Firefighters & Friends to the Rescue

Hundreds of families come to Charles Houston Recreation Center to get ready for the first day of school next Monday.

For firefighters & Friends to the Rescue, ARHA and HRP Group gathered backpacks, school supplies and more for students whose families would not have the resources to get what they need for school, which starts on Monday, Aug. 19.

“We gave away [more than 1,000] backpacks with supplies, over 200 pair of new sneakers and over 900 books,” said former school board member and retired firefighter Willie Bailey, who started Firefighters and Friends to the Rescue 26 years ago.

“As someone that did not always have the needed items for the start of school year, it’s an honor and a blessing to be a part of this worthy cause. It goes without saying that without the support of our sponsors this would not have been possible.”

Amelia Alcivar is head of corporate affairs for HRP Group, which is the firm that is redeveloping the power plant in Old Town North, and one of the event’s sponsors. “Today we’re out with our community partners here in Alexandria helping get local kids ready for school.”

Gaynelle Diaz, director of resident services at ARHA, said, “We are providing backpacks and school supplies and sneakers for kids to get them ready to go back to school so they can be prepared and ready to start the year off strong.”

Bailey took a few minutes to explain how Firefighters and Friends to the Rescue got its start.

“As a firefighter, we were running calls on Richmond Highway in the 90s during the holidays, and we could see these kids didn’t have anything.

“As a firefighter, we were running calls on Richmond Highway in the 90s during the holidays, and we could see these kids didn’t have anything. There were no Christmas trees or gifts or anything like that. So we started collecting toys. At different fire stations we raised some $2000 the first year and went and bought some toys and took them to the kids that didn’t have anything.

“Now 20-some years later we’re giving out thousands of toys every Christmas, we’re giving out [thousands of] backpacks with school supplies, and [will give out] a total of about 4,000 brand new coats to needy families.”

To cover the costs of backpacks and school supplies, plus coats, plus toys, Firefighters and Friends must raise $150,000-160,000 each year. Bailey said donating monetarily helps the most.

School Zone Speed Cameras Back in Effect
Starting Aug. 19

The City of Alexandria will resume enforcement of school zone speed cameras beginning August 19, 2024, the first day of school for Alexandria City Public Schools. These cameras will start automatically issuing tickets to drivers who speed in school zones. The cameras are located at the following places:

- Francis Hammond Middle School (Seminary Road, between Kenmore Avenue and North Jordan Street)
- John Adams Elementary School and Ferdinand T. Day Elementary School (North Beauregard Street, between North Highview Lane and Reading Avenue)
- George Washington Middle School (Mount Vernon Avenue, between Braddock Road and Luray Avenue)

Speed cameras are active only during school zone hours, which are indicated by flashing signs. Drivers who are found to be in violation of the speed limit while the school zones are active will receive a $100 citation in the mail.

In 2020, the Commonwealth of Virginia passed a law authorizing speed cameras in school and work zones. Alexandria City Council passed a law authorizing speed cameras in active will receive a $100 citation in the mail.

More information about the school zone speed camera program can be found on the program webpage https://www.alexandriava.gov/traffic-safety/speed-camera-safety-program

Community-Centered Health Assessment

All residents are invited to participate in Alexandria Health Department’s 2024 Community Health Assessment, beginning with a kick-off event on Wednesday, Aug. 28 at Patrick Henry Recreation Center. This year-long assessment process examines a wide variety of health data and creates conversations with community members to understand their experiences. All Alexandrians must have the opportunity to thrive. Community conditions, like structural racism and all forms of discrimination, along with neighborhood factors such as housing, parks, and grocery stores impact Alexandrians’ health. Health data reflects these impacts, but the data alone does not tell the full story. The community assessment is your chance to weigh in on what health issues you experience, and what matters most.

Alexandria Health Department will host the 2024 Community Health Assessment Kick-Off Event on Wednesday, Aug. 28, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m., at Patrick Henry Recreation Center (4753 Taney Ave., Alexandria, VA 22304). Outdoor and indoor activities will be available for kids ages four and older.

Attendees will learn about the Community Health Assessment process, how it will impact the community, and ways to participate. Attendees will also hear how they can get involved with the Department of Community and Human Services’ Children and Youth Community Plan and Alexandria City Public Schools’ Strategic Plan.

The event is open to the public. Join in for a free boxed meal and activities for kids. Interpreters in Spanish, Amharic, and Dari will be available. Other language interpretation is available upon request in advance. Register online or call 703-244-5654.

The Community Health Assessment results will inform Alexandria’s next Community Health Improvement Plan. To review the last assessment, visit the Community Health Assessment & Improvement Plan website.

Alexandria Police Kill Armed Man Having Mental Health Crisis

Man in his 60s pronounced dead at the scene.

Source: Alexandria Police Press Release

On Monday, Aug. 12, 2024, Alexandria Police Officers responded at approximately 10:46 p.m. to a 911 call from a man asking police to check on the well-being of one of his co-workers. The caller said the co-worker had made very concerning statements about harming himself and advised the man was armed with at least two guns.

Officers, including those with specialized crisis intervention and negotiation training according to the police report, responded within three minutes, and located the man in his Maris Avenue apartment. Police said that the man exited his apartment into a common area stairwell while holding a gun. The police described the man as a white male in his 60s.

According to the report released by Alexandria police, the officers negotiated with the armed man for more than 35 minutes, while attempting to de-escalate the situation. Through the course of the negotiation, the officers pleaded with the man numerous times to drop his weapon. In response to what police described as a threatening act, at approximately 11:21 p.m., one APD officer discharged their service weapon, striking the man. The man was pronounced dead at the scene. No other weapons were discharged, including the man’s weapon.

Investigators are withholding the man’s name pending notification of next of kin.

The APD officer, a nine-year veteran and current member of the department’s Special Operations Team, has been placed on administrative leave while an investigation is being conducted by a regional Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT) comprised of investigators from other regional law enforcement agencies independent of APD.

The investigation will be conducted in two parts, according to police. First, CIRT will conduct a criminal use-of-force investigation. Then the APD Office of Professional Responsibility will conduct an administrative inquiry monitored by the Office of the Alexandria Independent Police Auditor and will coordinate a review of the results of the investigation with Alexandria’s Independent Police Review Board.

The CIRT was established by Northern Virginia localities in 2021 to investigate critical incidents involving law enforcement officers. At the completion of its investigation, the CIRT may present evidence to the Commonwealth’s Attorney Office or other prosecuting authority for review. The Alexandria Independent Police Auditor will lead the case and will monitor the APD’s administrative investigation once the CIRT investigation has concluded.

Anyone with information is asked to call the APD non-emergency line at 703-746-4444.

Cure for Olympics Withdrawal

2024 Northern Virginia Senior Olympics offers 70 events.

The 2024 Northern Virginia Senior Olympics (NVSO) may not have breakdancing or pole vaulting or water polo, but we do have some running track and field, swimming, cycling, pickleball, bocce and so much more beginning Saturday, Sept. 14,” said Chair Royce Gentry.

“Hundreds of folks are registering as they cherish the chance of both indoor and outdoor events,” he said.

“We also award gold, silver and bronze medals after each event and encourage families to attend,” he said.

Online registration closes Thursday, Aug. 29 at www.nvso.us. The fee of $20 covers a multitude of events.

Participants must be 50 years of age by Dec. 31, 2024 and live in a sponsoring jurisdiction. “Last year we hit a record number of registrations and are prepared for even more this year,” said registration chair Herb Levitan.

“We have also added new events including a Sudoku pentathlon, a 100 yard individual medley to the swimming events, and badminton and bocce are returning this year,” said Levitan.

NVSO opens Saturday, Sept. 14 at the Thomas Jefferson Community Center in Arlington and closes Sunday, Sept. 29 after 10K and 20K cycling events. Throughout the two weeks of competition, events will take place at 26 different venues throughout Northern Virginia.

Sponsors of the NVSO are Arlington County, City of Alexandria, City of Fairfax, City of Falls Church, Loudoun County, Fairfax County, Fauquier County and Prince William County. NVSO is also supported by patrons including AARP Virginia, Adobe, Anthem Healthkeepers, Goodwin Home Health, Greenery by Erickson Senior Living, Johns Hopkins Health Plans, Sentara Health Plans, The Jefferson, The Virginian, The Woodlands and the Woodbine, Alexandria and Belknap Bay Rehabilitation & Healthcare Centers.

NVSO is a non-profit, 501 (c) 3 thus making donations tax deductible. Revenues received from registration, patrons and individual donations are used for equipment, judges, event officials, T-shirts for participants plus volunteers, graphics and flyers. There is no paid staff. Committee members include representatives and volunteers from the sponsoring jurisdictions.

Familiar Face on the Mount Vernon Trail is Moving On Up

GW Parkway Superintendent Charles Cuvelier got a well-deserved promotion.

By Mike Salmon
The Gazette

Through the years along the George Washington Memorial Parkway and Mount Vernon Bike Trail, Superintendent Charles Cuvelier has been there as the National Park Service representative, taking it all from the trail enthusiasts, families, bicyclists and the commuters who live along the George Washington Parkway.

He was recently selected to the Senior Executive Service and will join the National Park Service Washington Office senior leadership team as the Associate Director for Visitor and Resource Protection. In this position he will lead nine divisions that encompass nearly 30 national programs, including public health, law enforcement, fire and aviation, regulations and special park uses, as well as the United States Park Police.

He will continue as Park Superintendent through Aug. 24 and aid in the transition at which time Christine Smith will serve as the Acting Superintendent.

“My time at GWMP is transitioning, and I’d like to share this with you. I want to extend my sincere gratitude for the opportunity to work with you and your organization. Park partnerships are essential for achieving shared vision and goals, and your efforts provide direct benefits to park visitors for which we are very grateful. Together, we have realized many priorities and actions outlined in the GWMP handbook, enhancing our stewardship of the park,” he said.

Cuvelier has been with the National Park Service for 32 years and since 2019 he has served as the Superintendent of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, managing a workforce of over 100 employees. Under Charles’s stewardship, the George Washington Memorial Parkway has hosted over 7 million visitors annually to notable sites including the Mount Vernon Trail, Theodore Roosevelt Island, Dye Marsh Wildlife Preserve, Lyndon Baines Johnson Memorial Grove, Lady Bird Johnson Park, Arlington House (the Robert E. Lee Memorial), the U.S. Marine Corps War Memorial, Glen Echo Park, Clara Barton National Historic Site, and Great Falls Park, the NPS said. With the NPS, he has also worked at Sequoia Canyon, Kings Canyon, Yosemite, the Natchez Trace, and Great Smoky Mountains.

Christine Smith, an Alexandria resident, will be taking over temporarily while the job is announced through the Federal government channels. Smith worked with Cuvelier through the years. “He absolutely earned it,” she said.

The Alexandria Film Festival will run from Nov. 7-10 in several venues around Alexandria. It features high quality short and feature length films, documentaries, filmmaker panels and art presentations. This is the first in a series of articles focusing on the background, the process and a look at the movers and shakers who make it all happen.

Q: What inspired you to start the Alexandria Film Festival 18 years ago?

Patti North: Well, at the time I was a member of the Alexandria Commission for the Arts. I had always loved movies since I was a child. I realized it was the time of DVDs; a digital revolution was happening and it was going to be big. I thought there is a whole thing under our radar and we are promoting things from the Renaissance. At the time Alexandria had a number of Ethnic festivals and I thought we could put them together in an international film festival. It worked. We did get together but they didn't give up their individual festivals.

Q: What was it like the first year?

North: The first year we had fewer than 20 film entries but we had some significant entries. One of the films by local filmmakers was nominated for an Oscar. It was about a music festival in Uganda and the devastation of the participants before then. One girl lost her parents who were slaughtered. She ran into the jungle and when she returned to her village she found her mother's head in a cooking pot. The music festival became a metaphor for their survival. The first year we held the festival in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office which was new and had audio/visual equipment. It was good and bad. It wasn't set up for film and the location was buried and a challenge to get there.

Q: What unexpected things have happened along the road?

North: Well, Covid was unexpected but it had some dividends. We had to do two years virtual watching on the computer. But a new platform was rising up, and we had to figure out what to do. None of us is very technical but we got the ability to offer pop up films anytime and we have done that. In person is best but it doesn't mean we shouldn't be open. Last year we had a power outage so the films had to be rescheduled until later in the day until we could solve the problem. I had eaten at a restaurant across the street and parked my car in a zoned area. When I finally left at 1 am, I found my car had been towed. It cost me $265 to get it back. One thing I didn't expect was my new collaboration with the maestro of the Alexandria Symphony. We invited filmmakers to submit a film that would be accompanied with an orchestral piece played by the symphony. Seeing a film played in perfect synchronization — people couldn't believe it.

Q: What is the incentive for film makers to appear in the Alexandria Festival?

North: One of the reasons film festivals exist is to serve as a bridge between the film maker and getting noticed by the distributor. If you win an award you are not an unknown quantity anymore. We give awards at the end of the Festival in a number of different categories including Best of Festival, Best Foreign Language, Best Audience and Best Documentary Short. We don't have any overhead with the Alexandria Film Festival since all volunteers are unpaid, and I work out of my home so we are able to keep the entry fees modest although running a festival is expensive so they aren't cheap. Also we have a good professional reputation and the filmmakers know we aren't going to take advantage of them. And filmmakers like to come here.
A little-nurtured sign of summer’s end and the approaching fall is the gathering of large white birds; great egrets, in areas like Hunting Creek’s marshland and in wetlands like Dyke Marsh, Huntley Meadows Park and Manassas Park. “This is a phenomenon known as post-breeding dispersal,” explains veteran birder Larry Cartwright. “Fledged young and adults depart the breeding grounds and forage in wetlands, rivers and lakes, places with food abundance. This can last for a month or more starting generally in August until birds depart for their wintering areas.”

In Northern Virginia, great egrets, which can number well above 100 at times, are dispersing now. Cartwright notes, and can be seen locally “in the past several years we have even seen American flamingos dispersing from their Gulf Coast breeding grounds and documented on the Hunting Creek marshland.”

In recent weeks, locals have delighted in some rare sightings for Northern Virginia. Several people have spotted American avocets, a blue-gray wading bird, in Dyke Marsh and nearby. These are regionally rare charadriiformes more common near an ocean. They have long legs, black-and-white bodies, many heads and necks and distinctive upswept heads that they stretch back and forth to wax interments.

On July 22, Russell Jones saw several glossy ibises near the Potomac River. Glossy Ibis, more common near the Atlantic coast, are long-legged wading birds with downy heads and necks and rusty heads and necks and distinctive, rust-colored bills, common near a ocean. They too disperse after the nesting season and forage in wetlands and marshlands. In a strutting light, the strutting nature, emerald, bronze and violet hues glisten. In 2023, numerous splendid cut-throat herons, and non-birders. These can last for a month or more starting generally in August until birds depart for their wintering areas.”

Great egrets often fish in groups. Great egrets like these 40 gather on these old marina pilings on the Potomac River south of Old Town Alexandria every year. Long-legged, Wading Birds
Wading birds typically have long legs, long necks and long bills. They wade in shallow water foraging for fish, frogs and other small aquatic animals. Shorebirds of varying sizes are also considered to be waders.

Great egrets are white birds around 37 inches tall that typically stand still waiting for prey to pass by. “Then, with startling speed, the egrets strike with a jab of their long neck and bill,” says Cornell University’s All about Birds. They have an S-shaped neck and dagger-like bill. Another regioinally common long-legged wading bird with an S-shaped neck is the great blue heron, a tall blue-gray bird that often minces motionless scanning for prey or moves with long, deliberate steps. Great blues also make lightning-fast strikes to grab a fish or other food. These birds occur from the north coast of South America to the south coast of Alaska.

Mason Neck State Park has a heron rookery where birds come together in a colony to breed, rear and raise their young. They build clusters of stick nests high in trees which some joke are “bird-condoms.” Least bitterns and American bitterns are other wading bird species seen locally. The least bittern is chestnut brown and often dwarfed in its long neck as it pokes amid marchcamo. Bitterns present challenges to even experienced observers because if threatened, it camouflages itself into a stick-like pose and point their necks and bill downward. Virginia classifies the least bittern as a “species of great concern.”

The American bittern is also a stealthy forager, often with a hunched posture. “There are relatively few Virginia occurrences during the breeding season,” says Sergio Harding, a conservation bird biologist for the state. “I would characterize it as rare, but Virginia is toward the southern end of its breeding range, so I would not consider it imperiled. We just don’t have many of them breeding here because we are at the edge of its range. I believe they see more numerous during the winter and would call them uncommon during that season, but again, not imperiled, as Virginia is toward the northern end of its wintering range.”

Other long-legged wading birds include other egrets, herons, cranes and storks. All live near water.

Great blue heron black cranes and snowy egrets, night herons, American bitterns and great egrets. Others seen less frequently include the least bittern, snowy egret, tricolored heron, black-crowned night heron and white ibis.

The Mason Neck peninsula also has some large wading birds, including great blue herons: year round; green herons, least bitterns and great egrets in the summer; and snowy egrets, American bitterns and black-crowned night - herons in spring and fall migration. Dyke Marsh and the Hunning Creek embayment’s mudflats are hotspots for many wading birds. From the bridge over the creek’s mouth, people also spot smaller waders like sandpipers and yellowlegs. Because many wading birds are large, up to five feet tall, they are relatively easy to see if you know where to look.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 25
Life in Alexandria’s Civil War Prisons Lecture. 7 p.m. At The Lyceum, 201 S. Washington Street, Alexandria. The Alexandria Historical Society is pleased to announce its upcoming lecture, “Life in Alexandria’s Civil War Prisons.” Local historian Madeline Peiferstein will present her research on the five military prisons of Alexandria during the Civil War. Her lecture will provide an in-depth look at life within these institutions for both Confederate and Union prisoners, examining how their presence disrupted the daily lives of Alexandria residents. Additionally, Madeline will explore the medical treatment of jailed soldiers and prisoners of war at hospitals such as Grovener Branch, which was the confis- cated Lee-Fendall House. Attendees will gain insight into first-hand accounts from individuals who experienced imprisonment within Alexandria’s city limits, from the earliest days of battle to the beginnings of Reconstruction. For more information, contact David Heby, Treasurer of the Alexandria Historical Society at davidheby@gmail.com or 703-869-0872.

Alexandria Film Festival

and spend a weekend in Alexandria hanging out with other film people and enjoying our restaurants and fun, interesting city. Frankly, other areas that host film festivals aren’t as interesting as Alexandria.

Q: What is your biggest worry?
North: At this time of the year, I try to go to sleep. This is a huge logistical nightmare. You have to have all of your ducks in a row and things have a chain reaction. You can't promote the films until they have been accepted. So many things are closely related.

The logistics of operating in multiple venues at the same time, organizing content and to do it all with unpaid volunteers is amazing. In the longer term, I worry and hope we can always retain the theater experience; it’s not the same as watching TV. I hope we can always retain the theater experience; it’s not the same as watching TV. I’m getting six for $9.95. I wouldn’t have considered running that errand if it were not for the whoopie pies at the other end.

Now was this comment from Dina a temporary lapse in her judgment or was it an early sign of older age? After all, we have been married since “before the flood,” as my late mother so often said. We’re not exactly spring chickens, we’re more like old goats. We pretty much have been there and done that in the relationship business. We don’t (or rather won’t) finish one another’s sentences (that would require listening attentively to what the other is saying), but we can, with reasonable confidence, list some of undeniable truths about each other. (If you think you’re going to list some of Dina’s undeniable truths; you’re crazy. I may be a slow learner, but I’m not stupid. I wouldn’t write that list with a 10-foot pen.)

She could write anything she wants about me. I’m an open book, especially, every week in this space. I’m not very complicated. I do, eat, say, joke and think the same things, over and over and over again. Some might say ad nauseam. I’d say more like a continuing opportunity. Dina, on the other hand is far more in tune with the real world than I am. She prefers variety in her life, except for me. I’m the exact opposite of variety. I am, to invoke an old “Firesign Theater” bit from the 70s: “I’m not simply ‘the same old place,’” “I’m the old same place.” Meaning, in this context anyway, I’m like Popeye the sailor man: “I say what I y’ams.” One of the great philosophers of the Baby Boomer generation.

Olive Oil never wondered if Popeye really liked spinach. He did, but would have muted something inevitable. (Have you seen the very old Popeye cartoons? He was always muttering something under his breath. Classic stuff.) This column is sort of what I was muttering under my breath after Dina suggested I buy myself a whoopie pin. Like I hadn’t already thought of it. Thought of it! I was already thinking where I was going to hide the whoopie pie. I then went over to the bakery where the line was far more in tune with the real world than I am. She prefers variety in her life, except for me. I’m the exact opposite of variety. I am, to invoke an old “Firesign Theater” bit from the 70s: “I’m not simply ‘the same old place,’” “I’m the old same place.” Meaning, in this context anyway, I’m like Popeye the sailor man: “I say what I y’ams.” One of the great philosophers of the Baby Boomer generation.

How long have we been married? Nearly 46 years, right? Yet, you felt the need to tell me, as an inducement to go to a Saturday-crowded local Farmer’s Market to buy two tomatoes and six ears of corn: “Why don’t you buy yourself a whoopie pie while you’re there.” Thanks, Dina. I never thought of that. If there ever was a sentence/suggestion that didn’t need to be uttered, it was that one: Got a whoopie pie? Are you serious! I’m getting six for $9.95. I wouldn’t have considered running that errand if it were not for the whoopie pies at the other end.

The busy Alexandria Film Festival box office

Q: How would you describe the film festival?
North: We feature more substantive material so we’re not likely to get Marvel submissions. The content is driven by what we like — social justice, equality, and opening the door on a little known part of the world. We aren’t a themed festival like environment for instance. Once you do that there is new material that you have to let go, and we don’t want to do that. We focus on things like the slave trade in Alexandria’s history, our city’s grandeur but also its disgrace. You have to look at the whole picture. We want to make people think and feel.
