have a few cameras outside, and the burglars bypassed the store, but the cameras were rolling nonetheless. Ross at the Bistro saw the film after the fact, noting the car pulling up on the video and two men getting out. She was thinking of putting more cameras in, but has such good customers, one of them beat her to it. “One of our customers brought in an extra one last night,” she said.

In the police report, there were three ethnic restaurants in Annandale, two Vietnamese places in Falls Church, two middle eastern places in Springfield, and five other

DPC Food Drive

Donations collected for Alive!, ARHA.

Members of the Departmental Progressive Club held a food and gift card drive Feb. 20 to collect non-perishable items for local families. “We are open today to collect non-perishable dry goods for families in the City of Alexandria,” said DPC president Nelson Greene Jr. “The products we collected will be going to Alive! and ARHA and will be distributed soon for families in need.” The DPC held a similar food drive Feb. 13 but due to difficult weather conditions, decided to extend the drive another weekend.

“Most of the things we have here are staples that families can use or keep until they are needed,” Greene added. “That’s what we try to do in the community. Wherever we can contribute a little bit, we contribute.”

Controlling Gun Violence

After stumbling on assault weapons, lawmakers limit guns at polling places and government buildings.

By Michael Lee Pope
GAZETTE PACKET

Fulfilling their campaign promises to take action against gun violence, Democrats in the General Assembly are sending Gov. Ralph Northam several gun-violence prevention bills. Lawmakers are taking action to exclude guns at polling places and government buildings, creating new restrictions for people convicted of domestic violence and extending the time allowed for the State Police to conduct background checks. The bills this year come after several new laws were created last year, requiring universal background checks and allowing local governments to regulate firearms.

“Virginia is a leader now,” said Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security Brian Moran, who formerly represented Alexandria in the House of Delegates. “We’ve gone from dead last to first in terms of responsible gun-control legislation.”

One campaign promise Democrats have been unable to accomplish is limiting access to assault weapons and high-capacity magazines, deadly equipment that has been used to commit some of the worst mass shootings in American history. After Democrats seized control of the General Assembly last year, cracking down on assault weapons and high-capacity magazines was a top priority for the new majority. But Senate Democratic Leader Dick Saslaw ended up withdrawing his own bill on the issue, and Del. Mark Levine (D-45) was unable to get his bill through the Senate. This year, nobody even bothered introducing an assault-weapons bill.

“I don’t think it has enough votes to pass,” explained Levine. “It’s misunderstood because people oversate what it is because it’s really a high-capacity magazine ban more than an assault-weapons ban because we’re grandfathering in the assault weapons.”

SOME OF THE BILLS lawmakers are sending the governor are improvements to new laws that were passed last year. For example, one of the signature accomplishments of the 2020 General Assembly session was the law requiring universal background checks. This bill closed the gun-show loophole, it also created a new problem. If the State Police showing examples of how background checks taking longer than three days can lead to problems. Last year, the State Police logged 787 transactions that were denied in three days or less. However, he said, 235 background checks that were eventually rejected took longer than three days. The way the laws work now, that would be hundreds of purchases in 2020 that should have been denied but weren’t because of a process known as “default proceed.”

“So a purchase would have been allowed to go forward — 235 examples,” said Lopez. “To keep firearms out of the hands of dangerous individuals who pose a threat to themselves, their loved ones and the community at large, I believe that making this one word change is the best course of action for the Commonwealth.”

LAWMAKERS ARE ALSO haunted by the specter of the ghost guns, which are firearms created by 3D printers or assembled at home from kits. Because none of the new gun-violence measures passed last year would apply to these guns, some lawmakers are concerned that this is a class of firearms that would be able to evade all the laws designed to keep weapons out of the hands of people who shouldn’t have them. That’s why Del. Marcus Simon (D-53) introduced a bill to prohibit people buying kits and assembling ghost guns.

“It’s untraceable, and it really evades the entire system,” said Simon. “You build the gun yourself and it’s got no serial number. You require no background check. There was no age limit to purchase it.”

Although the original version of his bill outlawed all old guns without serial numbers, senators changed it to grandfather in all firearms that predated the new law. Advocates say they liked Simon’s original version better, but in the sausage-making factotum of the General Assembly this is the kind of compromise that’s often needed to get bills to the governor’s desk. Another bill that senators changed was one that allowed school boards to prohibit guns on school property, which senators amended to apply only to school administration buildings. Guns are already prohibited at schools, but the Loudoun County School Board determined they didn’t have the authority to ban firearms in the building where they meet. So they asked Del. Suhas Subramanyam (D-87) to introduce a bill granting that authority.

“I have no problem with administrative buildings, if they want to designate it as a gun-free zone just like we passed last year with city councils or county boards,” said Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34). “I do have a little bit of an issue if a school board just buys a random property as a vacant lot and then passes an ordinance saying it’s a gun-free zone.”

THE ALEXANDRIA DELEGATION is sending two gun bills to the governor, one to prohibit firearms at polling places and another to prevent people from bringing them into Capitol Square or other state government buildings.

Levine introduced the bill to prohibit guns at polling places and vote counting centers after two Virginia men were arrested after traveling to Pennsylvania to attack a vote-counting site. Gun enthusiasts dismissed the bill as creating yet another gun-free zone.

“This is to prevent intimidation?” asked firearms enthusiast Vincent Smith during a public hearing on Levine’s bill. “There are a large portion of this country who are intimidated by clowns, so much so that it has a name, it’s called ‘coulrophobia.’ So are you going to also outlaw clowns at polling places?”

Levine and state Sen. Adam Ebbin (D-30) both introduced bills prohibiting guns in Capitol Square, although the two bills are different enough to send them into a closed-door conference committee where lawmakers will resolve their differences in secret. Levine’s bill includes a larger geographic area, including major streets surrounding the Capitol, whereas the Ebbin version bans more weapons other than guns, including knives.

“People don’t need to arm themselves in Capitol Square,” said Ebbin. “They potentially risk more harm than good.”

ASSAULT WEAPONS remain a lingering concern for advocates of gun-violence prevention because of the prominent role they have played in so many of the mass shootings over the last 20 years. Levine says he would have introduced an assault weapons ban if lawmakers had not been limited to seven bills because of the limited duration of the session this year.

Using one of those seven slots for a bill that would have not been successful would have been a mistake, he said, especially considering he’s sending two gun bills to the governor this year.

“It’s a conundrum why the House and the Senate didn’t want to take this up,” responded Lori Haas, Virginia director of the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence. “Clearly there’s an appetite among the voters to regulate and ban semiautomatic assault-style rifles. Polling as recent as October showed overwhelming support for doing something about these people-killers.”
Two Dead Bald Eagles Found in Mount Vernon

BY GLENDA C. BOOTH

February 19, 2021

Several Mount Vernon area residents happened upon two dead bald eagles in the grass near a utility pole in the 7600 block of Elba Road on Feb. 17. "I walked by right after this happened," said Pam Williams. "It was a horrendous sight."

"The eagles’ talons were locked together and one of the bird’s tail feathers appeared to be burned," according to Katherine Edwards, Fairfax County’s Wildlife Management Specialist with the Police Department, whose animal protection officers were called to the scene. Edwards also said that a neighbor thought she heard a transformer blowing up shortly before the eagles were found. Edwards speculated that the eagles died by colliding with a power line while interlocked during what’s called "a talon-grappling display."

There are several reasons bald eagles engage in talon grappling, says the American Bald Eagle Foundation’s website, but human explanations of bird behavior are always risky, experts caution. It can occur between mated adults, unpaired adults, adult and immature eagles and immatures with immatures. Interlocking talons could be pair-bonding, aggression or play.

The Elba Road bald eagles were adult birds. Mature bald eagles have a white head and tail and dark brown body. Immatures, those under five years old, are mottled brown. (Mature golden eagles are dark brown with slightly lighter flight feathers and a golden nape. They are rare in northern Virginia, more likely seen in the Appalachian Mountains in the winter.)

Bald eagles typically mate for life. In the winter, they select a breeding territory and often return to their previous year’s nest. In Northern Virginia, in February, bald eagles typically are mating and incubating eggs. In 2020, the Dyke Marsh Wildlife Preserve had three active bald eagle nests. Fort Belvoir and Mason Neck also have had paired, nesting bald eagles for many years.

As for what this pair was doing, Edwards offers this possibility: "During the winter months, bald eagles are busy with activities associated with their breeding season, such as courtship or pair bonding with mates, establishing territories and building nests. Eagles will aggressively defend their territories from intruders. They are known to engage in talon-grappling and tumbling displays (also known as “talon-clasping” or “cartwheel displays”) that are thought to be involved with either territorial defense or courtship.

Although finding a pair of bald eagles with interlocked talons is certainly surprising and rarely observed, it is not an uncommon occurrence during eagles’ breeding season. Both male and female bald eagles may engage in locking their talons together in dramatic flight displays, whirling through the air and plummeting toward the ground. Bald eagles will usually go and separate before landfall; however, there are unfortunate instances where eagles may collide with other objects, such as trees or power lines or hit the ground before separating and may be killed in the process," Edwards offered.

Feathers Valued by Native Americans

Two federal laws, the Bald and Golden Eagle Act and the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, generally prohibit anyone from taking, possessing or transporting a bald eagle or golden eagle or their parts, nests or eggs without prior authorization from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS). Recognizing the religious and cultural significance of eagles to Native Americans, the laws do allow enrolled members of federally-recognized tribes to receive and possess eagle feathers and parts. FWS operates the National Eagle Repository in Commerce City, Colorado, to receive and provide Native Americans with eagle feathers for religious use.

The Fairfax County officers will send the deceased eagles to the Colorado repository. "Such a sad ending, but easier to bear knowing they have a second chance through a ceremonial function with Native Americans who respect them," Williams commented.

Feathers Valued by Native Americans

A Success Story

The bald eagle (Haliaeetus leucocephalus) was once in danger of extinction in the lower 48 states, with only 417 known nesting pairs in 1963. Scientists attributed their decline to DDT and other compounds in pesticides that moved up the food chain and made eggs shells to thin that chicks failed to hatch. In 1967, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) put the bird on the endangered species list which triggered some protection measures. In 1972, Congress banned DDT and eagle population numbers began to climb. In 2007, FWS removed it from the endangered species list because FWS’s website says, "their population is protected, healthy and growing."

businesses in the Mount Vernon area that ranged from a taco shop to Korean BBQ, and a sushi restaurant. There were a total of 15 businesses on the police report.

On Feb. 16, the Fairfax County Police Department hosted a virtual community meeting with Korean business owners and discussed forging new partnerships and increasing communication to combat burglaries in the area. A Crime Prevention Officer shared tips on how to protect businesses through “CPTED,” Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design. Many tips were shared during the meeting such as light and security camera installation, trimming back hedges in front of doors, and removing valuables before closing for the night. Most importantly, community members were asked to contact police if they are a victim of a burglary so officers and detectives can gather evidence that could lead to an arrest.

“People coming in from out of the area,” said center customer Steve Chaconas, who mentioned earlier bank robberies. The hairdressers at Hairvisions, were also concerned. “I’m scared now, they should have more cameras,” one of the hairdressers said.

FCPD Detectives are asking anyone with information regarding these incidents to call the Mason District Station Criminal Investigation Section at 703-256-8035.

ATTENTION

This market for sellers is the best I’ve seen in the 30 plus years I have been in Real Estate. Interest rates appear to have bottomed out, and coupled with low inventory we have an incredibly strong seller’s market. DMHO interest rates have only one place to go now, and that is up. Once that starts the initial response from buyers who have been sitting on the fence, will be to jump in to buy and this will create an even stronger MELT UP for sellers’ prices. At some point, however, the market will cret while interest rates continue to climb and housing demand will then slow down. If you are considering selling, call me NOW and I will do a market analysis and help you maximize probably the biggest investment in your life. Let me put my 30 plus years of experience to work for you. Stay safe and healthy. Rex Reiley

Bringing Virginia into the Light
Abolishing the death penalty, steps to end Jim-Crow era ban on felony voting and more recent ban on gay marriage.

By Sen. Scott Surovell

he last week of the 2021 General Assembly Session has arrived and it will prove to be an exciting time with many big issues on the agenda.

In even years, the process of amending the Constitution of Virginia typically begins. Sen. Adam Ebin and Del. Mark Sickles’ legislation repealing the 2006 gay marriage ban from our constitution will have a final vote. We are also negotiating an amendment to remove Virginia’s Jim Crow Era felony voting prohibition from the Constitution and replacing it with an affirmative right to vote.

We will also be taking up my legislation abolishing capital punishment on Monday.

This past week we announced our agreement on my legislation to reform Virginia’s expulsion and rules prohibiting the sealing of criminal convictions. Virginia is one of only nine states in America that do not allow people to seal misdemeanor convictions and one of only fourteen that do not allow the sealing of felony convictions.

My legislative proposal is to provide all Virginians with a right of appeal in all civil and criminal cases that are harmful or potentially harmful to them. This will prove to be an exciting time with many big issues on the agenda.

The House of Delegates passed my legislation creating a process for most misdemeanors and felonies, allows access to records for sensitive persons, and also reduces barriers to accessing the process by providing counsel. It reduces procedural hurdles, and creates a process for automatic expungement after seven years of good behavior. This legislation makes it clear that the county can restrict subdivision and require public access as part of any historic zoning district over River Farm. I am hopeful that the Court of Appeals will prove to be an exciting time with many big issues on the agenda.

Indeed, I was amended once before entering into contracts for their behavior from the public and companies who choose to allow their employees to litigate these matters in court are at a strategic disadvantage. I will try again next year.

The negotiations to work on marijuana legalization will start this week. Senator Adam Ebin is carrying the legislation, Delegate Paul Krizek spent significant time vetting the legislation. The Senate has taken the position that we need more time to study the bill to get legalization done correctly while the House of Delegates would like to move forward this year. We have a large chasm to bridge.

Finally, my committee’s proposal would work to resolve our competing budgets. Last week, Governor Northam announced that revenues were $750 million higher than expected, but still $3 billion lower when the budgets were originally built before the pandemic. Please email me at scottsurovell.org if you have any difficulty getting time with many big issues on the agenda.

”My Journey to Becoming a Law”

By HB 2030 (As told to Del. Paul Krizek)

Today’s the day! Today’s the second to last step before I become a law. I may have said this yesterday as well, but today really is the day.

Hello, my name is House Bill 2030, and I started as a bill to regulate the outside use of neonicotinoid pesticides — chemicals that are harmful or potentially harmful to pollinating insects. It has been an incredibly exciting, albeit short, life for me. I was dreamed up a few months ago, when suburban beekeepers in Fairfax County asked my patron, Delegate Paul Krizek, for help protecting their hives. It is not uncommon for suburban beekeepers to have a hive die off when someone nearby uses a neonicotinoid pesticide outside in a nearby garden. He and his staff worked very hard, talking to experts, researching the issues, and finding allies, to make me the absolute best version of myself to prepare for the arduous passage through the General Assembly. Delegate Krizek met with so many people about me; from beekeepers across the state, the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (VDACS), to pesticide companies, wineries, farmers, lawn care professionals, the Virginia Association of Counties, the Treasured Wood Council, and the people who work in the forestry service, and so many others.

After I was first introduced by the Delegate, I went straight to the House Agriculture, Chesapeake and Natural Resources subcommittee early one morning, where delegates, lobbyists, stakeholders and the general public came to talk about me! They discussed the benefits and drawbacks of my passage into law. Delegate Krizek and his colleagues listened to the people who presented their cases, including the beekeeper from the Mount Vernon estate and the delegate’s beekeeper constituent who asked for me in the first place.

So many didn’t seem to like me, and in order to move forward, there in the subcommittee, they made multiple edits to me. With those changes made, I passed the subcommittee, but even with all those changes, it was decided that I should go back to the subcommittee one more time the following week for even more discussion and even more amendments.

Indeed, I was amended once more, and started to look like a completely different bill than when I started my journey. No longer was I a ban on the pesticide, but I was a notification bill that would require beekeepers to be notified when spraying would be taking place nearby. After that, I went to the full Agriculture committee where I was voted upon with 19 for and just 3 against. Things were looking up for me! Then, it was on to the House floor where delegates from both parties decided that I would become a law. I may have been the second to last step before I became a law. I may have been the second to last step before I became a law.

“My heart belongs with the ferals, strays, and abandoned cats that deserve proper care from humans.”

—Arlandria feral cat colony volunteer Devon Cain

For several years, Cain was among dozens of volunteers to feed and care for the feral colony in Arlandria. She left the area in 2018 but still stays involved through donations of artwork to raise money to support the feral cats.

“I became involved in March of 2013 and helped a trapper TNR [trap, neuter, release] the cats,” Cain said. “Many of the cats had previously been treated but the history of the colony isn’t clear. Supposedly it was started by an employee of a local business in the area.”

Despite community support, Cain chooses not to disclose the location of the colony to protect the cats. Currently, there are 17 volunteers caring for the Arlandria colony, which varies in number at any given time.

“The original cats were Boo, Rex, Reggie, Mosby, Matty, Le Nez, the two Radleys, and Little G,” Cain said.

“Sadly, we have lost all but three of the cats. One had to be euthanized due to chest cancer, we found the body of one at the site, and the rest just disappeared.”

Over the years, Cain and other volunteers purchased food and set up cat shelters at their own expense.

“After clearing the area of debris, I began creating a home for the cats,” Cain said. “I pur-pur-poses food and set up cat shelters at their own expense.”

Word of mouth has allowed the group to expand its support base, both with volunteers and local businesses.

“One nearby business in particular has been outstanding in its support for the colony,” Cain said. “They have allowed caretakers to set up tables to sell my artwork, talk with people about the cats and to collect donations. We have a large display board with pictures of the cats and the site, and pertinent information about feral or community cats.

Cain urges everyone to support organizations that care for feral colonies, particularly those that provide TNR services. “The plight of feral and abandoned cats is of great concern to me,” Cain said. “If a stray or abandoned cat is able to join a feral cat colony and they are not neutered, their offspring will grow up feral. But if their kittens are trapped early enough – approximately 8-12 weeks old – they can be socialized and adopted.

Since leaving the area, volunteer Ginny Richards has become the colony’s lead volunteer. “There is so much good about what we do,” said Richards. “The long-term faithfulness of our volunteers means that on any given day, there are cats who don’t need to worry about how they are going to eat.”

Donations to the Arlandria feral cat colony may be sent to Richards via her email: ginnyrmail@aol.com.
Rotary Club of Mount Vernon, VA

The Mount Vernon Rotary Club is initiating the “You Make a Difference Award” to support community service by organizations in the Mount Vernon area.

Specifically, the purpose of the Mount Vernon Rotary “You Make A Difference” Award is to:
1) Recognize individuals and organizations who support service to others
2) Support community service within the Mount Vernon area

This local support is consistent with the Rotary International Motto: “Service Above Self.”

A single award and associated grant of $1,000 will be presented once a year. The goal is to recognize a single individual who sustains community service and to contribute financial support to keep that service continuing.

Nominations will be accepted until noon on March 31, 2021. To receive a nomination form or more information, email rcmva@gmail.com

Rotary is where neighbors, friends, and problem-solvers share ideas, join leaders, and take action to create lasting change. Visit www.rotary.org for more information.

Flying Squirrels, Our Nocturnal Neighbors

By Glenda C. Booth
Mount Vernon Gazette

A round dusk or dawn, high up in the tree canopy, keen observers might spot a scurry. What’s a scurry? A scurry is a group of flying squirrels (Glaucomys Volans), nocturnal, arboreal mammals, one of the many fascinating facts that captivated 89 attendees at the Feb. 17 Zoom meeting of the Friends of Dyke Marsh.

Naturalist Kim Young, from Fairfax County Park Authority’s Hidden Oaks Nature Center, told the group that flying squirrels, members of the rodent family, weigh around 2.5 ounces, about the same as a cellphone, and are eight inches long, with their tail being from a third to a half of that length. With gray-brown fur, they easily camouflage against tree trunks. They have a white belly and large eyes in proportion to their bodies. They can walk upside down and “stamp their feet in a war dance” if they sense a predator nearby, Young said.

Young also encouraged her audience to plant native plants and trees, keep cats indoors and provide roosting boxes. These squirrels eat nuts in the fall and winter and store nuts in nests, cracks, cavities and tree forks, caches with up to 15,000 nuts in a season. A telltale sign of flying squirrels is the acorn debris they leave behind. Flying squirrels make a round oval hole in the acorn when they probe for nutmeat and beetle larvae, unlike other rodents that completely destroy acorns. “They make a smooth cut with no jagged edges,” Young said. They are omnivores and also eat berries, insects, fungi, bird eggs, slugs, snails, carrion and tree sap. Their most common predators are owls, feral cats and hawks.

Young clarified. They are expert gliders and use the membrane, the patagium, between their ribs and ankles that in effect forms a parachute. When they want to travel, using their powerful hind feet, they launch and spread this extendable cartilage. They can cover 150 feet in a single glide and one was documented doing a 250-foot glide, almost a football field length. Their flight is not powered flight, which involves flapping, like that of birds, insects and bats. Their leaps can reach speeds up to 20 miles per hour.

Fairfax County’s FY 2022 Budget Plan

Focuses resources in targeted areas.

By Mercia Hobson
The Connection

“We have done through this last year in a really successful way,” said Chair Bryan Hill. On Feb. 23, Hill presented his FY2022 Budget Plan to the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. The fiscal year will run from July 1, 2021, through June 30, 2022. The FY2022 Advertised Budget is not a done deal; it is the county executive’s recommendation. The final FY2022 Adopted Budget will happen May 4 after what Chairman Jeff McKay called “robust conversations with the community in order to prioritize funding.”

Hill’s proposed plan builds on the County’s success to utilize federal stimulus funds, most notably the $200.2 million CARES Act Coronavirus Relief Fund.

“I THINK IT’S CLEAR that we won’t be able to do everything we want to, just like our residents and businesses can’t in these unprecedented times,” said Chairman McKay. “And obviously, we wish that we had better certainty about what the year ahead is going to look like, but clearly, nobody does... It’s prudent for us to plan for this year to continue to be sply and to be able to pivot and respond to what’s happening just as we have done through this last year in a really successful way.”

Hill’s recommendation includes reducing the Real Estate Tax rate by one cent, bringing the rate from $1.15 to $1.14 per $100 of assessed value. In Hill’s Message to the Chairman and Board, he said, “I recognize that many of our homeowners may be struggling... Fairfax County’s unemployment rate stands at 4.4 percent – far greater than the 1.9 percent we saw one year ago.”

According to Hill, with the proposed reduction in the Real Estate Tax rate, additional revenue available to the County for FY 2022 is $42.23 million – an increase of only 1.5 percent over the current FY 2021 estimate.

Highlighting other Advertised Budget areas, it recommends a $20 million unappropriated reserve for economic recovery. It includes an overall increase for County and Schools of only 0.55 percent, excluding reserves. The plan provides a $14.13 million increase over the FY2021 for School Operating, far short of the School Board’s approved request on February 18 of $104.40 million additional.

No funding is allocated for employee pay increases in FY22. While the Budget does not make broad investments in pre-COVID goals proposed last year, resources are recommended to focus on more targeted areas. According to Hill, they are “modest investments” in Board and community priorities, such as expanding funding for criminal justice programs and mental health and addiction treatment. Examples are public safety staffing, Diversion First, opioid use prevention efforts, and environmental initiatives. Previously approved initiatives, such as body-worn cameras and health department positions funded initially with stimulus funds, are proposed to include baseline funding. An increase of 109 positions is proposed primarily for the continuation of previous initiatives and new facilities.

Concurrent with the Budget’s release, Hill made available a revised draft of the Countywide Strategic Plan at www.fairfaxcounty.gov/strategicplan for consideration by the Board and our residents. Looking ahead, the Board will advertise a tax rate at its March 9 meeting. Various district meetings will occur in February and March, and the Board will hold public hearings from April 13-15. McKay said that for FY20-22, the County expected revenue loss to approach $300 million to the General Fund. He said that while appreciative of prior stimulus money and hoped additional stimulus money was on its way to the County, “hope is not really what you base a budget on; it’s reality.”

Vice Chairman Penny Gross (D-Mason District) discussed non-residential real estate. The amount of empty office space increased to 18.5 million square feet out of 119.2 million square feet. “It does tell me that we need to go gangbusters on our repurposing of vacant buildings,” Gross said. Supervisor James Walkinshaw (D-Braddock) said that Fairfax County is one of the thousands of jurisdictions across the county that Congress members watch, which is why he appreciated the prudent proposal Hill released. “I think if we had a budget proposal that showed us with a lot of new spending initiatives or dramatic pay increases, it would have made our job more difficult as we’re making the necessary case for additional federal support for state and local governments at this point.”

Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield) said he hoped to see a “flat tax bill,” especially given the pandemic.

I expect things, especially in the commercial real estate world, will probably get a lot worse next year. But this Budget still represents a 3.4% tax increase on our residents ... I believe we have a lot of work to do.”

“My Journey To Becoming A Law”

would make the lives of Virginians (and Virginia’s pollinators) better if I was made into a law. But, that’s only the first half of my tenurous journey to becoming a law.

After passing the House, I went to the Senate committee on Ag- riculture. I underwent a further transformation there. I was previ- ously a bill to be incorporated into the Virginia code, but the senators believed I should be amended to become a limiting efficient “section 1” bill, which would not add me to the code. I was so disappoint- ed. The poor bees would barely be protected at all.

From there, I went to the Senate floor, where I was “passed by for the day” on multiple days. It was looking grim indeed. But today the Senate rejected my committee sub- stantive on the floor, and decided to accept a floor substitute that turns me into a study bill to improve communication between beekeepers and farmers to further reduce the risk to pollinators from neonicotinoid pesticides. After the Senate accepted my newest substanti- ate, they voted to pass me and send me on my merry way.

What happens next? I will go back to the House, where delegates will vote on the newly amended me. The patron, Delegate Crizkez, can either ask the House to reject the Senate substitutes or accept them. If they are rejected by the House, I will be sent to a conference com- mittee with a few legisla- tors from both the House and Senate to decide on my version. If I have survived this harrowing journey, I’m sure I’ll be able to meet Governor Northam soon and do my best to protect our pollinators.
