Naturalization Ceremony Held in the Town of Vienna

Their stories are now our stories, to be woven into the fabric of the United States of America.

Fifteen naturalization candidates from Afghanistan to Bolivia, Albania to Ghana, Nepal to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and nine other countries, assembled in the community center in the Town of Vienna, Va., two days before the 4th of July. Each had prepared to take the Oath of Allegiance to the United States of America and become citizens. They had studied hard and were ready to declare they would “support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic” ... so help them, God.

The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services held its first-ever naturalization ceremony in the Town of Vienna on Saturday, July 2, as part of the town’s Liberty Amendments Month, celebrating the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 19th amendments to the U.S. Constitution. When the 14th Amendment was passed in 1868, it gave citizenship to everyone born or naturalized in the United States, including formerly enslaved people. It also said, among other things, that all citizens would get “equal protection of the law.”

Linda Colbert, mayor of the Town of Vienna welcomed the 15 candidates as their families, friends, and distinguished guests, among them Del. Mark Keam (D-35) and Supervisor Walter Alcorn (D-Hunter Mill).

“This is a very significant day in your lives, and it marks a change in your life going forward as a new citizen of the United States of America,” Colbert said. “Naturalized citizens are an important piece of the fabric of our country. You bring many talents and unique qualities that shape the character of our nation.”

Girl Scout Troops 50157 and 1489 enter the auditorium at the Vienna Community Center to present the colors. (Far left) Fairfax County Board Supervisor Walter Alcorn (D-Hunter Mill) and his wife, Kristina, look on.

Colbert urged the candidates to stay informed nationally and locally, recognize and exercise their right to vote, and, wherever they lived, express their ideas at town hall meetings. “Volunteer in an organization and run for public office. Every community needs to hear from its citizens, and it needs a broad range of people with different backgrounds and ideas,” Colbert said.

Max Carroll of the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) presented the candidates and recommended that they be administered the Oath of Allegiance, admitting them to United States citizenship.

“Raise your right hand and you will be repeating after me,” said Kimberley Zantonni, Washington Field Office Director, USCIS in Fairfax. “I hereby declare, on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty ... I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic ...”

Erosion of Confidence

The former president should be charged with treason.

BY DEL. KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM

I am an upbeat guy. I try to see the best in others and look to make the best out of any situation. In recent times I must admit that my confidence has been shaken. And if my confidence is shaken, I shudder to think what might be happening to others.

Where to start? Well, I have always thought that the Supreme Court would be the great protector of our liberties even though there have been instances in the past where the justices' reasoning was open to question. Never before was it as bad as now. The original Roe v Wade decision settled for the most part the nightmare that women in our country had faced over their reproductive health care decisions. To return to a patchwork of laws across the states, back-alley abortions, to carrying a fetus that is the result of incest or rape, and to ignore the health of the woman are unconscionable acts to exist at all much less with government sanction!

The idea that the Court should follow some originalist theory is to close your eyes to the world around you and write your opinions as though you are living in the eighteenth century. To leave such a universal decision to the states is to assign rights to individuals based on political boundaries or zip codes for which there is nothing in the Constitution that suggests that was the Founders' intent.

Likewise to decide gun-related cases based on eighteenth century lifestyles is ludicrous. The Founders recognized that without a standing army it may be necessary for citizens to own weapons for the national defense. To say that anyone should be able to own and carry guns that blow people to pieces is unconscionable. The Second Amendment relates to a "well-regulated militia" and not to everyone owning whatever weapon in whatever number they may individually choose.

I have sat in shock listening to the testimony of appointees of the former president about his active participation in seeking to overturn the results of an election. The peaceful transfer of power had always been a hallmark of American democracy. The former president should be charged with treason. He goaded his followers with lies about the election, although dozens of courts found his assertions to be lies, and he encouraged his supporters to attack the Capitol, the ultimate symbol of our democracy. These actions should not go unpunished.

At the state level there are members of the current administration who deny the connection between health and race, who are actively working to take resources from the public schools and give them to charter schools of their design, and who want to limit the role of education with assertions of critical race theory and other dubious claims to create fear in the electorate.

Ultimately, those who share the concerns I have expressed must work harder than ever to attract good candidates to run for public office, to support them in every way possible, and to get our friends to vote. An active electorate can revive confidence in our democracy.

Supreme Court Puts Virginians Safety at Risk

BY SEN. SCOTT SUROVELL

The U.S. Supreme Court on June 23 issued a disturbing decision on guns, the New York State Rifle & Pistol Assn. v. Bruen case, which clarified the scope of firearms rules declared by the Supreme Court in a previous case, D.C. v. Heller, decided in 2008. This is yet another disappointing decision from that court, like the one I wrote about last week, the Dobbs case, which would severely limit women's reproductive rights.

Before 2008, American courts interpreted the Second Amendment as authorizing states the freedom to regulate their militias – today's National Guard. In Heller, the Court invalidated the District of Columbia's handgun ban and requirement that rifles in the home be stored with trigger locks and unassembled. This was the first time the Court found such a right existed.

Today, New York requires every gun owner to obtain a license to own or possess a gun and to meet certain character standards. If a person wants to carry a concealed firearm outside the home, he or she has to demonstrate "good cause," which courts have found is "a special need for self-protection distinguishable from that of the general community," such as specific threats.

New York's concealed handgun ban dates to 1905 and it was one of only six states where concealed carry permits are discretionary. In Virginia, concealed carry permits must be issued unless you fall within one of 18 exclusions such as a felony conviction, mental illness or have specific misdemeanor convictions.

The NY Rifle case abandoned tests that had been settled on by the federal appellate courts and set aside the New York rule by creating a new test stipulating that all firearms rules must be "consistent with this Nation's historical tradition ... when the people adopted them" and consistent with the "public understanding" of the amendment.

This "historical tradition" test is preposterous. At the time our country was founded, it took eight to 10 seconds to put one bullet in a musket. The effective range of an 18th century musket was 50 to 100 meters. George Washington would not recognize today's firearms, you could not carry a pistol with 33 bullets in your pocket, and it is unlikely James Madison ever stuffed his musket rifle in his jacket while he perused grocery store aisles. Concealable guns did not exist.

The Court also discussed what kinds of "sensitive places" firearm regulation might be allowed including some "government buildings," such as courthouses, but it did not clarify the scope. Given this discussion, Virginia's rules prohibiting firearms on school property, in Richmond's Capitol Square or in state government buildings could be at issue.

In 2020, I helped pass several historic laws that could be at issue because * Universal background checks;

- ❖ "Red Flag" laws allowing police to seize guns from mentally unstable people in an emergency;
- ❖ Allowing only one handgun purchase per month; and
- ❖ Allowing localities to regulate firearms on government property and at government-permitted events.

I was especially proud to carry the local authority bill after several men from Hopewell, Virginia, carried AR-15 rifles around the Alexandria Farmers Market while my father and son tried to buy a baguette and ham biscuits. Since then, many Virginia localities have adopted ordinances prohibiting firearms in government centers, libraries, local parks and during parades, protests or other government-permitted events.

All of these ordinances are now at risk. Background checks, red flag laws and gun purchase limits did not exist in 1776 and I have no idea what the Supreme Court thinks the "historical record" says about these rules.

The Court has also created this new legal regime out of thin air. It effectively requires legislators and judges to become historians. History is often written by the victors, filled with the period's prejudices and interpretation is subject of debate. Law schools do not teach historical analysis and our system is wholly unprepared for this new "legal test" which is going to result in a legal feeding frenzy which is one reasons courts often avoid overruling precedents.

Confidence in the Supreme Court is at an all-time low today because today's Court operates more as a legislature instead of nine impartial jurists who follow the U.S. Constitution or law enacted by democratic legislatures.

As the Fairfax County School Board prepared to recognize LGBTQIA+ Pride Month 2022 in Fairfax County during its June 16 meeting at Luther Jackson Middle School in Falls Church, what should have been a joyful FCPS Pride rally outside the school instead illustrated conflict and divide.

Shortly after 6:30 p.m. and before the school board presentation, FCPS Pride and LGBTQIA+ students, staff, families, supporters, and members of allied organizations, held their celebratory rally outside the school.

The LGBTQIA+ Pride Month Recognition reads: "In the spirit of One Fairfax, the Fairfax County School Board urges all to respect and honor our diverse community and to build a culture of inclusivity and equity, not only during LGBTQIA+ Pride Month but throughout the entire year as well ... The urgency of its charge [is] to foster a responsive, caring, and inclusive culture where all feel valued, supported, and hopeful, and [to] advance policies that seek to protect LGBTQIA+ students and staff."

At 5:30 p.m. and continuing through the time that FCPS Pride rallied, a counter protest was also taking place.

Members of the Family Research Council and others gathered outside the school near the street's sidewalk. Individuals distributed information by the Family Foundation and carried signage by the Foundation and Stand Up Virginia.

At the counter-rally, speaker Sebastian Gorka said, "My effort is to stop the insanity and protect our children from the transgender extremists." Gorka is former deputy assistant to President Donald Trump (2017), and appeared in the media as a spokesman for the Trump administration. "The correct use of pronouns in a transgender environment is just one aspect of a much deeper, invidious, and, I would say, diabolical scheme. The transgender movement in America today is evil."

Retired FCPS teacher Robert Rigby, co-chair of FCPS Pride, called it, "A disturbingly grotesque counter-rally. "Individuals harassed the young FCPS Pride children and their parents, approaching within inches of a child's face; after being encouraged to move further away, they continued to talk about burning people at the stake," Rigby said.

Speaker Stephanie Lundquist-Arora said she objects to the Student Rights & Responsibilities document regarding the misgendering and deadnaming of students. "It is a violation of the First Amendment rights," she said.

Deadnaming refers to calling a transgender person by a name they have asked people not to use.

The school board also adopted the Students Rights and Responsibilities that evening in its annual review. The changes reflected stakeholder engagement by staff, students, families, community members, advisory committees, independent parent and teacher organizations, legislative updates, and the proposed Trust Policy, staff said.

The SR&R is "a work in progress... It is not perfect," said Karen Keys-Gamara, school board representative at large, during the June 16 meeting. The Student Rights and Responsibilities document undergoes review and approval by the school board annually.

Keys-Gamara highlighted some changes, including cell phone use and some mandatory reporting to law enforcement would require ongoing advocacy.

"And we clarified protections for student identities that allow our students to feel that they will not experience reprisal because of their identity," said Keys-Gamara. The new policy removes the phrase "intentionally or not" from the definition of deadnaming, "deliberately or accidentally" from the definition of misgendering, and adds the term "malicious" to the glossary. Malicious outing extends to citizenship or national origin, immigration status, and malicious removal of religious garb.

Keynote speaker Avril Haines, Director of National Intelligence and the first woman to lead the U.S. intelligence community, congratulated America's newest citizens on reaching the final step in the naturalization process. "I suspect you'll remember this occasion for the rest of your lives. I am truly honored to be among those bearing witness and to celebrate your joining us as fellow Americans," Haines said.

Haines said the community center setting struck her as the perfect place for the ceremony because the new citizens were, at that moment, truly joining the U.S. community. She asked, "What better place to do so than in the State of Virginia, where Thomas Jefferson, the primary author of the Declaration of Independence, lived, and on the very weekend that we celebrate the 246th anniversary of its adoption?"

Haines's grandparents were immigrants. Their stories about how they got here were extraordinary and different, just as true for the 15 new citizens seated before her. They too were equally passionate about becoming citizens of the United States.

"They recognize that we were not perfect. They were enthralled by a government that vests power in the people, and they understood that the Constitution to which you have now sworn allegiance confers both rights and duties to those who are bound by it. And much like you, my grandparents didn't look alike ... didn't worship the same, and their journeys were remarkable," Haines said. Each new citizen had an incredible story to tell, and now their story is part of our country's story. They would weave their accomplishments and experiences into the larger story of our nation. Haines told the new citizens that the U.S. needs them as much as they need the U.S.

"I don't want to sugarcoat it. Being an American, that is, being a citizen in a democratic government, is hard. You have to get involved in order to ensure that we live up your spirit. American citizens represent a host of ethnic, social, racial, sexual orientations, religions, agents, and geographies, and our nation is stronger for it... "Congratulations to each of you, my fellow citizens," Haines said.

After the ceremony, Mercury Payton, Vienna town manager, said that the naturalization ceremony was a reminder of how great it is that we have a nation where people from around the world want to call this country their home. It is "because of the liberties guaranteed by our U.S. constitution, which is full of hope, promise, and opportunity," Peyton said.

WELLBEING

Preventing Teen Summer Suicide

What to look for and where to go for help.

By MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Sleepaway camp, trips to the beach or marathon video gaming sessions are some of the hallmarks of summer for many teens. For those who struggle with anxiety, depression and suicidal ideations, this time of year can mean a loss of mental health resources and monitoring by school psychologists, guidance counselors and teachers.

“[Summer] can sever important linkages for children and families that are reliant on schools for social work support,” added Kurt Larrick, Assistant Director, Arlington County Department of Human Services.

“Though suicide happens in all age groups, it is the ... 2nd leading cause of death for youth [between] 10-14,” added Lisa Jackson-Cherry, Ph.D., who is Professor and Director, School of Counseling at Marymount University, and co-author of the book, “Crisis Assessment, Intervention, and Prevention.”

While families with health insurance have access to a variety of resources, local health departments want parents and caregivers to know that there is free or low-cost mental health assistance as well as the warning signs that such intervention might be needed.

“At my agency, the DHS Children’s Behavioral Healthcare Bureau provides a wide range of services to children and their families experiencing mental health and substance use issues,” said Larrick. “We focus mostly on youth from low-income and uninsured households whose needs cannot be met elsewhere and who do not have alternative resources.”

Local health departments offer mental health assistance to teens, parents are caregivers. “Our agency has counselors, workshops, trainings and other resources to help reduce youth suicide and substance use,” said Lisa Flowers, Director of Communications and Public Information Officer, Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board.

In addition to knowing that there are resources for mental health services, parents should be aware of the signs that a child needs help, advises Stephanie Will, LCPC, Mental Health Services Program Manager, Montgomery College.

“Adults should be looking out for signs of withdrawing from loved ones and usual interests, feelings of hopelessness and helplessness, engaging in risky behaviors like substance abuse, unsafe sex, driving too fast, acting out, giving away prized possessions, and saying goodbye through notes, texts, or social media posts,” said Will. “Other signs to look for include self-harming behaviors like cutting or burning their skin and significant changes in mood. Most importantly if someone tells you they are thinking about suicide, believe them and get them help.”

“There is not one specific profile or checklist of a suicidal individual,” added Jackson-Cherry. “Some mental health concerns that may increase suicidal risk are a history of mood disorder, including bipolar and major depressive disorder; anxiety, schizophrenia, eating disordered behaviors, and substance use.”

Create an environment that can mitigate some of the mental health issues that lead to suicide include several tools, advises Jackson-Cherry. “It is also important to know that there are protective factors that include a strong family and social support system, access to resources, sense of belonging and acceptance, sense of purpose, hopefulness, ability to problem solve and work through prior conflicts.”

Be sure any suicidal person does not have access to firearms.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, in 2020 suicide was the second leading cause of death among individuals between the ages of 10-14 and 25-34, the third leading cause of death among individuals between the ages of 15-24, and the fourth leading cause of death among individuals between the ages of 35 and 44.

In 2020, there were nearly two times as many suicides (45,979) in the United States as there were homicides (24,576). In 2020, firearms were the most common method used in suicide deaths in the United States, accounting for over half of all suicide deaths (24,292).

Suicide is the second leading cause of death for youth ages 10-14.

Progressively More Irritating

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Recently, after years of radio and television advertising/sponsorships, I blinked. I switched from one frequently advertised auto insurer to another. And sure enough, there was savings to be had. More than enough in fact to compensate me for the time spent on the phone comparing policies, provisions, premiums, et cetera. Every month when I make my new payment, I feel the joy. The joy being that I saved so much money that I was nearly able to pay for my new homeowner's policy without increasing the cash flowing out.

Part of the inducement to make the change was the prospect of additional savings in a few months. That inducement by way of a device to be installed in my car/under the driver's dash, which measures - presumably, my driving tendencies (speed, acceleration, aggressive stops and so forth) in some algorithmic way to evaluate the driver's actual risk to the insurer. On paper, as a careful between-the-lines driver, I saw no downside (actually, I'm not sure if my rates can increase if my driving fails to match expectations) so I agreed and have installed the devices in both our cars. I suppose I'll know in six months if there is damage yet to be done. I kind of remember a timeline but can't recall if there were any potential rate-type consequences. No matter, overall, it sounded reasonable, and the savings were enticing so the change was made.

Off paper, there have been consequences, and they have nothing to do with price. They have to do with people. One of those consequences involves my wife, Dina and the other involves me (actually, they both involve me). The part which specifically involves my wife is the part of the device that beeps three times if it doesn't like the stopping speed/braking pressure. The beeping serves as a friendly reminder to the driver to moderate some aggressive tendencies and to drive more defensively. The beeping also serves to bring attention to the passenger - usually my wife, Dina, of my driving skills or lack thereof - according to her, and therein lies the problem. What was once unseen/unnoticed/lost in the shuffle of every day traffic has now become front and center/in my wife's face, and in turn in my ear and as a result, has now become the bane of our driving togetherness. That damn beeping is interfering with our driving compatibility - which was never great to begin with, is now worse than ever. Previously, it had more to do with getting lost and my having a poor sense of direction than it did with yours truly stopping short or accelerating through a yellow light. Now my driving indiscretions - which I didn't really think I had, have been laid bare not simply to me, but to my wife. And for those of you who share regular time in your vehicles with a significant other with whom you've already shared a significant amount of time/life together, there might be a slight risk of too much of good thing is not a good thing anymore.

The emotional issue aside, I wonder if there will be rate consequences when my new rate is renewed after this initial six-month trial-type interval has ended. Will that new rate be based on actual real-time data, or will it continue be on than favorable presumptions/lower rate which enticed me to change carriers in the first place? I suppose I can always switch to yet another carrier if there are rate consequences. There's certainly enough of them around and one insurer's experiences are different than another's so my past indiscretion might not be so obvious. But for me, the real problem isn't the insurer, it's the passenger.
