Enduring dangerously high temperatures, Marymount University student Bader Hakami and biology professor Susan Agolini spent a day working as community scientists. The collected data that will help locate northern Virginia's heat islands, urban areas that experience higher temperatures than suburban neighborhoods.

Volunteers from Northern Virginia, including students, faculty and representatives from EcoAction Arlington and the Virginia Department of Forestry, recorded air temperatures and humidity using handheld thermal sensors. Their work was part of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges' (VFIC) Heat Watch project.

"The information that we gather can better inform policymakers and urban planners as they allocate funding for green spaces and invest in urban designs that can minimize the heat islands," said Susan Agolini, Ph.D. Assistant Professor of Biology, Marymount University.

of their commitment to protecting the environment.

"I participated in 'Heat Watch' because I wanted to give back to the community," said Bader Hakami, a nursing student at Marymount. "I learned how the heat-mapping process is conducted and most importantly how the information might be put to good use for the environment."

July 2021 was the world's hottest month ever recorded, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Centers for Environmental Information. 'Heat Watch' was conducted on July 15.

Previous VFIC collections have revealed temperature differences as significant as 16 degrees between the coolest and hottest areas. Heat islands are often found in low-income communities, says Agolini.

Poor housing conditions including lack of air conditioning and small living spaces put these communities in danger of heat-related illnesses and deaths.

"Being aware of these heat islands can also help health care providers and advocates know which areas, and therefore populations, are going to be most susceptible to heat-related health issues," she said.

Angelino estimates that the group will be able to identify heat island within the next eight weeks.

County families and educators discuss COVID-19 School Year 2021-22.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

The first day of the much anticipated, in-person return to school for SY2021-22 looms for many families, friends, and educators in Fairfax County's independent, public and home-based education systems. The question of whether to mask up or not is now off the table given State Health Commissioner, M. Norman Oliver, MD, MA pursuant to §§ 32.1-13 and 32.1-20 of the Code of Virginia, issued a mandate in the form of public health order. He cited that the public health emergency due to COVID-19 continued to exist and required all individuals aged two and older to wear masks when indoors at public and private K-12 schools to inhibit the spread of the virus, as recommended and described by the CDC. Exceptions were noted in the Order.

Educators can now focus on student mental health, learning loss, credit recovery, and achievement gap mitigation, but only if learning does not unhinge due to COVID-19. Virginia Department of Health stated on its website, "Vaccination is the most important public health action to end the pandemic."

The Connection opened a discussion about the vaccine and education to those who walk the front line, educators, families, and alumni, to gain their insights while balancing comments with data and science.

RETIREDCPS TEACHER Ron Goad urged others to get vaccinated. He was "appalled to know" some of his friends were vaccine-hesitant or refused to get it. He hoped that COVID vaccines for students would be the crucial panacea to keep schools open as the virus bears down in a fourth wave forecasted to increase in Fairfax County by the CDC.

Goad recalled the Salk polio vaccine [1955], developed with March of Dimes funding. "I was just a little boy. My parents were very smart; they didn't question science. I remember seeing a sign on the back of a hearse that said, 'Get your shot or choose your plot...'. I think we've been too cordial and polite to allow foolishness to have a voice."

Karen F. (last name withheld upon request) is a retired FCPS teacher too. Like Goad, she recalled the Polio vaccine. "I was a tiny girl when Polio vaccines were required of all. I know my parents were married happier knowing I was not going to get Polio. Our freedoms come with responsibilities as well as rights. Given the threat of this pandemic, I think our responsibility to each other is greater than our individual rights just and we are committed to continuing to do our part to stay safe and help others around us in this pandemic," Kohler said.

QUESTIONS have been raised about actions by wealthier countries, like the U.S. stockpiling vaccines and wondering if they are doing enough globally to vaccinate individuals in poorer countries. Mamta Murthi, World Bank's Vice President for Human Development, said Aug. 3 from her Washington D.C. home in a podcast,

"The situation that we see right now is absolutely unacceptable because a large part of the world remains unvaccinated, and this is a danger for all of us... We could be in a situation where the pandemic is prolonged... We also run the danger of the emergence of mutations as the pandemic is prolonged and the virus circulates amongst newer populations. And this means that we are all at danger of being victim to a new mutation that actually escapes the immunity that is being provided by vaccines."

Source: Mamta Murthi (@MamtaMurthi) / Twitter.

Finally, there is the question about additional FDA-approved and emergency use drugs for those who get COVID, no matter if they were unvaccinated or the virus broke through. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved only one drug treatment for COVID-19, the antiviral drug Veklury (remdesivir) for adults and certain pediatric patients with COVID-19 who are sick enough to need hospitalization. The FDA also issued Emergency Use Authorizations for several monoclonal antibody treatments for COVID-19 to treat mild or moderate COVID-19 in adults and pediatric patients, among them REGEN-COV for adults and pediatrics, according to FDA U.S. Food & Drug Administration.

Abdul Rashid Abdullah of Herndon said that parents should be vaccinated in addition to their children if they wished to send their children to school. "You have to push for the entire household to be vaccinated; otherwise, breakthrough infections can and will occur. We have to get totally ahead of this virus. We either are all out Patriots and love our country, our children, and our communities and are ready to do whatever is necessary to protect them or not," he said. As a U.S. Army Veteran, Abdullah took his oath seriously when he said he would protect against 'All enemies', both foreign and domestic. "And this virus is yet another enemy. Just like the ignorance that we're combating regarding it," he said.

No matter the type of schooling students in Fairfax County attend, public, independent, home-based, and other, at the beginning of SY2021-22 remember: "We are a community connected. Stay strong. This too will pass."

CDC has capped the percent of population coverage metrics at 99.9%. These metrics could be greater than 99.9% for multiple reasons, including census denominator data not including all individuals that currently reside in the county (e.g., part time residents) or potential data reporting errors. Estimates may change as new data are made available.

Karen does not see the vaccine as an option. She has imagined the past two years through teachers' eyes. "As a friend of many FCPS students' parents, I have seen their struggles, too. I think I can get behind the plans for students to be vaccinated as a requirement," she said.

FCPS alumnus K. H. (name withheld upon request) is an uncle to students preschool to high school-aged, across the learning spectrum from homeschool, to private school to public school. K.H. said that he trusted the effectiveness of vaccines, that they would protect him and others against COVID-19 breakthrough as he works in Fairfax County. However, he held concern for his nieces, nephews, and all those students under 12 years of age. "I am concerned about the potential for outbreaks among children too young to get it [the vaccine], and if schools will be able to effectively control the spread while still giving children a worthwhile education," he said.

As the Delta and Lambda variants infect quicker and burn through the lungs faster, questions arise about the vaccine effectiveness. A preprint study found that the Pfizer vaccine during the Minnesota Delta variant prevalence in July 2021 showed a "more pronounced reduction in effectiveness" at 42 percent effective in the Mayo Clinic Health System. However, further evaluation in dosing and vaccine composition was warranted, the study said.

One person who responded sees COVID in a brutal light. She is a COVID-19 ground zero case, infected in March 2020. Taralyn Tharp Kohler of Reston, parent of a high school and college student, is "still experiencing long hauler symptoms including no taste and smell for over a year and a half."

"I do not wish on anyone what I've experienced. I want to trust that the vaccines will provide protection against Covid-19 and variants. My family has been vaccinated,

Application Drought for McLean CBC, No Inquiries

Zoning and land use attorney discusses project challenges.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Developers may be working quietly on plans or assembling parcels for future development in downtown McLean. Still, the near two-month-old Comprehensive Plan Amendment for the McLean Community Business Center, an approximately 230-acre area centered around the intersection of Chain Bridge Road and Old Dominion Drive has no one apparently filing.

“My office has received inquiries about the new plan amendment from some property owners, but I haven’t been approached by anyone considering filing an application at this time,” said Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville District), who represents McLean.

On June 22, the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors adopted the Planning Commission’s Plan Amendment (PA) 2018-II-M1 Comprehensive Plan Guidance for the McLean Community Business Center (CBC). During the public hearing the day of the vote, some individuals voiced concern, including Kim Dorgan, Chair of the McLean Task Force. “I really hope that what you approve today is enough to encourage investment in McLean,” said Dorgan.

“Doing nothing in McLean is not an option,” said Foust. “Although support for plans obviously is not unanimous, it has something for almost everyone.”

WEEKS AFTER the amendment’s approval, the Connection interviewed Evan Pritchard, partner at Venable LLP in Tysons to determine what he sees happening with clients after the changes to the comprehensive plan. Pritchard said he had come forward early in the amendment process with examples of developments. As a zoning and land use attorney, Pritchard focuses on approvals for developers and landowners in jurisdictions throughout Northern Virginia, including Fairfax County. He was named one of Virginia Business’ 2017 “Legal Elite” for Real Estate and Land Use.

The Connection asked Pritchard if the adopted comprehensive plan for the CBC was good enough to pull in developers. “That’s a tough one to answer. I’d say that it’s definitely a big open question as to whether the plan offers enough height and density to incentivize somebody to do the big development that people are looking for for the three-quarter-acre park,” Pritchard said. “Many things have to go right for a big development to move forward,” he added.

Pritchard forecasted that, more than likely, the first redevelopment movement would be elsewhere in the CBC. Pritchard qualified his statement by saying that he thought Dorgan and Foust were aware where planners wanted Central Park, many owners would need to cooperate, or a party would have to come along “and assemble.” “Someone’s going to have to consolidate a lot of lots to have the development that’s big enough to provide the public park...One person could make this very difficult.”

The second roadblock that may not be publicly known is that a developer in the Center Zone would not use wood framing once they planned to go above seven stories. With ten-story builds, the maximum heights allowed in the Center Zone, developers would have to build with steel construction in most cases, and that’s more expensive, according to Pritchard.

“You can’t go any higher than ten stories, so there’s a limit to how much you can cover those costs with a large building... I have clients wrestle with it all the time.

They often conclude, is it more financially feasible for me to build a six or seven-story wood-frame building than it is for me to build a ten-story building because that will cost much more to develop... It’s not worth the additional costs,” said Pritchard.

ANOTHER CONCERN is the recent uptick in the cost of materials and shortage of labor in the construction trades. “In the last few years, it’s gotten worse and during the pandemic,” Pritchard said. And while the cost of things like lumber has come down “a little bit, historically, they’re still high.”

Pritchard said all of this combines to make it challenging to see any way for a big project with a park moving forward anytime soon. “You might see smaller projects, further from the center at seven and five stories, move forward there. But I think overall, it’s going to be a pretty slow evolution for McLean.”

Pritchard believed that this was not going to be what Supervisor Foust and others in the community initially hoped for the McLean Business Center. “I don’t think this is going to be a big revolutionary change the way Tysons plan was when it was adopted several years ago with the Silver Line.... They were playing with a lot more density....This plan is a good compromise, but I don’t think it’s going to be a watershed moment for McLean, unfortunately,” said Pritchard. “I think you’re likely to see little things here and there in the next few years, in the edge zone, and in the center zone that’s outside of that.”

According to Pritchard, if a client came forward to him, his first steps would be to meet with staff and the supervisors, then come up with a concept plan that is in conformance with the newly adopted plan. “Then, assuming we get a warm reception, we’d start working on an application and working on detailed plans. We would file a rezoning application to achieve the heights that are recommended... and file the application. That would include some development plans showing what was in mind.” Pritchard believed it would be a 9-12 month approval process to get the properties rezoned and approval from the Board of Supervisors to move forward.

Asked if he had seen anyone showing interest in the plan amendment, Pritchard said, “I have not.” However, he did have one client pleased with the plan because of the long-term implications for his property. Another was planning to redevelop their property anyway and was not affected by it. According to Pritchard, he had another client in the Edge Zone who he said would have “a very tough time.”

“They want to redevelop their property, but they’re going to have a very hard time moving forward. I told them that they probably need to wait because I don’t think what they want to do is feasible under the plan right now,” said Pritchard. He explained the business was performing and generating revenue. To justify stopping that revenue, tearing down, and redeveloping, they need to have a level of density that the adopted plan doesn’t support.

'Music in the Gardens' Opens in September

Spotlighting women composers as Virginia Chamber Orchestra performs in the natural beauty of Meadowlark Botanical Gardens.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

Take In the stunning Korean Bell Garden located in Northern Virginia's Meadowlark Botanical Gardens as the flawless backdrop to the Virginia Chamber Orchestra's (VCO) ensembles latest outdoor series of live concerts.

Continuing its partnership with Meadowlark Botanical Gardens, a varied line-up of VCO ensembles will provide live music with the dramatic Korean Bell of Peace and Harmony as a visual focal point in a September series of Sunday afternoon concerts. The outdoor concerts will be performed in a socially distancing environment in recognition of ongoing COVID-19 health and safety guidance from the CDC, Commonwealth of Virginia and Fairfax County.

The four September Sunday afternoon concerts will highlight works of women composers who span the centuries and celebrate works of composers such as Mozart, Boyce, Borodin, Dvorak and Paganini and African-American composer William Grant Still.

Women composers to be performed include Austrian Maria Theresa von Paradis (1759-1824) who was blind from a very early age. As a composer and pianist she toured Europe. It is reported that Mozart even composed a piano concerto for her. A VCO string quartet will perform von Paradis' "Sicilienne" on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 5, 2021. The program also includes compositions by Mozart, Kivrak, Still and Dvorak.

Contemporary American composer Mary Coy Whitmore's "Scuttles for Solo Viola" will be performed on Sunday, Sept. 12.

Whitmore will be present at the concert to talk about her piece "Scuttles for Solo Viola" to be performed by Osman Kivrak, the VCO's Principal Violist. The concert will include a VCO String Trio playing Mozart, Wanhall, Corelli and Telemann.

The Sept. 19 concert highlights woodwinds. British-American

Rebecca Clarke's (1886-1979) "Pastoral for Viola and Clarinet" will be performed. Music by Mozart, Boyce and Ibert will also be played. A VCO guitar quintet is the focus on Sept. 26 with music from the late Turkish composer Kevser Hanim titled "Nihavend Longa for Viola and Guitar." The guitar centered concert will also highlight Mozart, Borodin, Paganini and Boccherini.

VCO announced as well that VCO Maestro David Grandis was awarded an International Conducting Prize. Grandis, additionally Director of Orchestras at the College of William and Mary, is one of only three prize winners in the

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS ON BICYCLE PEDESTRIAN BRIDGE
Work is underway to build a bicycle and pedestrian bridge and shared-use path in the vicinity of Route 123 and I-495 (Capital Beltway) to improve bicycle and pedestrian safety and connectivity in the Tysons area, according to the Virginia Department of Transportation. The new bicycle and pedestrian bridge over I-495 will be built along with a 10-foot-wide shared-use path from Tysons One Place and Fashion Boulevard to Old Meadow Road and Provincial Drive via the bridge. Surveying and clearing work is scheduled to occur over the next few weeks. The $12.3 million project is financed with federal, state and local funding. The project is scheduled for completion in summer 2022.

FREE CYBER TRAINING
The Virginia Cyber Skills Academies (VCSA) is a state-sponsored training program for NOVA residents financially impacted by COVID-19 that provides free cyber training to residents ready to start or boost a career in cyber. VCSA was recently launched to help current cybersecurity professionals with upskilling and those wanting to enter the sought after cybersecurity field with reskilling. The program is only open to citizens who are stationed in or permanent residents of Northern Virginia and is only funded for this year, so applicants should apply as soon as possible. Applicants can earn certifications from the SANS Institute, a highly regarded and well-recognized cybersecurity learning platform. Visit the VCSA website at www.vacyberskills.com.

Hopping and Hoping

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As I approach my four-week anniversary of "the burning," I do so with cautious optimism that one day soon, I'll be walking upright once again and doing so without the assistance of my walker. No more leaning over at the waist to grab the walker's waist-high grab bars. No more pulling/pushing myself up as I try to gain leverage in order to balance my weight so as not to fall backwards or to the side. And finally, once standing, no more hopping on my right foot as I favor the left; the location where the podiatrist pointed to and said at our last appointment: "You can see where that is ground zero;" meaning, the worst of the burn. And four weeks later, 'ground zero' is still ultra sensitive and not bearing too much weight. The emergency room doctor had said the healing will "likely take weeks, not months." And four-plus weeks into my recovery, I would say her assessment/prediction was spot on. But I'm not there yet. I'm somewhat better than I have been, but I'm still not ready to solo. Although I did drive for the first time yesterday. It was no problem (my driving foot is my right foot so pressing on the pedals was not the least bit painful. However, if there had been a clutch involved, I wouldn't have been up to driving). Still, success, and a feeling of independence once again.

Fortunately, the clown shoes that the local emergency room provided finally are proving to be useful. The strappy, cushiony, black, open-toe sandals with the thick white soles I'm now wearing all day were designed to give the foot breathing room along with some support. However, in the early weeks following "the burning," when I placed my foot in the sandal, the insole felt rough as if it were tearing up the bottoms of my feet, exactly where the second degree burns had occurred. Since it seemed like it was hindering my recovery, I rarely wore them and instead put on thick socks (over the bandages lined with medication) and walked around on the heels of my feet while attempting to keep the balls of my feet (where the burns were) elevated and off the floor. It enabled me to mostly get around, but now, being able to wear the sandals, I'm much more ambulatory.

And so it finally feels as if the worm has turned, as they say. The sole on my right foot is exhibiting all the proper signs of new skin having formed and is a few days away, according to my nurse-wife, Dina (who has been bandaging my feet up to three times daily since "the burning") of returning to its pre-burned status. As such, I am nearly able to put all my weight on my right foot as necessary as I continue to favor the "ground-zero" left foot. However, if I ever inadvertently place my full weight on my left foot, I am transported emotionally back to July 17 when I first stepped on that hot pavement. I don't exactly see stars, but I certainly feel pain until I lift up that left foot and start to hop on my right. Oh, what a relief that is, as I attempt to retrieve my bearings and find some place to sit, immediately.

That being said, I am most definitely on the mend. Getting on my feet, still with the aid of my walker, doesn't conjure the same fear and loathing and pain as it once did. Urges to visit the bathroom are no longer delayed as much as possible. Nor are they fraught with anxiety and exasperation concerning the effort required to make the short walk to water the closet, especially in the middle of the night when the house is dark. But today, I can just about see the future (and a return to normal/independence) which may include a visit to close friends who live in Ocean City, Maryland, a k a the beach. And when I do, I'll certainly be upright and walking normally, but I won't ever be barefoot, inside or out. I can't take any chances. As slow as my recovery has been, I don't suppose its pace has anything to do with my underlying medical condition: thyroid cancer. Nevertheless, I don't see any benefit to stressing my immune system anymore than is absolutely necessary. It already has more than enough to do attempting to keep the cancer in check.
